Feda, who served as vice-president of the 16-member group during his third year of service on the board last school year, was elected by his colleagues at a re-organization meeting in Alexandria August 11. He succeeds superintendent Verdie Ellingson of Glencoe, who finished a four-year term on the board following the 1979-80 school year.

Elected vice president of the board for 1980-81 was Fred Switzer of Morris. Switzer, who represents Region 5-6A, is Superintendent of schools in Morris and will be in his third year of service on the board.

Tom Schaffer, Hastings, a state school boards association member on the board, was re-elected treasurer.

Dove Hunting Gains Support In Minnesota

Interest in establishing a season on mourning doves continues to gain support among Minnesota sportsmen, according to a survey conducted by the Minnesota fish and wildlife employees' association. Association president Jim Schneider of Rochester has released the results of a statewide mail survey to sportsmen's clubs concerning the establishment of a dove season. Eighty-eight per cent of the 39 clubs responding to the survey supported the season. Those clubs represented a total membership of over 5,900.

A proposal to establish a mourning dove hunting season has been introduced in the last two sessions of the legislature. Originally there was considerable opposition to the idea. However, as scientific information has become available on mourning dove ecology and management, support for the proposal has increased.

Initially, many citizens who enjoy doves as backyard birds felt their enjoyment of the birds and the abundance of the species would be threatened by holding a season. Research has shown, however, that the number of doves returning every spring for Minnesotans to enjoy would be essentially the same whether or not they are hunted in the fall. The fundamental interests of homeowners, birders, and hunters are therefore not in conflict as some people perceive.

Sportsmen did mention several concerns regarding a dove season: the state's trespass law should be strictly enforced to protect private property. Regulations should prohibit shooting at doves from resting on utility wires, and mourning dove abundance should also be regularly monitored by the Department of Natural Resources to ensure the welfare of the species.

Officials responding for the sportsmen's clubs felt the dove season would provide a challenging sport and an excellent opportunity for teaching hunter education to young people.

International snowmobile council (ISC), formed in 1973, is designed to provide a communication forum and a means of unifying snowmobilers behind programs to improve the sport.

TEEING OFF TO begin his 6-5 championship flight victory over Dave Vogel Sunday was Jay Moum, who won his fifth Thief River Falls city golf tournament title in the past ten years at the Thief River Country Club. Moum, a former Lincoln high school, Northland community college and Bemidji state university golfer, also won club titles in 1971, 1972, 1977 and 1979.

Middle River . . .

Experience, speed and size. Middle River has all three this fall and coach Eldon Sparby is looking forward to the 1980 football season, which starts Friday when the Skippers travel to Clearbrook.

"We have experience and the best overall size I've ever had in 10 years here," pointed out Sparby, whose junior-led 1979 team went 7-2. "It should be a very good year."

Middle River featured a high-power offense that ran up a bundle of points last year when the Skippers pounded Goodridge 40-16, Plummer 44-14 and Erskine 56-6. And returning to lead that offense are seniors Scott McKeever and Delray Ness, both beginning their third year in the Skippers' backfield. Ness is the quarterback. The speedy McKeever will be used as both a runningback and a receiver.

Also in the backfield is 250-pound junior fullback Steve Bengston, bothered by injuries during part of the 1979 season.

"Our biggest asset," revealed Sparby, "is our line. We've got more experience this year and we're bigger than we were last year."

The front line headliners include seniors Donavon Dahl, a 200-pounder, and Elroy Jesme, 180, along with junior Ryan Johnson, a 190-pounder beginning his third year of starting duty.

Other who might be attracting attention are seniors Eugene Kaml, a linebacker and wide receiver who was injured during most of 1979; Terry Beito, a 200-pound-plus lineman; and Harlan Olson, a 200-pound junior.

Middle River home opener will feature Gonvick Friday, Sept. 5.

Plummer . . . .

Exactly half of the 22-man Plummer squad that will open the 1980 season Friday at Erskine will be freshmen, reported coach Gary Brantl, meaning the Cardinals face a major stumbling block this fall — inexperience. They're also small.

"We're very young and very small," admitted Brantl. "It's definitely a rebuilding year. It's just going to take some time."

Senior co-captains Ken Fisher and Brad Rosten are both listed as quarterbacks on the Plummer roster, a position filled by Rosten a year ago. Top runningbacks are two sophomores: Dean Sletten and Kyle Gustafson.

"We have some potential in the backfield if we can develop a line," mentioned Brantl.

But at 160 pounds, senior Karl Sorenson, an end, is the Cardinals' heaviest player, underlying another major concern.

Plummer home opener will be Friday, Sept. 5, against Mentor. The Cardinals were 4-5 a year ago when they lost four straight to open the year but then took four of their final five starts.

DNR Says Large Frogs Should Not Be Taken

Recent surveys throughout the state indicate that the frog population not yet recovered from the massive die off that occurred in 1974, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

As a result, Minnesota's season for commercial taking of frogs of six inches or more in length will remain closed until further notice. The closure does not apply to smaller frogs used for bait purposes.

Although some general improvement in the total number of adult frogs counted in the sampling area is evident, said officials, their numbers do not yet approach the level that existed several years ago when commercial harvest was allowed.

Usually the large frogs are sought for school study material and medical research purposes and in normal years it is estimated that some 50 tons are gathered by frog dealers who sell them for such use.

Officials pointed out that the closure will not affect licensed anglers (and children under 16 years of age who do not require a license to fish) who may take, use, buy and sell for bait purposes only, an unlimited number of frogs during the period May 16, 1980 to March 31, 1981, inclusive, provided the overall maximum length of such frogs shall not exceed six inches.

Handicapped Are Aided By State DNR

Department of Natural Resources noted that persons with physical handicaps who enjoy the outdoors will find that the DNR has taken several measures to make it possible.

In 1977, the department received more than $500,000 in federal funds to create or remodel facilities at 40 state parks to provide accessibility for all persons including the handicapped and elderly.

Sanitation buildings, picnic tables, nature trails and parking areas are examples of the facilities that were modified or built to permit their use by those with physical handicaps.

A trail was built suitable for use by those in wheelchairs, the blind, and other physically handicapped persons. Braille was used to identify the various natural phenomena along the trail.

In addition, there are various state laws aimed at making it easier for the physically handicapped to enjoy hunting.

Local conservation officers can issue special permits to shoot or hunt from a standing vehicle to licensed hunters who are physically unable to walk.

At some state wildlife management areas where reservations are required to hunt from a goose blind, some blinds are designated for use by those with walking disabilities.

Officials said the department hopes to expand its facilities and find other ways to make outdoor recreation opportunities available to those with physical disabilities.

UMC Accepts Bids On New P.E. Complex

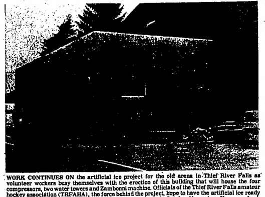
Contracts have been awarded for seeding and installation of fencing surrounding playing areas in the physical education and recreation complex under construction on the University of Minnesota — Crookston (UMC) campus. Announcement that the school has accepted low bids for the two projects was made by Bill Menzhuber, director UMC plant services and Marv Bachmeier, athletic director.

Subcontractor for seeding of approximately 25 acres of outdoor athletic fields is Agassiz Construction, of Crookston. Their low bid for this phase in the development of the outdoor complex was $60,900. Included in this agreement is a small amount of sodding as well, according to Menzhuber. College officials overseeing the total project expect the Crookston firm to complete its work on or about September 15, Menzhuber said.

The job of fencing various areas for athletic activities has been given to Dakota Fencing, a Fargo company. Dakota submitted a low bid of $37,900 for installation of a chain-link fence around the perimeter of the new football field, an inner fence to protect the track which will encircle the gridiron, a tall chain-link fence for two new tennis courts and backstops for three ball diamonds, including two softball fields. Menzhuber indicated that the fencing will be put in place sometime this fall, on a date to be determined in coordination with other contracts previously let.

The two recent awards raise the number of contracts for the $500,000 outdoor complex to a final figure of six.

Happiness Is The Times



WORK CONTINUES ON the artificial ice project for the old arena in Thief River Falls as volunteer workers busy themselves with the erection of this building that will house the four compressors, two water towers and Zambonni machine. Officials of the Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA), the force behind the project, hope to have the artificial ice ready in the old arena for the start of the 1980-81 skating season in October-November. However, fund-raising efforts are still $10,000 short of the $35,000 project cost. Additional funds for the project are being accepted by the TRFAHA at TG Sporting Goods.

City Approves Study Of Solid Waste Incineration

A discussion of solid waste incineration was one of several topics discussed by Thief River Falls city council members during their regular meeting last evening.

Roy Spaulding of Spaulding Engineering in St. Paul, appeared before council members with a short discussion and slide presentation of solid waste incineration studies which included his presentation of a solid waste feasibility study to council members.

He described the problem of solid waste disposal as an issue "facing all municipalities today."

Following the discussion, alderman Bill Penning introduced the resolution to have Spaulding Engineering submit their proposal to the city of Thief River Falls. A second resolution followed from this requesting Stewart and Walker Inc. to submit their proposal to the city of Thief River Falls.

Also discussed during last evening's meeting was the problem connected with Chief's Coulee — a primarily open drainage ditch in the northern part of Thief River Falls. The ditch, which has been described as a natural waterway, has been called to the attention of the attorney for the Red Lake Watershed District due to problems caused by parties depositing waste material into the ditch. Appearing before council members to discuss the problem were Merle Dagen, a farmer in the problem area, and Al Koop, county commissioner.

Following discussion, it was resolved to refer the matter to the soil conversation district for further study.

Further discussion during last evening's meeting involved the use of the Lincoln high school building, in which it was resolved that a joint meeting with the planning commission, city council, city engineer, finance officer, and the city clerk and attorney was necessary to further discuss the issue. Date was set for September 16 at 7 p.m.

Recommendations from the Pennington County Safety Council included the approval of a stop sign at the intersection of Crocker avenue and Greenwood street, following proper instruction from the street commissioner.

It was also approved, following the introduction of a resolution from alderman Milan Borsheim that trucks would no longer be permitted to park on the north side of third street in front of Hardee's due to the safety hazard caused by blocked visibility to those entering third street from Hardees.

Several meeting date changes and several dates were made as a result of the conflict created with the primary election September 9. The next regular city council meeting will be conducted September 8, and the League of Cities meeting in Newfolden will be conducted September 22 instead of September 23.

It was also noted that the parking assessment district hearing will be conducted September 22 at 7 p.m. And, the date of September 2 has been selected for the meeting with the Minnesota Housing and Finance Agency in Minneapolis to explore alternatives for the subsidized housing unit question which has been brought up at several meetings and which has created much public concern in the city of Thief River Falls.

Goodridge School District No. 561 today announced its policy for determining eligibility of children who may receive free and reduced price meals and free milk served under the National School Lunch, and Special Milk Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

FAMILY SIZE	ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR FREE MEALS AND FREE MILK			ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR REDUCED PRICE MEALS
	Annual	Monthly	Weekly	Annual	Monthly	Weekly
1	$ 5,230	$ 436	$ 101	$ 8,150	$ 679	$ 157
2	6,900	575	133	10,760	897	207
3	8,580	715	165	13,380	1,115	257
4	10,250	854	197	15,990	1,333	308
5	11,930	994	229	18,600	1,550	358
6	13,600	1,133	262	21,220	1,768	408
7	15,280	1,273	294	23,830	1,986	458
8	16,950	1,413	326	26,440	2,203	508
Each additional family member...	plus-1,680	plus-140	plus-32	plus-2,610	plus-218	plus-50

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs higher than 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available in the superintendent's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the parent or guardian that the information provided is true and correct.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, the applications will be reviewed and eligibility determined. If a family is dissatisfied with the ruling of the approving official, they may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis.

If they wish to make a formal appeal, they may make a request either orally or in writing to Mr. Langan, Superintendent, Goodridge, Phone number 378-4133 for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size income changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of school nutrition programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, or national origin.

The main office of the Goodridge School District No. 561 has a copy of the complete policy, which may be reviewed by any interested party.

Boats Used By Highway Crews In Bridge Work

If you see an orange truck pulling a boat behind it, and the truck is a Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) vehicle, there is nothing "fishy" about the boat's purpose.

Work crews need boats for bridge inspections, surveying, maintenance operations and safety, according to Commissioner Richard P. Braun.

"It's a tool, just like any other equipment we use," he said.

Although the boats are not used on a regular basis, crews need them at various times. In order to determine if the area being considered for road development is suitable, survey crews use the boats to determine water depths. They also use the boats to take samples from the river or lake bottom to test the stability and quality of the soil.

Bridge crews use the boats to cross a lake, channel or river when they stake the location of the piers, or bridge foundations.

Once the bridge is built, it is inspected annually and crews take boats out to get underneath the structure and check for rust and paint corrosion, and the condition of the piers.

"We also check for erosion of the riverbed around the piers. Such erosion could result in the collapse of the bridge," said Ron Olds, bridge construction and maintenance director.

Boats protect the safety of the construction and maintenance workers. The Occupational Safety and Health administration (OSHA) requires that Mn-DOT have a boat, equipped with life protection gear, underneath the bridge when a maintenance crew is working in case a worker falls from the structure into the water.

On Proposed Assessment

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that the City Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, September 16, 1980, in the Council Chambers of the Municipal Auditorium to pass upon the proposed assessment for the 1980 Street and Utility Improvements. Improvements consist of construction of storm sewer, water main, curb and gutter, and street surfacing, and concrete driveway pursuant to M.S.A. 429.011 to 429.111.

The area proposed to be assessed for such improvement is as follows: SEE EXHIBIT A ATTACHED.

The proposed assessment is on file for public inspection at the City Clerk's Office. 2-Paycheck Family Is Bitten By Taxes

AIR NATIONAL GUARD Airman Robert A. Kinsman, son of Kathryn A. Kinsman of Thief River Falls, has completed air force basic training at Lackland air force base, Texas. The airman, who is remaining at Lackland for specialized training in the security police fields, studied the air force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. Completion of this training earned Kinsman credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the community college of the air force.

Whoever said two can live as cheaply as one obviously did not foresee the two-paycheck marriage. With an estimated 60 per cent of married women working outside the home, two-income families are often caught off guard when their larger combined income increases their expenses — including taxes — and erodes some of the anticipated benefits.

One of the biggest problems affecting the two-paycheck family is the increased tax bite, says the Minnesota society of CPAs. The second paycheck is piled on top of the existing one, then taxed at the higher rate on the combind income.

For instance, John Black is a college professor at a university in the northeast. He was the sole wage earner while his children were young. In 1978 his income was $30,000. Then, in 1979, his wife Nancy obtained a part-time job earning $8,000. John, meanwhile, got a $2,000 raise. Their increased income precipitated additional expenses which consumed most of their additional $10,000 income.

Worse yet, John and Nancy had neglected to adjust their withholding tax from weekly paychecks to compensate for their higher tax bracket. John's withholding assumed a maximum tax rate of 32 per cent while Nancy's withholding was based on a maximum of 16 per cent. But when they filed a joint income tax return, Nancy's income added to John's was taxed at the 32 per cent margin from the first dollar and went up from there.

Actually, Nancy's income and John's raise brought their combined income into the 43 per cent marginal tax bracket. If they had planned ahead, their withholding would have reflected that. As an alternative, they could have laid aside additional money to cover the tax bill, CPAs say. But John and Nancy ended up borrowing to pay the additional $2,000 tax bill they had not anticipated.

John and Nancy would not have saved money filing separate federal tax returns. As married taxpayers filing separately their tax "rate" would be higher than that of two single taxpayers. According to CPAs, it is seldom economical for married people to file separate federal tax returns except when there have been unusually large expenses such as medical bills. In that case, the partner with the lower income might take fuller advantage of the three per cent exclusion on medical deductions.

Besides the higher tax bill, two-income families often increase spending for child care, commuting, clothing and food. With two incomes, there is twice the need for sound financial planning, CPAs say.

Two-paycheck families also need to adjust their retirement planning. Perhaps one will delay retirement to allow the other to continue working. Both spouses need to consider their social security benefits which are likely to be based on each one's lifetime earnings. They may consider reducing life insurance coverage if the surviving spouse could manage on one salary. Childless couples with two incomes may be able to acquire more appreciating assets at an earlier age. In that case, wise investment planning is called for.

Before you decide to become a two-paycheck family, CPAs advise that you draw up a financial plan to be certain you come out ahead. If the spouse returning to the work force can command only a modest income at the start, there may be need for economies in the family budget while the second wage earner is building a career.

Here's a procedure to help you take full advantage of two incomes: List additional income and figure out the tax bill (try it jointly and separately if one spouse can claim an extraordinary number of deductions). If child care credits will apply to the family, deduct these from the tax bill, and then consider what your additional income after taxes will be.

Match this against your additional expenses, allowing for meals away from home, clothing, transportation and household services. Expenses for clothing and a second car may be large at first, but should level off in time.

When you've listed income and expenses, see what the difference really is. You may come out even, or realize that it may require a year or more to make that second job financially worthwhile. Knowing in advance how you are likely to make out financially will help you control your spending, say CPAs. You may be able to find areas where you can cut expenses, so the additional paycheck will make a difference — and mean that two can (almost) live as cheaply as one on two paychecks.

MMA Offers Smoker Test At State Fair

Free tests to determine the amount of carbon monoxide in the body are being offered to smokers who visit the Minnesota Medical association (MMA) exhibit in the education building during the 1980 Minnesota state fair August 21 through September 1.

The project is sponsored by the MMA in cooperation with the Minnesota department of health (MDH) and will feature a Carboximeter which will be used to measure the body's carbon monoxide level when the smoker breathes into the device.

Tobacco smoke, a product of combustion, contains hundreds of chemical substances including nicotine tars and carbon monoxide, the MMA reports. Carbon monoxide reduces the oxygen carrying ability of the blood by driving oxygen from red blood cells. It has been estimated that as much as 10 per cent of the oxygen that would normally be carried by the red blood cells is driven out by the carbon monoxide generated by the tabacco smoke.

The non-smoker inhaling second-hand tobacco smoke can also experience increased heart rate and blood pressure, and elevated levels of carbon monoxide in the blood. This can be particularly dangerous for those individuals with heart and respiratory conditions, the MMA says.

Special emphasis is being directed toward the health consequences of smoking as it relates to pregnancy and infant health.

For the youth there are "Don't Smoke, Don't Choke, Don't Croak" balloons and buttons to encourage the youthful members of this group to make a decision not to smoke or to stop smoking.

Displays and literature present smoking prevention and cessation techniques. MMA physicians, staff and members of the MHD staff are present to assist fairgoers seeking information on the dangers of smoking and on smoking cessation.

You deserve to have a representative like LeRoy Stumpf. He is a hard working citizen of our district. He knows the problems of a farming community because he is a farmer. He knows the impact an unhealthy farm economy has on our communities.

Labor Day . . . the traditional day honoring the labor force of the nation. It's a legal holiday . . . when working people across the country take a one-day break on the first Monday in September.

Work has long been viewed as the cure for most of the troubles of the world. Honest and productive work, which one intends to get done, is a real blessing for humans. It keeps us moving forward and making our days on this earth worthwhile.

As the parable of the talents shows, God expects us to do something with our abilities. Draw fresh inspiration for your life and work in your house of worship this week.

May Apply For Coast Guard Academy Now

United States coast guard academy has announced that it is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as cadet, U.S. coast guard, class of 1985. Applications are being accepted from both men and women.

Appointments as coast guard cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional appointments or geographical quotas. Applications for appointment must be submitted to the Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, prior to December 15, 1980.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the college board scholastic aptitude test (SAT) or American college testing assessment (ACT) prior to or including the Dec. 13, 1980 administration for the ACT and the Dec. 6, 1980 administration for the SAT.

Competition for appointment as Cadet is based on the candidate's high school rank, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school extracurricular activities, community affairs and-or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and demonstrate proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

To qualify for the competition, an applicant must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1981. All applicants must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1981. Applicants must have completed three units in English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical and moral requirements.

Coast guard cadets obtain an undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. Academy curriculum offers nine majors which include electrical, civil, ocean and marine engineering; marine, mathematical and physical sciences; management and government.

Graduates of the academy are awarded a bachelor of science degree and are commissioned as ensigns in the United States coast guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

Coast guard performs essential humanitarian missions vital to the safety and saving of lives at sea. Under the auspices of the department of transportation, the coast guard establishes and coordinates search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintains advanced electronic and other aids to navigation scattered around the globe, operates the icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforces marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the coast guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

Applications and additional information may be obtained by writing to: Director of Admissions, United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Connecticut 06320.

FANCY THAT!

Who's the Red Baron? Today, he's twins. These Red Barons will be flying their biplanes to more than 50 fairs in the Northeast and Northwest this summer to promote the new frozen Red Baron pizza. While they're airborne, Red Baron ground crews will pass out coupons good for 50-cents off on the pizzas. Another 50 cents for each coupon will be donated to the youth groups by each Red Baron when he comes down to earth. He'll also be visiting stores and the media. Red Baron pizza is sold in grocery stores and manufactured by Red Baron Pizza Service, Marshall, Minnesota.

Who was the real Red Baron? The World War I German flying ace—Manfred Von Richthofen. He was dubbed the Red Baron because of the bright red plane he chose to fly as a challenge to opening airmen. When he was shot down over France in 1918, he was given a hero's burial by the Allies.

MAKING LIFE MORE FUN

Entertaining With More Dash Than Cash

Inflation makes many families forge new paths to old pleasures.

Soaring prices are a challenge to our ingenuity. Although we may not yet be able to stem inflation, we can—with some ingenuity—rise above it. Fortunately, there are ways to cut corners—and still have your cake!

Rather than cutting down—or cutting out—your entertaining, scout around for clever ways to change the substance of your gatherings without altering your style. Instead of orchestrating elaborate and expensive sit-down dinner parties, for instance, you may be able to play a merry tune with less expensive buffets and cocktail parties.

The simplest of fare assumes an aura of enviable elegance when presented with a special touch. Well served, even your most humble stew can emerge a regal ragout!

Wily hosts have even discovered a winsome substitute for wine or champagne: Champale, the brew that captures wine's sparkle. Its flavor does an extra favor for a clever chef.

Here for instance, is a Dutch treat that will stimulate palates and praise.

Cut a thin layer off the top of a four-pound Edam cheese. Scoop out the cheese, but discard the waxy top. Remove the cheese from the inside of the round, leaving a quarter of an inch thick edge. Grate the reserved cheese finely and mix with two sticks of butter until soft. Beat in half a cup of Extra Dry Champale. Fold two cups of finely chopped walnuts into the mixture and pile into the prepared Edam shell. Chill for an hour and serve with crackers or toast.

Four Day School Week?

A number of businesses around the country have gone to four-day work weeks, generally utilizing 10-hour days to provide a 40-hour work week. Now the same principle is being applied experimentally with education, according to the Hampton Times. The paper's editorial follows:

Over the years subjects in schools have changed, but basically most schools still are in session five hours a day, nine months a year.

Now, at least three school systems in Colorado are experimenting with a four-day week. To get the shorter week took special legislation. At least one of the superintendents is enthusiastic over the results, and not just in terms of energy savings. It seems a lot more work gets done.

Time is made up by beginning the day earlier and extending it in the afternoon. By going to the four-day week, one school system experienced a 500 kwh drop in power use in May compared with the previous five Mays, despite a 2,200 square foot addition last year. There are three schools and 330 pupils in the district. Savings in transportation were not calculated.

The Colorado Board of Education is now in the process of evaluating the innovative program. What the outcome will be is hard to predict. In school systems where most of the students are bussed to school a four-day school week may deserve a try. By having the school closed one day extra a week, energy costs could be reduced. Costs would also be cut by eliminating two bus trips, one each in the morning and afternoon, a week.

Teachers also liked the concept. Many times when delving into a subject with student enthusiasm increasing, class had to be halted. But with extended days there was longer class time for each subject.

Students, especially the older ones with jobs, also liked the four-day week. The extra day each week allowed students extra work time. And, with rapidly escalating college expenses, students may require the extra money.

The four-day school week is an idea that deserves further examination. It may be that there are advantages not yet considered. It may also be, that upon close scrutiny, the idea should be filed and brought forth again. But the four-day school week does present an interesting idea.

Media Playing Patsy

Following editorial is from the West Union (Iowa) Union:

The Carter administrtration last year made a conscious decision to opt for a recession in an effort to curb inflation. However, in spite of their best efforts the economy resisted and remained resilient through all of 1979 and the first few months of 1980.

Economists joined in the battle, freely predicting the recession which didn't come and didn't come until, of course, it finally did.

A number of factors contributed to creation of the recession, including such things as management of the money market which saw interest rates shoot up to a ridiculously high 20 per cent, crippling industrial expansion and the building industry.

Success in actually creating the recession, however, hinged in great part on the buying public's resistance to gas guzzling American-made cars, which crippled Detroit and the manufacturers in other parts of the country.

From the administration's standpoint the recession has been a measurable success. . . inflation has slowed appreciably.

From the standpoint of those hit by it, however, (and that is beginning to include more and more of us,) the recession is becoming a disaster, and it's high time to consider reversing it. So what needs to be done? First of all, the media should take a good, hard look at what it is doing to the economy. Recessions to a very real extent exist in the mind of the buyer. He may have a need for something and the money to pay for it, but he backs away, after it's been hammered into him that things are tough.

Television nightly laments that the economy is going to pot, radio echoes the cry and newspapers dig up the worst possible news to support the premise.

Here in Iowa, where the impact has been relatively light, it's difficult to find enough bad news, but the dailies have managed to paint a doleful picture anyway. Witness the Sunday Des Moines Register which managed to make things look tough in spite of the facts.

Unemployment they brayed, was clear up to 4.6 per cent from 3.0 per cent last year, not bothering to note that those figures are about half the national average.

Bank deposits were up and bank loans outstanding were down, a situation most would say was healthful, but the Register made even that good news look bad. It "reflected a decline in business lending activity," said they.

We hate to bite the hand that feeds us but isn't it time we in the media quit playing patsy to the administration?

NCAA Violations

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

It's too bad that some big-time coaches don't know when to keep their mouths shut.

"There's a lot worse things than fixing a kid's grades," declares Philadelphia Eagles football Coach Dick Vermeil after the announcement that five Pacific-10 conference teams have been eliminated from the Rose bowl race because of alleged academic violations.

"They fire and hire football coaches on the basis of wins and losses," the NFL coach continues. "They don't give tenure like with a chemistry teacher. If the chemistry teacher was evaluated on 12 weekends, on the basis of wins and losses, he'd probably find a way to make sure his students got a little better grades, too."

Arizona State university, the University of Oregon, Oregon State university, the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles — where Vermeil formerly coached — are ineligible for the 1980 conference championship and post-season football competition.

Reports indicate that the universities are being penalized for "violations of conference rules and standards in the areas of unearned credits, falsified transcripts and the unwarranted intrusion of athletic departments into the academic processes of the respective universities."

Sadly enough, outright cheating in collegiate sports has become so common that it does not really arouse public indignation. Mixed with the incredible and inane thirst for victory is the shrug of the shoulder attitude that "everybody's doing it, why shouldn't we?"

Veteran Minneapolis sportswriter Dick Cullum suggests that "cheating against NCAA regulations has become a too-common practice. The must-win pressure on coaches and the uneven enforcement by the NCAA present a constant temptation to the coaches . . . it has become a contest between the cheaters and the policemen."

Vermeil is right when he says that there are worse things than fixing grades — and many of those things are included in the charges. The fact that more serious crimes exist, however, does nothing to minimize the falsifying of grades, one of the lowest forms of deception. Faking grades cheats the athlete in question, too, for education is supposedly at least a part of his reason for being in college.

Most of us are guilty of placing too much emphasis on winning in all forms of sport, starting with small children. It is not surprising that some coaches are so overwhelmed with the hunger for victory and prestige that they stoop to virtually anything to obtain and keep the best players.

College football is big business in terms of income and potential earnings. It should not be allowed to become such a big business that it rides roughshod over the academic side. And certainly it can never condone falsified transcripts and unearned credits.

Borrowed Nonsense:

He: "I don't eat anything that isn't organic or anything that has been sprayed."

She: "Hey, that's terrific! How do you feel?

He: "Very hungry."

Youth is when you blame all your troubles on your parents. Maturity is when you learn that everything is the fault of the younger generation.

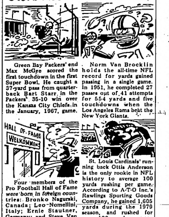
Warden to Prisoner: "Tell me, how long has it been since you've seen a woman?"

Prisoner: "Today makes 398 days, sir."

Warden: "Well, tomorrow that's going to change; it'll be 399 days."

Two men were discussing the coming election. "Who's your wife gonna vote for?" asked one. "I can assure you she'll vote exactly the same as I do," the second replied. "Well, who are you gonna vote for?" the first asked. "Well," the second admitted, "she hasn't decided yet."

GRIDIRON GRABBERS



Green Bay Packers' end Max McGee scored the first touchdown in the first Super Bowl. He caught a 37-yard pass from quarterback Bart Starr in the Packers' 35-10 win over the Kansas City Chiefs in the January, 1967, game.

Norm Van Brocklin holds the all-time NFL record for yards gained passing in a single game. In 1951, he completed 27 passes out of 41 attempts for 554 yards and five touchdowns when the Los Angeles Rams beat the New York Giants.

Four members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame were born in foreign countries: Bronko Nagurski, Canada; Leo Nomellini, Italy; Ernie Stautner, Germany; and Steve Van Buren, Honduras.

St. Louis Cardinals' running back Ottis Anderson is the only rookie in NFL history to average 100 yards rushing per game. According to A-T-O Inc.'s Rawlings Sporting Goods Company, he gained 1,605 yards during the 1979 season, and rushed for over 100 yards a game nine times, also an NFL record.

Loans

Ask how you can qualify for a low interest loan from Minnesota Housing Finance Agency and Northern State Bank.

With the coming summer months, you may be thinking about making some energy-conserving improvements on your home or that long needed addition to your home. If you qualify for an MHFA loan, you can make those changes, and pay low interest! The interest rate on an MHFA loan is from one to eight per cent depending on your income; you can't get much better than that!

To qualify: you must own the property you want to improve, you must be a reasonable credit risk, and have an annual adjust gross income not exceeding $16,000.

Here's how and where to apply: Decide what home improvements you wish to make. Get bids from the contractor(s) you have selected or cost estimates of materials needed.

Take this information to Northern State Bank, and they'll give you the appropriate forms to fill out, and answer any questions you might have.

Now is the time to make those improvements.

A good neighbor you can bank on!

WEATHER OR NOT

— How wet is fog? Well, fog may make you feel clammy and generally uncomfortable, but there isn't much water in fog at all. For example, fog that covers 105 square miles to a depth of 60 feet can be produced by a single pail of water!

— What animal carries his own umbrella? The fringed Australian lizard! He has a frill of skin around his neck which he uses as protection from enemies — not rain. Whenever he wants to put up a good defense and scare his foes away, he stands still and lets his umbrella of skin flare out around him.

To ward off your own foe — high energy costs — experts at the CertainTeed Home Institute recommend installing adequate amounts of fiber glass insulation. To plan your defense, write for the free booklet entitled "Insulation Facts." It's available from the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, Pa., 19482.

— If you're the type of person who scurries to a closet during thunderstorms, it might interest you to know that the lightning bolts which frighten you actually help ensure a well-stocked pantry.

Each year lightning produces 100 million tons of fertilizer by changing inert nitrogen from the air into nitric acid for the soil.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

When treasury secretary William Miller recently appeared before the House ways and means committee, he opposed any tax reduction this year and even refused to specify what tax proposals his administration might favor next year. Congressman Willis Gradison of Ohio was moved to ask Miller why, after four years, the treasury is still incapable of presenting Congress a tax proposal. Miller replied: "It would be like putting red meat in front of hungry dogs and saying, 'Sit'."

Miller's rather insulting put down illustrates why this administration has so often not enjoyed political support from a Democratic Congress. But, even more importantly, it proves that the administration really has no policy to deal with some of the most dangerous economic problems this nation has ever faced. To wit:

—The gross national product has just suffered its second worst single-quarter decline since the great depression;

—Taxes are rising by the greatest amount in history;

—Purchasing power of the average American family has taken its most precipitous plunge in more than 30 years.

Indeed, 1980 could go down in the history books as a unique moment when the American economy was hit by triple-double digits all in the same year—double digit inflation, double digit interest rates and double digit unemployment. Yet, the administration keeps insisting that now is not the right time to reduce taxes on the American people. Will there ever be an appropriate time?

For the better part of three and a half years, the administration opposed reasonable tax rate reductions under the guise of fighting inflation and during that same period the rate of inflation nearly tripled. Now inflation has ebbed, if ever so slightly, so the administration opposes tax reductions to prevent inflation from heading back up. Heads they win; tails we lose.

The administration has consistently fought tax reductions because, as Mr. Miller puts it, everyone understands that ". . . tax cuts increase deficits and deficits increase inflation." Strange then, isn't it, that while successfully heading off tax reduction, this administration has nevertheless piled up the biggest deficits in our history and increased the size of the federal budget more than 50 per cent above the level it took all our previous history to reach?

The ultimate irony is this: While trying to protect the public from the alleged dangers of tax reduction, the administration has succeeded in clobbering us with the worst of both worlds: The biggest tax increases in history coupled with rocketing rates of inflation.

Why not tell it like it really is? When tax rates are not cut in a period of inflation, taxes paid, by individuals and companies automatically rise, because inflation shoves individuals into higher tax brackets, overstates taxable corporate profits, and taxes phantom capital gains. The administration knows this, but it persists in misleading the media and the public by pretending we are actually facing a choice between a tax cut and no tax cut. In realty, the only choice is between a massive tax increase and a somewhat lesser tax increase.

In fact, rather than criticize as irresponsible all attempts to reduce this ruinous tax burden, the President should provide the American public with specific and straightforward answers to these questions:

How does he justify as responsible the nearly $90 billion tax increase on individuals and businesses in the next fiscal year alone?

How does he justify as responsible the over $500 billion tax increase on individuals and businesses between fiscal year 1980 and 1985?

How does he justify his unwillingness to allow American working people to keep more of the money they earn — money which rightfully belongs to them?

And, finally, how does his administration justify its total lack of faith in incentives and the American people themselves, when it was precisely our tradition of rewarding anyone willing to work, save and invest that made this country the most exciting and successful the world had ever known?

Many of us would like an answer.

Inflation Fighting IdeasIdeas

Whether you're a world traveler or never venture much further than the bank for your interest, a recent proposal by the nation's airline industry could mean good news for you.

Congress is currently considering a plan that may save you money.

The airlines and others are urging Congress to cut the tax on domestic tickets from eight percent to two percent and the tax on freight from five percent to three percent. They are also asking that the $3 international departure tax be reduced to $2. This could save air travelers more than $1.5 billion annually and would save money for many companies that depend on planes to get their goods or personnel from place to place. That could help fight inflation and improve our economy.

In 1970, Congress passed the Airport and Airways Development Act to ensure that the U.S. would continue to have the world's best airport and airway system. To finance the program—an Aviation Trust Fund was established.

Income from airline user taxes each year exceeds expenditures by hundreds of millions of dollars. The Aviation Trust Fund is currently running at a surplus of about $3.7 billion. The surplus is expected to reach $4 billion this year.

Congress, it seems, can reduce passenger and shipper taxes when extending the 1970 Airport and Airway Development Act this year, yet still provide increased expenditures necessary to meet its requirements.

Many people, concerned about their own costs and about our country's economy are expressing their opinions of this tax cut proposal to their senators and congressmen in Washington.

Clothing Care ALERT!

CREASES ARE A CUE TO QUALITY

With costs rising, consumers are becoming very sensitive to quality. But what is it?

Quality is easy to detect in products. You know a good steak when you bite into it. You know a good lawn mower when you run it over your grass. You know a good suit when you put it on—its lines, its feel.

But in services, quality is an expectation. What should you expect from your drycleaner? The International Fabricare Institute (IFI), the world-wide association of drycleaners and launderers, has established some guidelines for consumers to use when judging the services of their drycleaners, expectations that IFI-member cleaners are committed to fulfilling.

Use the IFI checklist when you bring in your clothing for cleaning.

A quality drycleaner will return garments to you with crisp, single creases; no wrinkles or puckers where the garment is contoured; no heavy seam, pocket or button impressions; no fabric shine, especially at zippers and pockets; flat, smooth pockets; even cuffs on trousers; evenly spaced pleats; buttons, hooks and trim intact; no puckers along seams, and finished linings.

In suit coats, jackets or outer coats, look for fine finishing of the collar and lapels. Done properly, the break of the lapel will be shaped and the collar will have been returned to its original contour so it lies flat around your neck.

When you have your clothing drycleaned, each item should be returned clean and restored as nearly as possible to its original shape and appearance—creases in proper places and wrinkles removed.

Fine finishing by your drycleaner will add seasons of wear to a wardrobe that represents a large investment. Quality care protects that investment.

JIM KREMER
A man with positive proposals for small businesses.
Small businesses are essential ingredients in thriving rural communities. Their needs differ from those experienced by businesses in urban areas. I think it is time we took some positive steps to help our rural small businesses.

I BELIEVE:
1. It is time we lessen the paper work and bureaucracy.
2. Workmen's Compensation rates must be changed.
3. We should change the legal definition for a small business or set up a specific category for rural small businesses.

Vote JIM KREMER for State Representative in the Sept. 9 DFL primary and put life back in our rural businesses.

19th Century Mood Not Prevalent As Nation Faces 2000

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Mood of self-doubt that seems to grip the United States as it moves toward the close of the 20th century stands in contrast to the self-confidence that swept the nation during the final decades of the 19th century and early 1900s.

That was an imperialistic, nationalistic age, spanning the Spanish-American war, Teddy Roosevelt's "big stick diplomacy" and the building of the Panama canal. Those were watershed years for American foreign policy as it shifted from a primarily protectionist role in the Western hemisphere to complex global alliances and involvements — the result of new U.S. trade ventures.

It was the gilded age when the great American fortunes in rails, metals, oil and stocks were amassed by such families as the Astors, Mellons, Rockefellers, Vanderbilts and Whitneys. With the resources set loose by industry and western expansion, these urban capitalists reshaped the nation's economic and cultural life.

In the vanguard of the cultural change were artists, architects, designers and draftsmen, who, between the 1870s and World War I, redefined American aesthetic tastes and styles. Forgotten for the most part now, they guided and elevated the sights of the bill-paying monied class, many of them just one generation removed from overalls and the shovel.

The legacy from these artists was a "renaissance" in culture, ranging from new museums of fine art to ubiquitous street sculpture that symbolized civic virtue and enterprise. They believed that America was the natural heir to the great European traditions — particularly that of the Italian renaissance in the 15th and 16th centuries — and felt that the renaissance creative spirit was being born again in the United States. Absorbing all the best from the past, the thinking went, American art would be great because it advanced the torch of traditional culture.

"The goal of this group was to place American art in the long tradition of art and culture and to establish critical standards for American works of art," says Richard N. Murray, director of the Birmingham museum of art. He was formerly with the Smithsonian's national collection of fine arts, where he collaborated on an exhibition about the period.

What exactly did this American renaissance produce? What survives? List is long and diverse — though not always appreciated by many present-day Americans who regard the period's highly ornamented architecture and art as bizarre relics. But many of the nation's cultural institutions and their first buildings were created then — libraries, museums and universities, among them the Boston public library and the Library of Congress, both elaborate, ornate structures rich in historical references and lavish with murals and sculpture.

City planning and slum clearance got underway at Washington, D.C.'s national mall area, Chicago's lake front and in San Francisco. Architecture schools were formed, the first at the Massachusetts institute of technology in 1865. Urban parks were designed. Elaborate, domed state capitol buildings went up. And memorials marking any number of occasions, from the rising sun to Abraham Lincoln's achievements, were constructed.

There was much more. Artists designed the currency of capitalism — gold pieces, the hundred dollar bill, the Lincoln penny, the liberty dime and the buffalo nickel. And urban palaces and summer "cottages" in an eclectic range of European styles lined fashionable avenues and resort drives. These were filled with magnificent furniture, paintings, sculpture and decorative arts shipped to America from abroad.

Search for new acquisitions apparently knew few bounds. When reproached for importing so many art treasures to decorate homes he designed, the architect Stanford White stated: "In the past, dominant nations had always plundered the works of their predecessors . . . America was taking a leading place among nations and had, therefore, the right to obtain art wherever she could."

Like its rise to power, the United States cultural growth took about a century to reach its stride. "Right after the revolution, many felt the country would take a lead in the arts since it was on the way politically," Larzer Ziff, professor of English at the University of Pennsylvania, recently told a Smithsonian resident associates seminar on the era. "But Charles Willson Peale had to convert his museum into a barn for curiosities, and others recycled theaters into penny arcades for melodrama performances. People simply distrusted the arts."

By 1876, at the nation's Centennial celebration in Philadelphia, an exhibition of American art drew an enthusiastic crowd. Yet the exhibit revealed that contemporary U.S. art lacked variety (most paintings were portraits or landscapes) and that many American artists had insufficient professional training.

Exposition led to the establishment of more art schools where the traditions of art could be taught and passed on. At the same time, young painters and sculptors were returning in the 1870s and '80s from studies at European centers. "Artists were becoming professional in the sense of learning and training," says Dr. Joshua C. Taylor, director of the Smithsonian's national collection of fine arts. "The bankers, lawyers and business men could relate to this — knowledge during the American renaissance was the key, but money turned the lock."

Besides looking to Europe for a sense of tradition, the artists reached into the past of America itself. At the 1876 fair, 18th-century portraits and other early paintings, furniture and art objects were displayed with pride. In fact, although Americans admired the products and themes of Europe's culture, they were ambivalent about embracing Europe totally, an attitude summed up by one leading renaissance figure, muralist John LaFarge. "We are not as they are — fixed in some tradition, and we can go where we choose."

Searching for the perfect symbol for America of the period — one that would express the idea of a youthful, moral and energetic nation — the artist fashioned the American Virgin. She could be found at all levels of the renaissance culture, from the Swift packing company's trade symbols to the languishing, drifting figures (usually drawn with wings) of the highest art.

Appearance of the White House also kept pace with current trends, which shifted from a historically eclectic look in the 1870s and '80s to scholarly correctness beginning in the 1890s. At 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Louis Comfort Tiffany, son of the jeweler, had installed stained glass decorations and tile floors for Chester Arthur in 1882. At Teddy Roosevelt's insistence 20 years later, this was all ripped out to re-create the neo-classical interiors of the original architecture.

But in sheer size and elaborateness, the Library of Congress overwhelmed the other "renaissance" buildings. It was — is — truly grand. High above the heads of mortal readers is a mural that sums up the way Americans were thinking about their role as inheritors of the past. "Progress of Civilization" begins with Egypt and its contribution to writing and progresses through 10 figures — all winged — representing the influences of Greece, Rome and on through France. The last figure, the United States, is the inheritor of the entire body of learning of the West.

Though the library and other structures endure, the renaissance concept itself faded with the approach of World War I. Because of its great expense alone, so elaborate an expression could not have survived, particularly in today's economically troubled times. More destructive, however, was its focus on the past and lack of accord with a society fascinated by technology and the promise of modernism. And yet, as historians now point out, the elegant survivors of the "American renaissance" are finding a new appreciation, admired for their craftsmanship, variety and visual richness.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Answers to homeowners' questions are given by J.B. Featherston, MAI, President of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, the nation's oldest appraisal organization, and the only one affiliated with the National Association of Realtors.

Question: Will money spent on energy efficiency — eg. insulation, storm windows, solar collectors add value to the sale of the home later?

Answer: First ask yourself if the expense will reduce your fuel costs enough to represent a reasonable payback period. There is no guarantee your home will go up in value as much as or more than the cost of the new energy saving features. An experienced appraiser can answer such questions. Many purchasers will pay more for an energy-efficient home.

MUDDY WATERS cascaded down the bank and into the Red Lake river northeast of St. Hilaire Friday following heavy rains in the area. Heavy rains in varying amounts fell throughout the area Friday morning and afternoon with several areas reporting more than five inches of rainfall. This water was coming from fields and ditches east of the river, bubbling through culverts nearly filled and rushing through grassy ditches where water had been rarely seen since the spring run-off.

Soil Survey Nears Completion . . .

Last Acre Ceremony Set September 11

Five-year project to soils map Pennington county is nearly complete. A "Last-Acre Ceremony" on September 11 at Oakland park in Thief River Falls will conclude the mapping for the 398,080-acre Pennington county soil survey.

People interested in coming to the last-acre ceremony of the Pennington county soil survey are welcome to attend. It will begin at 1 p.m. on September 11 at Oakland park, next to Oakland Park nursing home in Thief River Falls. Everyone is welcome.

The soil survey, which began in 1975, has been a cooperative effort of Pennington county, the Pennington county soil and water conservation district, Minnesota agricultural experiment station and the U.S. soil conservation service.

Soil scientists Rod Heschke, Jim Schulzetenberg and Mike Oja mapped the majority of the county along with help from other personnel.

"There are 52 different types of soils in Pennington county," said party leader Heschke. "We've used hydraulic and hand-operated tools to lift and examine the soils. It was a fairly long process, mapping the county at a rate of about 320 to 640 acres a day per person, but we're down to finalizing the county now", he stated.

"The main emphasis of our work now will be road checking the soil maps this fall," Heschke said, "and this winter we have a lot of work to do on completing the text of the report and developing interpretation tables. Although the soil mapping is done, we've still got lots of work finishing up and getting the text ready to go to the government printing office for publication. The text will be available for distribution in 1981," Heschke added.

"In the meantime," says Allan Gustafson, SCS district conservationist, "we can use the soil maps from the survey and provide any soil information people might need."

Gustafson expects the soil survey to be useful to farmers, homebuilders, realtors, engineers, state and county highway departments, local planning and zoning officials, and others involved in the use

NEW EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce is Jerry Sandstrom who came here from Grand Forks to take over the position vacated by the resignation of Norm Cruse. Cruse has taken a similar position with a chamber of commerce in Iowa. Sandstrom says one of his first priorities will be to pay a personal visit to every member of the organization, a practice which he hopes to be able to repeat at least annually in the future.

Courtesy Speed Check Offered On Wednesday

Courtesy speedometer check by radar will be provided by the Minnesota state patrol, Thief River Falls police department and Pennington county sheriff's department Wednesday from 3 to 7 p.m.

Persons who want their speedometers checked should report to the city sports arena parking lot during those hours. Checking will be done for informative purposes only, according to Cliff Mattson, safety officer for the Minnesota state patrol office located here.

Mattson said the check is being done as a result of numerous requests received from individuals from time to time. The check is for passenger cars and pickups only. The agencies will not be able to check motorcycles or large trucks.

DFL House Race Holds Interest For Primary

Primary election interest in this area next Tuesday, September 9, will center on the DFL side of the ballot where LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer and Jim Kremer of Thief River Falls are seeking general election candidacy for District 1B of the Minnesota house of representatives.

Interest centers there not only because both candidates have been actively campaigning but because it is the only real contest on the ballot. Stumpf is the endorsed candidate, having received endorsement over Kremer after a number of ballots at the DFL district endorsing convention.

Also on the DFL side of the ballot, endorsed candidate Gene Wenstrom is opposed by Russell Ellis for the party's endorsement as candidate for U.S. representative in congress. Only other DFL position is state senator from District 1 where Sen. Mary Hanson is unopposed.

On the Independent-Republican primary ballot all candidates are unopposed. Incumbent congressman Arlan Stangeland, state senate candidate Mark Skogerboe and state representative candidate Clyde Christensen have no opposition within their party.

Segment Added To 10-Ton Road Route System

A half mile segment of highway 32 at St. Hilaire has been added to the state-wide system of roads and streets authorized to carry 10-ton single axle loadings and 80,000 pounds total gross weight, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) commissioner Richard P. Braun announced.

The designation, effective August 29, has been added to service the grain elevator in St. Hilaire and involves a segment between Second street in St. Hilaire and Pennington county road 3.

Pennington county Engineer Arvid A. Olson has designated the following network of county roads to provide access to highway 59: East two miles on CSAH 3 from highway 32 to CSAH 17, north one mile on CSAH 17 to county road 57, then east 5½ miles to highway 59.

Monthly transportation permits will be required to haul 80,000 pounds on this emergency route. Permits cost $5 each.

Citizens Are Informed On $15 Million School Plan

With a bond election for $15 million to finance construction of a new high school and center school and update other buildings tentatively set for October 14, concerned citizens meeting with school officials Thursday evening were encouraged to use the next six weeks to bring the problem and solution to the public.

Ken Wiebolt, chairman of the board of education, outlined to the group of about 40 meeting in the Lincoln cafeteria some of the problems with buildings which the district faces. He noted the fire marshal's ordered closing of 1910 and 1919 portions of the school which severely restrict available classroom space.

Principal Frank Hamerlinck led a tour of the building which showed the limited space left following the sealing off of large parts of the building and how approximately $86,000 had been expended this summer to create makeshift classrooms out of shop areas in the former vocational section of the building.

Dr. John Seaverson was elected by the group to serve as chairman of a citizens' committee to provide information on the problem and the proposed new facilities to the public. He appointed Robert Poissant as finance chairman and asked several others present to work on an informational brochure and in publicity areas.

Wiebolt explained that the board has been considering the problem for some time and has recently come to several decisions, among which are the following:

(1) Expenditure of several million dollars at the existing Lincoln site for remodeling, repair, demolition and new construction would still leave the district with a 1981 addition to 1938 and 1956 buildings;

(2) A new high school should be constructed on land owned by the school district in the area of the vocational-technical institute northeast of the city (six sites were seriously considered before the decision was made);

(3) A 900-seat auditorium and a new vocational center school building should be included in the project at additional cost of approximately $2,250,000 (included in the $15 million total proposal).

"Our problem is not going to go away," Wiebolt emphasized to the group Thursday. "If we delay doing the job that we believe has to be done, all that will happen is that inflation will cause the cost to increase. At present rates, a year's delay would add well over a million dollars to the project due to inflation alone."

The board chairman also pointed out that the school district's bonded debt at present is only $840,000 while its debt limit is $32 million. Costs of maintenance, repairs, energy and related items have been high because of age and condition of buildings.

Perhaps the most important information — what the building project would mean in increased taxes to residents of the school district — was not available at the meeting. Wiebolt and Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools, explained that costs had been computed for a $13 million issue but the bonding firm was working up new figures based on the $15 million project. Those projections will be first presented to the board of education, then made available by the next meeting of the citizens' group this Thursday evening.

Proposed in the project is a two-story high school with 144,800 square feet of space, designed to accommodate 1,200 students in grades nine through 12. It would be a closed campus type school with students arriving in the morning and leaving in the afternoon unless dismissed under criteria set up for operation of the school.

The building would be located northeast of the existing vocational-technical institute in the area where softball fields are now located. Athletic fields and open space would separate the high school from the vocational school. The softball

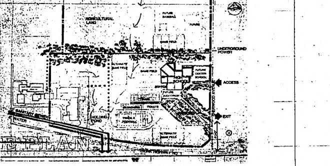
THIEF RIVER FALLS SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING of the proposed new Thief River Falls senior high school shows a two-story structure of masonry construction. This view would be looking toward the northwest. If present plans of the board of education are approved, the structure shown above would include a center school section added at the right of the photo and a 900-seat auditorium added at the left. Total project cost, including repair and remodeling of other school buildings in the district, would be $15 million.



SITE PLAN proposed for the new high school under consideration by School District 564 in Thief River Falls is outlined above. The proposed high school is shown at the right center of the drawing with the existing area vocational-technical institute outlined at the left. Areas shown as future auditorium and future center school are planned to be utilized in the original project as a result of recent school board action. The site, located in the northeast part of the city, is presently owned by the school district.

5 Concerts On Series Program

Five concerts have been selected for the 1980-81 season of the Thief River Falls concert association and the annual membership campaign is now underway. Once again, variety is a key to the association series.

The season opens Tuesday, October 7, with William and Louise Cheadles, a husband and wife piano team considered one of America's foremost piano duos.

Fans of musicals will look forward to "The Desert Song" to be staged Wednesday, November 9, by seven vocalists with piano accompaniment. Familiar melodies in this popular American musical are "Romance", "The Riffs Riding Song" and "The Desert Song".

Third concert of the series will be the Mercy River Boys, a gospel singing group which received a Grammy award nomination for the best gospel album of the year. This group, which has been featured with Mel Tillis, Johnny Rodriguez and Tom T. Hall, will perform Sunday, January 11.

Big band sounds of such greats as Glenn Miller, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Harry James, Count Basie, Artie Shaw, Woody Herman and others will be heard when the 17-piece Steve Wright band appears Friday, February 13. Hits to be played will include "In the Mood", "Marie", "Woodchoppers Ball" and "Moonlight Serenade".

Concluding concert on Tuesday, March 24, will be the Phoenix Boys choir, 25 young singers from the American southwest whose program ranges from the classics to folk and popular music.

Mrs. Pat Martin will again serve as membership chairman with Mrs. Gerry Stocks as co-chairman. They expect to have a group of 54 people assisting in the membership drive.

Again this year, admission to any of the concerts will be by season membership only. No individual concert admissions will be sold. Mem-

Hudson Bay Trip Creates Reality From School Dream

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Who ever said that a trip could not be made from the dam on the Red Lake river near the power plant in Thief River Falls to Hudson Bay in a 17-foot aluminum canoe?

Two ambitious young men from Thief River Falls, who were later met on their trip by two other voyageurs from Thief River Falls, made that excursion this summer.

Actually, Eric Thorsgard, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Thorsgard, and Tony Brosseau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Brosseau, left on the trip May 7 "from their back doors," they emphasized. Both young men live on the Thief river.

"Tony's a dreamer; he thought the trip up," claimed Jim Courneya, son of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Courneya of Thief River Falls, a member who later joined Brosseau and Thorsgard on their trip.

"I've been wanting to make a trip like this ever since high school," Eric said. And now they have made it.

"Since this was such a hard summer to get jobs and I knew I'd have to be going to summer school," we decided this would be a good time to go. I told Tony if he could get a canoe I'd go for sure and he did," Eric added.

The situation was a bit different for Jim. He knew he would have to quit his job if he went on the trip but he took that chance and at the last minute said, 'yes', he'd go along. He was fortunate enough to get his job back when he returned.

Dave Penning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Penning of Thief River Falls, and the fourth voyageur, was all set to go when Tony and Eric asked him.

"The trip was made in two parts," Eric explained. "Tony and I started out because we wanted to get the boring Red river part over with and save the other part for Dave and Jim."

The first part of the trip was made using a Manitoba road map, Eric said. "We just followed the shore. We knew there would be a lot of towns along the way so we didn't take many supplies with us."

When the two voyageurs got to Lake Winnipeg, the ice had just left. By the end of three weeks they had traveled part

HIGH WINDS of up to 75 miles per hour tore this plane loose from its moorings and sent it approximately 100 yards before it crashed into the Northern Eagle airways shop. The Bellanca Citabria two-place plane was a 1975 model with an estimated value of $14,500 and was owned by Northern Eagle. Considerable damage was also done to the building when the plane hit it. The damage occurred during the height of the wind and rain storm about 10:05 a.m. Friday. The Republic Airlines flight due to land here about that time had been held for half an hour in Bemidji to allow the storm to pass.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Reierson And Swanson Marriage Vows Spoken

Miss Cynthia Jane Reierson and Gregg Allen Swanson exchanged marriage vows at a recent afternoon ceremony at the Evangelical Covenant church in this city.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reierson, rural Thief River Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Swanson, Plummer.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony were Rev. Donald Peres and Rev. Roger Helgren. Helen Dahlstrom, an aunt of the bride, was the organist. She played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," as the bridesmaids entered, and accompanied the groom as he sang "Song for a Christian Wedding," as the bride was escorted to the altar by her parents. During the ceremony, Darwin Anderson, a friend of the couple, sang, "God, Woman and a Man," "My Tribute," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The chancel setting featured two black wrought-iron candelabra with white tapers, ferns and blue bows, matching the six sconce arrangements that graced the sides of the church. Acolytes were Carol Bjorsness, cousin of the bride, and Brad Swanson, brother of the groom. The wedding programs were distributed by Tammy Reierson and Ann Swanson, sisters of the bride and groom.

The bride was attired in a gown of white satapeau and Venice lace trimmed organza, styled in empire fashion with shepherdess sleeves and Queen Anne neckline. The A-line skirt with chapel-length train was edged with a self-fabric ruffle with delicate Venice lace trim. A headpiece of pearl trimmed lace held her waltz length mantilla of bridal illusion, edged with scalloped, silk Venice lace. She carried a cascade of yellow sweetheart roses, blue carnations, lilies of the valley, babies' breath and ivy.

Personal attendant was Kim Waale, Thief River Falls.

Ginny Shuka, Waukegan, Ill., attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Deb Swanson, Plummer, sister of the groom; Lori Lundin and Pattie Erickson, friends of the bride. Oakland Park Events Reviewed By Wendy Reller

"From year to year, we at Oakland Park Nursing Home, anxiously await the coming of summer with its picnics, county fairs, parades and outdoor activities. For the residents here, these events highlighted the calendar for the month of July," according to Wendy K. Reller, activities director.

The month began with a bridal shower for one of the recently married employees, Sandy Bergerson Peterson. The surprise shower, which was sponsored by the residents, included gift opening, socializing and refreshments.

The resident's monthly birthday party was hosted on July 15 by circle Three of the Evangelical Free church. Honored and the dates of their birth, were Ray Walch, July 4, 1923; Mable Swanson, July 11, 1902; Julia Skomedal, July 11, 1901 and Louise Aamodt, July 15, 1897.

Residents hosted a staff appreciation tea on July 17 attended by all Oakland Park employees. An elegant lunch was served and each employee was presented with a silk rose as an appreciation gift.

Through the assistance of many young volunteers from the community, a number of residents visited the Pennington County fair. Volunteers were from Jim Fisher's and Jim Hoks' Boy Scout troops, a Girl Scout troop and the 4-H club.

A number of residents also attended the Aquacade parade. They were assisted by several staff members, who were on a break from the daily routine, also enjoyed the parade.

Circle groups who visited, served lunches and provided residents with brief afternoon programs were, the Esther circle of the Holt Nazareth Lutheran church, and the Martha circle of Trinity Lutheran church.

Pastors conducting worship services were Jim Mattson of Zion; John Kleinwachter of St. Bernard's; Duaine Espeseth of Faith Lutheran Brethren; Frank Armstrong of First Baptist, and Ernest Dobkins of the Seventh Day Adventist church.

Sunday dinner guests were Eldon Larson, who dined with Ernest Erickson; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bredeson, who were guests of their mother, Florence Bredeson; Gary and Billie Sue Ellingson and son, who dined with their mother Olga Ellingson and Regina, Ruth and Gunder Legvold, who were guests of their sister, Clara Erickson.

Bob Davidson provided the old-time cordavox music for the Happy Hour with residents of Valley home as guests. They joined in listening and dancing to the old-time tunes.

Oakland Park's annual hobo day was held July 30. Besides having staff and residents dressed in hobo attire, the event included an old-fashioned outdoor picnic featuring grilled hamburgers and hotdogs. Old ballads and hobo-type songs were sung by Melvin Swenson, who played his own guitar accompaniment. Other entertainment included a variety of outdoor games with prizes.

An outdoor hiking group was organized during the month by the Activities department at Oakland Park. Other outdoor games, such as horseshoe and croquet are played as often as weather permits. Members of the Eagles auxiliary visit the home twice monthly to assist with indoor games. Also of interest is the monthly bowling games with Valley Home residents. The Oakland park team won in July with Einer Hemmestvedt as high bowler. Members of the AVTI Cosmetology class continues to make regular visits, cutting, curling and giving perms.

The Minnesota Safety Council estimates that between 9 and 11 motorists will be killed on Minnesota roadways this Labor Day weekend. This is not a prediction, but an estimate based on fatalities recorded for previous Labor Day holiday periods.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of Chantilace with long, fitted sleeves and Sabrina scalloped neckline accented with pearls. Her skirt of cascading scalloped ruffles swept into a cathedral length train. A juliet headpiece held her finger-tip viel of bridal illusion edged with corresponding Chantilace. The rings were carried by Jared Haugen, Goodridge, a newphew of the groom. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a black tuxedo with a pink ruffled shirt and a pink carnation boutonniere, accented with babies' breath.

The mother of the bride wore a dusty pink, floor-length pleated gown with sheer sleeves and lace jacket. The groom's mother wore an ivory colored floor-length gown with matching jacket. Their corsages were of red roses and babies' breath.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Billingham, uncle and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Teloy Johnsrud, grandparents of the groom; and Kathy Siverling, the bride's personal attendant.

A reception followed in the church dining hall. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Mayer Holen, uncle and aunt of the groom. Kim Johnsrud, sister-in-law of the groom registered the guests as Shelly Hyland and Theresa Johnsrud, friends of the couple, served the punch.

WCTU Stresses Sharing Story Of Salvation

Alice Mae Stuart Thief River Falls Woman's Christian Temperance Union met Friday afternoon, August 22, at the Martin Mosbeck home in St. Hilaire.

The theme of the program was "Channels of Fellowship," with Mrs. Olga Larson in charge of the devotional meditation. She read I John 1:1-3, emphasizing "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ." She said that the Christians, who have learned about the love of God, should, like the apostles that followed Jesus, witness to those with whom they associate. Sharing the story of salvation is the Christian's God-given duty of bringing light where there is darkness. She concluded by saying that a person can leave no greater heritage than living and sharing faith in Christ.

The program began with the flag salutes to the United States, Christina Temperance flags. Mrs. Larson gave the treasurer's report and Mrs. Valborg Hanson, the secretary's report. Agnes Longren read the article, "Two ways of handling sin, God's Way, and Our Way," featuring Bible verses: Matt. 10: 26; Num. 32:33; Prov. 28:13; Rom. 3:20; Luke 19:10; Prov. 28:13 and Isa. 55:7.

Mrs. Haugen read the newspaper clipping, "In Kentucky Hills, Minnesota Promotes living without alcohol," based on an alcoholic treatment center patterned after the treatment system used in Minnesota. It was noted that in the last decade, Minnesota has developed the nation's best-known and most concentrated system of treatment for alcoholism and other forms of chemical dependency.

Mrs. Hildur Lien read the newspaper feature article "WCTU still active, still caring, operates rest home in Eagle Rock for elderly."

Creating special interest at the meeting was a display of posters, used by the Loyal Temperance Legion. They will be used in the WCTU poster projects in the local schools. Mrs. Cora Sjulson had assisted in making the posters.

Following the singing of the table prayer, a potluck lunch was served by the hostess. Cards were signed for Mrs. Emil Thune, who was hospitalized, and Martin Mosbeck, for his birthday.

I am more powerful that the combined armies of the world;

I have destroyed more men than all the wars of the nation;

I have caused millions of accidents and wrecked more homes than all the floods, tornadoes and hurricanes put together;

I am the world's slickest thief. I steal billions of dollars each year;

I find my victims among the rich and poor alike, the young and the old, the strong and the weak;

I loom up in such proportions that I cast a shadow over every field of labor;

I am relentless, insidious, unpredictable;

I am everywhere in the home, on the street, in the factory, in the office, on the sea and in the air;

I bring sickness, poverty and death;

I give nothing and take all;

I am your worst enemy;

DNR Offers Patch For Bear Tooth

Department of Natural Resources wants some bear teeth — want 'em bad.

In fact, any bear hunters who send a bear tooth to the DNR during the 1980 bear season, which opens Sept. 2, will receive a yellow and black "Bear Hunter" patch for their hunting jacket.

It is the small tooth just behind the canine in the upper row that the Department's researchers want. From a study of this tooth, the specialists can determine the bear's age.

In addition to the tooth, hunters are asked to fill out a form that will provide the experts with other information they need to determine the status of Minnesota's bear population.

The envelopes in which to put the tooth samples and the forms are available at the registration stations, where hunters are required to register all bears taken during the season.

Pat Karns, DNR's big game research specialist at Grand Rapids, said that the department has only been receiving about 70 to 80 tooth samples per year and that between 700 and 800 bear are taken annually.

"We're offering this attractive patch as an incentive to bear hunters to cooperate on the bear research program," he said.

Karns said the tooth is most easily removed shortly after the bear is killed but that it can also be removed later. The important thing, he said, is not to break off the root during the extraction since that is the portion of the tooth required to determine the age of the animal.

Minnesotans Using Energy Wisely In '80

Minnesotans are using energy more efficiently, according to the latest comparison drawn by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Gas and diesel fuel use dropped nine per cent and vehicle miles traveled declined only three per cent during the first half of 1980 from the same period in 1979, said Commissioner Richard P. Braun.

These figures are rather startling because previous experience had indicated that a one per cent drop in vehicle miles traveled would result in a corresponding one per cent drop in fuel use, Braun said.

Variance in the figures is thought to have occurred primarily due to the increased use of smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles, he said. Changes in driver behavior and vehicle maintenance also may have contributed to fuel reductions. Drivers seem to be maintaining their vehicles better, avoiding jackrabbit starts and other fuel wasting practices.

Estimated vehicle miles traveled on all types of Minnesota roads during the first six months of 1980 totaled 13 billion miles compared with 13.4 billion miles in 1979. Fuel use during the first half of 1980 amounted to 818 million gallons compared with 895 million gallons during the corresponding 1979 period.

Mileage figures were collected by Mn-DOT through automatic traffic recorders placed at selected sites on all types of roads and streets throughout Minnesota. Vehicle counts are translated into vehicle miles traveled.

Motor fuel use figures were provided by the petroleum tax division of the Minnesota department of revenue.

CONVERTED SHOP AREA in the vocational section of Lincoln high school gives this kind of atmosphere to several classes in the senior high school this year. Approximately $86,000 was expended during the summer to convert the vocational section into classrooms. Closing of large portions of the older sections of Lincoln on fire marshal's order have made utilization of the shop space for classrooms necessary.

Hudson Bay By Canoe Realized By TRF Men

way up and half way across Lake Winnipeg — just in time for Eric to fly back to the United States to attend summer school at Concordia college.

"We jumped a cargo plane," Eric said, "and left our canoe with a guy whose name we had gotten from an Indian. He had a White water rafting outfit at a fur company on Lake Winnipeg."

Eric's physics class lasted four weeks. By that time the two were ready to continue their journey — but this time they'd have two other companions which meant another canoe to face the rapids they knew they would encounter.

July 14 Tony and Eric drove to Winnipeg. From there they "grabbed a bus to Riverton (a town of approximately 800 people) because that was the closest town we knew of to Lake Winnipeg," Eric said.

The two spent some time after their stop at Riverton asking people if there were any charter flights back to their canoes, or if there were any Indians going in that direction by boat — as many of them did.

"We heard about some guys who were going to the "end of the road" (a title given to a site at "the end of a road" near the canoes) to work, and we decided to go with them."

Shortly following that, a plane pulled in, Eric said. And, ironic as it may seem, the pilot of the plane was the same man with whom they had left their canoes before they flew back to the United States.

"'You guys ought to buy lottery tickets!' the guy told us," Eric said.

The three then flew into the Berens river in Manitoba, Canada, along the eastern shore of Lake Winnipeg, and from there began canoeing up Lake Winnipeg to Norway House, a town at the northern tip of Lake Winnipeg.

"We got there later than we planned," Eric said. "We didn't have much food left when we got there and the only store there wasn't open so we canoed the whole next day with three candy bars."

The four voyageurs met at Sea Falls — a town near Norway House where they camped for a few days before proceeding on their journey. It was during that time that they had most of their food stolen by a bear — that is, all except for a jar of peanut butter which had apparently baffled the bear with its distasteful glass container. July 23 the young men repacked their supplies and began their journey — up the Black Water river, across Harry Lake, up the Echimamish river, where they came to Painted Rock — a point where the river flowed in two directions. Taking the direction of the Hayes river and a series of other lakes, they landed at York Factory — a former fur trading post just inland from Hudson Bay — where they stopped canoeing.

"From there all we had to do was to get home," Jim said. The four had been told York Factory was abandoned but they found people all over.

A survey shack at the site possessed the names of all of those who had made similar journeys, Eric said. "The closest we could find to Thief River were two guys who had made the journey from Oslo. They had 1,236 miles written down for their trip. From that, we think we must have traveled around 1,400 miles."

The four had constructed a catamaran for their journey by attaching a 10x10 tarp to the two canoes to make better time and to take advantage of the north wind which blew quite steadily around Hudson Bay. And as they got closer to the bay they noticed the colder temperatures, rainy weather and quick changes in the temperatures.

"We were wet so much it seemed colder," Eric said.

Each of the canoes took its turn in flipping over during the trip," Eric explained.

"Dave and I wiped out when I was trying to get a picture of some falls. I saw some of our things going down the river so I took off along with the rapids to try and get them."

Eric sadly watched one of his shoes disappear over the falls and had to borrow a shoe from a second pair Dave had brought along which he wore until he later found a pair of shoes left by a previous explorer to the same territory. And, again their lottery tickets would have been appropriate as the shoes were the size Eric needed!

"Everyone was wearing everyone else's shoes," Eric laughed. "Jim even had two left feet for awhile."

Jim and Tony were sailing down some rapids when they flipped over.

"We had a pot of soup in the boat we were saving, and we lost the whole thing. It was the only pot we had and so we cooked in frying pans for the rest of the trip." The two also lost a machete and rain gear when their unfortunate experience happened.

The four made use of a variety of foods on the second part of their journey, they said, including beaver, and a "huge" supply of flour, rice, beans, peanut butter, honey, molasses, corn meal (which the bear ate half of), tomato paste and instant soups.

(Tony added his delight over the tail of the beaver which he said tasted much like popcorn. In opposition to this, came Dave's comment that "a little" beaver was good but got to be too greasy if you ate too much of it).

"We brought Tang along for a treat," Jim said. "We usually got a treat once a week. Whenever Tony decided we'd been working hard he'd make up a batch of raisin bread. Then we'd be good for another 200 miles!"

The fishing was good and consisted mainly of walleyes and "all the northerns you wanted," Dave said.

They also saw many whales and a seal on Hudson Bay, as well as many bald eagles.

The four became short of money when they had to spend $250 to get help in getting their canoes back to a town (Gillam) where they endured a 12-hour train ride which took them within 80 miles of their vehicles. From there they were forced to hitchhike to the vehicles.

Tony decided to sell his canoe at the end of the trip for $500 and Jim's father had wired the voyageurs $100.

The four said they had expected faster water on the trip and they had expected to go downhill much of the way but there was no current. They also discovered some hills (Brassy Hills) 40 miles north of the Bay which they were unaware of in that part of the country.

"There were also a lot of rapids not on the map that forced us to portage different times during the trip," (they did not buy the maps until they got to Winnipeg at the beginning of their trip) Eric said.

But all four agreed they would consider making a voyage such as this again — but not to the same place.

"But I think we'd bring less rice if we went again," Jim said, wrinkling his nose.

On June 27, 1884, President Chester Alan Arthur signed a bill to create a U.S. Bureau of Labor in the Department of the Interior; the bureau was made independent of the Interior Department but without Cabinet rank under a bill signed by President Grover Cleveland on March 21, 1888.

NEW AVTI INSTRUCTORS who will begin teaching classes Tuesday in Thief River Falls include left to right, David Lysaker, sales and marketing; Greg Stauss, safety and health; Linda LaFave, cosmetology; and Dorothy Dodds, sales and marketing — fashion. New AVTI students totaled 340, according to figures provided by the school Friday, which creates a total of 560 students accepted for admission at the school on that date. "Based on past history, there is usually a 10 per cent no show of students," according to Robert Reeve, counselor at the school. "The total accepted this year is a 50 student increase or more," he said, "and is probably the highest figure so far as initial enrollment goes." It was reminded that students are to meet at 8 a.m. Tuesday in their program areas, with the major portion of the morning to be spent on registration, paying fees, buying books, and getting lockers. At 11 a.m. will be an all school assembly. Buses will be available on that day, also.

Soil Test Last Acre Ceremony September 11

of the land.

The soil survey will point out the potentials and limitations for homes, septic systems, roads, buildings and growth of crops and trees. It will also indicate the areas of prime farmland, high water table and erosion-prone sites.

"Many people assume that soils are all more or less alike," said Gustafson, "but farmers and other land users know better. For the person who already has a good understanding of this land, the soil survey will provide more detailed information which can be used for more effective decision making. For the person who has less knowledge of the land, the soil survey will point out general differences in land forms and will aid in understanding why a particular area is well-suited for certain uses but definitely unsuited for others."

"The last-acre ceremony is a very important event for the soil survey," Heschke said. "It gives us a chance to get the land users together to commemorate the end of the soil mapping within the county. The program will have several local people involved and should be quite informative."

Citizens Are Informed On School Project

fields would be relocated on the grounds.

Included in the high school would be classrooms, laboratories, shops, gymnasium, library, cafeteria and all attendant services for a complete, self-contained high school. Also included would be the 900-seat auditorium and the vocational center school. The district currently operates the vocational center in the school district service center and serves a number of students from surrounding school districts.

The total project also calls for the expenditure of approximately $750,000 to $900,000 for use in other buildings owned by the district to bring them up to standards for handicapped access, energy codes and general repair, according to information presented Thursday evening.

The proposal has been submitted by the board of education to the state commissioner of education for review and comment. The commissioner's office has up to 60 days to review the proposal and prepare comments. It is the hope and expectation of the board that the process can be accelerated so that the bond election could be held about October 14, between the primary and general elections.

"We have two circumstances which motivate the board toward actiong soon on the proposal," Wiebolt said. "One is the knowledge that inflation will cause the cost to rise the longer we wait to get the job done. The other is that present conditions make it likely we would get a very favorable bid on construction. We would like to avoid the first circumstance and take advantage of the second."

ASK THE PERSON WHO HAS ONE!!!

Dear friends,

We have heard of a young man who gives his parents a gift on his birthday. Sort of a 'thank you' for the gift of life and for their loving care in raising him to adulthood. No doubt this is an appreciated gesture.

Respectfully,

400 Apply For Appointment To Women's Group

A record-setting number of applicants will be considered for appointment to the Council on the Economic Status of Women, according to an announcement by Secretary of State, Joan Growe. "As far as we can tell," said Growe, "the number of applications to this council exceeds that for any other state board or commission in recent history."

Over 400 applications have been received from all parts of the state. Although most applicants were women, about five men also applied. Almost 250 of the applications were received in the past month; and the remainder had been received last year when there was one opening on the council. Other commissions which draw large numbers of applicants are the Council for the Handicapped, with 181 this year, and the Board on Aging, with 165.

Council on the Economic Status of Women was established in 1976 by the state legislature to study the status of women in Minnesota and to report to the legislature and the governor. Council has issued reports on a wide range of topics including education, employment, work training programs, credit, insurance, and housing.

"The applications to this council demonstrate that there are hundreds of well-qualified women throughout the state who are interested in public service," stated the Secretary of State. "We are pleased that the open appointments process has encouraged women to apply to boards and commissions, and has resulted in identifying such highly qualified applicants."

There are currently 11 openings for public members to be appointed by the governor. Five state representatives and five state senators also sit on the council.

Cities League Plans Meeting In Newfolden

Local government officials will identify and discuss future legislative policies and issues with local legislators, candidates and state officials at a series of 13 meetings throughout the state sponsored by the League of Minnesota Cities.

The meetings will begin September 16 in Aitkin, conclude October 15 in Waite Park and are open to all interested in local government as well as city officials. The meeting for this area will be held in the Newfolden municipal building on Tuesday, September 23. Legislators and candidates have been invited to be present at the forum which is at 7:30 p.m. and is preceded by a 6:30 p.m. dinner.

Reduction in state aids to cities and the financing of city government will be issues for the league in the 1981 legislative session as well as modification of the public employment labor relations laws.

These and other items of state-wide importance, as well as key local concerns, will be up for candidate comment during the after-dinner meetings. Donald A. Slater, executive director, and other members of the league staff will conduct the meetings throughout the state.

Sharing The Housework

If you haven't had enough topics to argue about during your lunch break, bridge party or night out, why not consider this one by Edward P. Morgan, writing for "In The Public Interest"? There must be enough stuff in the following column to last from supper table to divorce court:

You remember the old saying:

"Man may work from sun to sun

"But woman's work is never done."

Now, it turns out, women around the world are working more than ever but they're still not getting the breaks they deserve in terms of equal pay and equal opportunity with men, and the career woman still bears the drudgery of housework more than her male partner. Significant changes, however, are in the works.

The extension of women's job roles is downright staggering and if you don't believe it read the latest Worldwatch paper (number 37), in which Kathleen Newland, a senior researcher at this lively little Washington thinktank has put together some telling figures.

Today, she writes, "Nearly half the world's adult women are in the labor force and that does not include women who do only unpaid work at home.

But here, still, is the rub, or the eye of the storm as she puts it: "the sharing of unpaid, household labor between men and women receives only a fraction of the attention (of public policy makers) given to equality in formal employment. If women are to take full advantage of newly-won access to the formal labor market — she goes on — men must increase their share of the essential work that goes on outside of it. Otherwise, equal opportunity for women will turn out to be a recipe for overwork."

Worldwide, the paper reports, the number of women counted as "economically active" (employed outside the home) rose from 344 million to 576 million between 1950 and 1975.

Interestingly enough, while China and Cuba have made the sharing of housework a tenet of official policy, Sweden seems to be leading that parade in the west. Taxes don't penalize couples with separate incomes. When a child is born, parents get 9 months leave at 90 per cent of their salaries; there is an effort to break down occupational segregation and achieve a steady reduction of salary differential between male and female workers.

Poor women in poor countries still fare the worst. In rural Pakistan, for example, a woman works 14 hours a day just to meet her family's basic needs.

"Perhaps the most effective thing a government can do to encourage equality in private life," Worldwatch Institute's Kathleen Newland concludes, "is to enforce equality in the public sphere of paid employment ... The women who enjoy the greatest equality in their personal relationships with men are those who are closest to their mates in education, occupational prestige, and earnings.

Women's longer hours of housework are often viewed by both them and their mates as justifiable compensation for their smaller financial contributions to the family. If this economic obstacle to equality can be removed, other seemingly immovable cultural obstacles may, over time, yield with surprising grace."

Day's Work For A Day's Pay

Following editorial is from the Burlington (Wis.) Standard-Press:

Jay Van Andel and Richard DeVos, a couple of watchers of various phases of business in the United States, have come up with a ticklish question about the application of an 1856 law that docked Senators and congressmen who failed to deliver a day's work for a day's pay.

These Amway co-founders say figures of the Foundation for the Study of Presidential and Congressional terms show that $1,679,854 could have been held back from paychecks of Congressmen and Senators absent a day or more during the first session of the 95th Congress. But the 1856 law hasn't been applied in years even though it's still on the books.

Tempting as it may be to consider a $1,679,854 "saving" from wages of non-working U.S. lawmakers, Van Andel and DeVos raise an interesting question. In view of "over-regulation, spiraling inflation, etc." that Congress's actions have produced, they want to know if Congress should be docked for showing up or staying away. It's hard to deny their implication that the nation might have been much better off had Congress stayed out of Washington and let the country run itself. We might not have been any worse off.

It's Liter-ly True

Area residents who have occasion to travel in Canada soon find that gasoline stations up north have prices listed by the liter. It goes along with the 90 kilometers per hour speed limit and the celsius temperatures listed in the weather report.

If you want to know the price you pay in U.S. gallons (Canada uses the Imperial gallon of 4.546 liters while a U.S. gallon has 3.785 liters), simply take the price charged per liter and use the following conversion table:

Love Me Always

In these days of economic recession, it may be well to consider the following item which recently appeared in the Minnkota power cooperative "Messenger":

You say you love me, but sometimes you don't show it. In the beginning you couldn't do enough for me. Now you seem to take me for granted. Some days I wonder if I mean anything at all to you.

Maybe when I'm gone, you'll appreciate me and all the things I do for you. I'm responsible for getting the food on your table, for your clean shirt, for the welfare of your children — a thousand and one things you want and need.

Why, if it weren't for me, you wouldn't even have a car. I've kept quiet and waited to see how long it would take for you to realize how much you really need me.

Cherish me. Take care of me, and I'll continue to take good care of you.

Who Am I?
I Am Your Job!!

A Case Of Injustice

Following editorial is from the St. Paul Pioneer Press:

Question: If a person drinks alcoholic beverages for eight hours, staggers out to his car and crashes at 105 miles per hour, who is to blame for the accident?

Answer (according to Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals): The manufacturer of the automobile.

A fine case of logic here. The guy roars off and kills himself after an eight-hour binge and Ford Motor company is ordered to pay his mother $36,000, along with another $36,000 to a passenger who was injured. The court in New Orleans based this decision on the fact that the car had an engine that would propell it at racing speeds but tires that were rated for only 85 mph. Ford should have warned the driver, according to the court.

Does this mean the court believes that 105 mph would be a safe speed on public roads with better tires? And does the court also believe that a person who would drive at such a speed would pay any attention to a note in the glove compartment about tires?

Sometimes the scales of justice tilt at awfully weird angles. This is a classic example of the sort of law that makes it ever more difficult to do business in the United States.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"Oh my," remarked the chorus girl to her friend, "you're handling that new Cadillac like a veteran."

"That so?" the second hoofer asked. "When have you ever seen me handle a veteran?"

"What did you call this part of the country before we discovered it?" asked the hunter of his Indian guide.

Without hesitation the guide replied, "Mine."

Payroll Figures Reported By Census Bureau

Employment in the private sector of Minnesota's 87 counties totaled 1,383,443 in March 1978, an increase of 143,609 over the March 1977 figure. First quarter and annual payrolls of $3,670 million and $16,027 million respectively also showed increases over the year before.

These figures appear in the census bureau's recently issued "County Business Patterns: 1978 Minnesota." The bureau is a part of the U.S. department of commerce.

The report shows, as well, that Hennepin county had the state's highest employment in 1978 — 514,361 — an increase of 55,668 over the figure for the year before. The county's first quarter and annual payrolls were $1,503 million and $6,463 million respectively.

The 1978 county business patterns reports is the 25th in a series presenting first quarter employment and payroll statistics for all of the states and their counties. Reports provide data by detailed industry on most of the major economic divisions of the 1972 standard industrial classification (SIC) code, including agricultural services, mining, construction, manufacturing, transportation, public utilities, wholesale trade, retail trade, finance, insurance, real estate and selected service businesses.

About three-fourths of all the business and manufacturing employees in the United States are covered in the reports for the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. Not included are employees of federal, state and local governments, self-employed persons, farm workers and those employed in domestic and certain transportation services.

Detailed reports are useful for analyzing market potential, measuring the effectiveness of sales and advertising programs, setting sales quotas and budgets, analyzing the industrial structure of regions, making basic economic studies of small areas, and serving other business uses. They are also useful to government agencies for administration and planning purposes.

Copies of the report are available for $5 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or may be ordered at department of commerce district offices in major cities in the United States.

Data is available also, at cost, on computer tapes from the Data User Services Division, Bureau of the Census, Washington, D.C. 20233.

Applying agency must provide 20 per cent of the vehicle cost and all of the operating expenses. Federal funding is 80 per cent of vehicle cost.

Funds availability announcements are being mailed now to private nonprofit organizations statewide.

St. Paul Area Bikeway Map Now Available

New bikeway map for the outer suburban area surrounding St. Paul, including the St. Croix valley, is now available to the public.

Designed to provide a reliable, compact and comprehensive travel aid for bicyclists, the new map is one of nine prepared by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

The first eight cover other parts of the Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan area. Fifteen more bikeway maps covering other parts of the state are expected to be completed within the year. Altogether, there will be 54 bikeway maps.

The Minnesota outdoor recreation act of 1977 mandated that Mn-DOT "compile and maintain a current registry of bicycle routes in the state." Through a computer analysis, roadways have been evaluated for biking suitability and rated from "good" to "unsatisfactory." The new map shows road surface type and the location of paved shoulders.

In addition to biking suitability, roads prohibiting bicycles and offroad bikeways are indicated. Each map also provides information about historical, social, cultural and park sites.

The first nine maps in the series are available at a cost of 75 cents each, plus postage and sales tax, through Mn-DOT Map Sales.

For an order form, contact Map Sales, Mn-DOT, B-20 Transportation building, St. Paul, MN 55155. Phone (612) 296-2216.

Chief's Corner

by Ken Froschheiser
Chief of Police
Thief River Falls, MN.

Within the past few weeks the department has noticed flagrant violations of the handicapped parking law (169.346). Many times I have seen vehicles parked in the designated handicapped stalls while the legitimate vehicles being operated by handicapped drivers or vehicles with handicapped passengers had to park elsewhere. Here is what the law states:

Minnesota state law (169.346) parking for physically handicapped: prohibitions, penalties, Subdivision 1. No person shall park a motor vehicle in a parking space designated and reserved for the physically handicapped, on either private or public property, or exercise the parking privilege provided in section 169.345, unless:

(a) That person is a physically handicapped person as defined in section 169.345, subd. 2, or the person is transporting such a physically handicapped person; and

(b) the vehicle visibly displays the certificate of license plate issued to physically handicapped persons or, the certificate issued to persons transporting physically handicapped person by the department of public safety pursuant to sections 169.345, Subd. 3, or 169.021 or if the vehicle visibly displays an equivalent certificate, insignia or license plate issued by another state or one of its political subdivisions.

Subd. 2. Handicapped parking spaces shall be designated and identified by the posting of signs incorporating the international symbol of access in white on blue and indicating that the parking space is reserved for the handicapped with vehicles displaying the required certificate, license plates or insignia. Spaces which have been clearly identified for handicapped parking by signs which are ont in compliance with the design standards as set forth in this subdivision shall also be deemed designated and reserved for the physically handicapped for the purposes of this section. A sign posted for the purpose of this section shall be visible from inside of the vehicle parked in the space and shall be kept clear of snow or other obstructions which block its visibility.

Subd. 3. Any person who violates the provisions of subdivision 1 is guilty of a petty misdemeanor. This subdivision shall be enforced in the same manner as parking ordinances or regulations are enforced in the governmental subdivision in which the violation occurs. A handicapped person charged with violating subdivision 1 because he parked in a handicapped parking space without the required certificate or insignia shall not be convicted if he produces in court or prior to court appearance the required certificate or insignia and demonstrates that he was entitled to the certificate or insignia at the time of arrest or tagging.

I ask all motorists to be aware of this law and please abide by it. The police department will begin enforcement effective Thursday morning, August 28. Thank you for your anticipated cooperation in this matter.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

I strongly disagree with the women who wrote a letter to the editor recently in which they protested against the police for having shut down a pig-wrestling event.

Perhaps it would have been good entertainment, as the women claimed. But for whom: Certainly not for the pig. As a friend of mine remarked, if a 250-pound man wants to get out there and have four other people — all of whom may be 250 pounders, wrestle him down, beat on him, and try to push him into a barrel, that's all right because he's been given the freedom to choose whether or not he wants to be there. But the pig wasn't given a choice! And that's why we have laws — to protect animals and people from being forced into situations they would not choose for themselves.

I'd suggest that next year they invite 250 pound men and women to get into the ring and try to stop four other people from stuffing them into a barrel. That may be entertainment, because everyone will have had the freedom to be there or not to be there.

I commend the police for having done the right thing.

Sincerely,
-s-Jonathan Law

Program Offers $200,000 In Scholarships

High school seniors from across the United States can compete this fall in the Century III leaders program for over 200 college scholarships ranging from $500 to $10,000 — more than $200,000 in all.

Interested students must apply by October 15. Applications are available through local school principals' offices.

Sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School principals, which represents more than 35,000 high school principals, the Century III leaders program seeks to stimulate creative thinking among those young people who will be solving the problems of tomorrow.

In the selection of school winners, students are initially judged on their leadership abilities, community involvement and awareness of current events.

Competing at the state level, each school winner then prepares a brief projection which outlines not only a particular need or challenge America is likely to face in its third century but also how that problem should be solved. Each state awards two finalists $1,500 scholarships and two alternates are given $500 scholarships.

The 102 national finalists — two from each state and the District of Columbia — receive expense-paid trips to Williamsburg, VA, to attend the Century III leaders conference where they have the opportunity to meet with national leaders. During this conference, one student is selected for the top award of a $10,000 scholarship while nine others get $500 each, in addition to the $1,500 won at the state level.

Funding for the program is provided by Shell oil company.

Electric Mail Van Operates In St. Paul

An electric mail van will be operating in St. Paul this fall, fulfilling a commitment to look for alternative methods of transportation and to promote energy conservation, the Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT) announced.

Using an electric vehicle for a Mn-DOT downtown St. Paul inter-agency mail run is cost effective, Commissioner Richard P. Braun said. The van will get 40 to 60 miles to a charge. He said that is about two cents a mile to operate, compared to seven cents a mile for a gas-powered car.

The vehicle is estimated to cost $12,000 and will recover its cost during its planned lifetime of eight years, Braun said. The life expectancy of a gas powered vehicle is five years.

Recent improvements in electric car batteries could make the vehicle lighter, improve vehicle performance and increase vehicle versatility, he said.

"I think we'll see more and more reason to go to electric cars in urban areas, not only because of economic issues but beacuse of environmental factors. Mn-DOT wants to provide a leadership role," Braun said.

The electric van will provide data for evaluating where other electric vehicles can be placed.

"Our hope is to find other uses for electric cars. The speed with which the state replaces gas powered with electric vehicles will depend on the success we have with this mail van," Braun said.

FWS Adds Iowa And Missouri To This Region

Geographic boundaries of several U.S. fish and wildlife service (FWS) regions will be changed October 1, following an extensive review of the agency's field office structure and resource management responsibilities, officials said recently.

The realignment will change FWS regional boundaries in the Midwest. Iowa and Missouri will be added to the service's north central region, which presently includes Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The addition of Iowa and Missouri to the north central region will help the service to better meet its responsibilities and objectives, according to regional director Harvey Nelson, at the service's regional office in Minneapolis.

"Resources integral with the Upper Mississippi river, the Mississippi flyway, as well as the states' geographical proximity to one another makes the realignment a logical move from the standpoint of consolidating management of fish and wildlife resources and related environmental problems," he said.

Because of the similarity of FWS responsibilities and programs in Illinois, that state will be grouped with Iowa and Missouri. FWS activities in the three states will be managed under the service's area office at Kansas City, MO, Nelson explained.

Elsewhere in the north central region, the FWS area office at St. Paul will retain administrative responsibilities for service programs in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The service's area office in East Lansing, Mich., will not be affected by the regional boundary change, and will retain responsibilities for FWS programs in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

The regional changes will not involve additional personnel or funds.

Safety Council Says Watch For Loading Buses

Now that school is in session, the Minnesota safety council reminds motorists to be alert for school buses and the children they transport.

Minnesota school buses use an eight-light warning system to let motorists know when buses are preparing to or have stopped to load or unload school children. Flashing amber lights are used when the bus is preparing to stop at a school bus loading point. Flashing red lights are used with the stop arm extended when the vehicle is stopped to pick up or drop off youngsters.

State law requires that all drivers stop not less than 20 feet from a school bus which is stopped with red lights flashing and the stop arm extended on a highway with no median barrier — regardless of the direction you are travelling. Drivers must stop regardless of the direction of travel on a four-lane road with a double yellow center line or when travelling in the same direction as the bus on a highway with a median barrier, safety isle or safety zone.

School buses mean that children are near, according to the Minnesota safety council. Watch for youngsters darting out from behind or in front of stopped buses. Be alert to buses preparing to slow down and stop. Use extra caution when driving through school zones now that children are back at their books.

Future TRF Schedule Uncertain

Few changes have been made in the Lincoln high school football schedule in recent years as the Prowlers pieced together a familiar slate that opened with Grand Forks Red River; closed with Crookston; featured five non-conference games to start the year; and included four Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) games to close the season.

Opponents have remained nearly the same since the Prowlers began to toughen their football schedule seven or eight years ago. This year Grand Rapids appears on the Thief River Falls schedule, replacing Crosby-Ironton, a Thief River Falls opponent in 1978 and 1979. C-I had been picked up after a two-year series was completed against Eveleth in 1976-77. Those are the only changes on the Thief River Falls schedule in the past five years.

Also no longer appearing on the Thief River Falls schedule are former Northwest Athletic Conference members Breckenridge and Roseau; St. Cloud Apollo, a spirited four-year series that was completed in 1975; St. Cloud Cathedral (1974); Fridley (1973); and International Falls (1972) — all one year deals on the road.

However, the stability of Thief River Falls' football schedule may be shaken when Crookston and East Grand Forks go through with their planned withdrawal from the Northwest Athletic Conference following the 1980 season.

The Pirates and Green Wave are apparently ready to play as Class A-size independents in 1981 without a conference affiliation instead of trying to compete against Class AA-size NWAC members Fergus Falls and Bemidji. That plan leaves Thief River Falls out in the cold, too.

Officials have not come up with a plan to serve the needs of the three remaining Northwest Athletic Conference teams. The Otters and Lumberjacks face the prospects of playing as Class AA independents, a la Moorhead, while the Prowlers find themselves in an unwanted position as a Class A independent.

What might well happen is that Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston may get together to form a three-team Class A mini-conference that would give the winner a shot at a Minnesota State High School League Class A state playoff berth; a much easier task than trying to gain a berth in the playoffs as an independent.

Under that type of arrangement you may find the Prowlers, Green Wave and Pirates playing each other on a two-game, home-and-home basis each fall.

That concept, while not perfect, would probably be acceptable to Thief River Falls officials, who would also like to maintain football ties with current NWAC members Bemidji and Fergus Falls, but wouldn't want to get tied up in a Class AA-size three-team conference with those two. Thief River Falls would also like to continue playing Mid-State Conference teams like Detroit Lakes and Staples, while also meeting the challenges offered by the bigger schools like Grand Forks Red River, Grand Rapids and Moorhead.

Miscellaneous

+In a surprise move, Fergus Falls high school hockey coach Wayne Horgen has resigned after six years as the Otters' head coach. He directed Fergus Falls teams to an overall 80-45-7 record, including a 20-2-1 finish in 1977-78 when the Otters reached the Section 8 tournament finals before losing to Roseau 8-1. "That team," said Horgen about his 1977-78 squad, "was as good as half the teams that played in the state hockey tournament." Horgen said he was giving up the coaching position due to personal reasons, telling Fergus Falls superintendent Richard Baker that he did not wish to comment any further about the decision. Baker said a successor to Horgen will be appointed in the near future.

+Grand Rapids is apparently going to give Thief River Falls a real test when the Prowlers and Indians tangle in a September 12 football game at Grand Rapids. "We're going to be tough," promises first-year Grand Rapids head coach Bill Soltys. The Indians were 7-1 in the Class AA Northern Lakes Conference last season, and even though they return just three 1979 starters, a strong junior varsity team of a year ago is expected to enable Grand Rapids to challenge for the conference title again this fall. Senior tailback Jim Malwitz, who rates as one of the top runners in the Northern Lakes Conference, is one of the returning veterans. Quarterbacking the Indians will be junior Tony Kellin, a strong passer. "You can expect us to pass more than in past years," noted Soltys, "but we want a strong running game to go with it."

TRF Scores On Two Long First Quarter Plays; Holds On At The End . .

Prowlers Open With 12-7 Win Over Red River

Muttering something about winning the battle but losing the war, Grand Forks Red River coaches were shaking their heads as they walked off the field Friday following a 12-7 season-opening high school football defeat at the hands of Thief River Falls.

"I'm sure we ran more plays and gained more yards than they did," explained Red River head coach Nick Chichy, "but they didn't make the mistakes like we did."

The Roughriders limited the Prowlers to just one first down and a mere 22 yards worth of offense in the second half, but because of penalties and fumbles they were unable to make up for a pair of long range Thief River Falls scoring plays in the first quarter.

"I'm not disappointed in the way we played," noted Chichy. "We ran our offense well. We just had too many mistakes. They (Prowlers) did a good job. They played better than we did."

The victory on the soggy Thief River Falls athletic field was the Prowlers' first win in the traditional season-opening series against Red River since 1976 and first-year head coach John Schmitz accepted numerous post-game congratulations on his successful debut.

"We had a few things go right for us," acknowledged Schmitz. "We either made the big play, or they fumbled. But we're satisfied; you have to be satisfied anytime you win."

Thief River Falls stunned Red River early when senior quarterback Scott Wiebolt, making his first varsity start, faked a dive play into the middle and carried the option around the right side for a 76-yard touchdown run on the game's second scrimmage play. The strong 6-1, 180-pounder stepped out of the grasp of a Red River tackler near the line of scrimmage and raced down the sidelines to score with just 41 seconds elapsed. Kent Kainz' extra point kick floated off wide to the right, but the Prowlers were still happy with their 6-0 head start.

Red River, after fumbling away their first possession, marched 61 yards in 15 time-consuming plays the second time the visitors had the ball to take the lead. Barry Owens, who finished with 107 yards on a busy 30-carry night, scored on a straight-ahead dive play from the one yard line with 52 seconds left in the first quarter. Tim Gabrielson's kick made it 7-6 Red River.

Thief River Falls turned in another lightning-fast two-play touchdown drive to regain the lead before the first quarter expired. Small but quick halfback Tom Ose, a 5-6, 142-pound junior, glanced off a would-be tackler at the line of scrimmage, displayed a great fake in the secondary and outran a handful of Red River defenders on a 58-yard touchdown sprint with just 11 seconds to go in the opening quarter. And that was all the scoring as Kainz' kick once again narrowly missed the target.

Thief River Falls did not present another scoring threat the rest of the night. Red River had several, but those before-mentioned mistakes nagged the Roughriders who lost a fumble at the Thief River Falls 35 in the second quarter; reached the Thief River Falls 10 at the start of the third quarter but picked up a 15-yard holding penalty and wound up running out of downs at the 29; failed to get a first down after reaching the Thief River Falls 38 in the early part of the fourth quarter; and saw a final shot at winning elude them when quarterback Tim Loven, rolling to his right, slipped on the grass that had been made slick by heavy rains during the day, and lose five yards on a fourth-and-three call from the Thief River Falls 14 with 50 seconds left in the game.

"We did a nice job moving the ball downfield at the end," pointed out Chichy, whose Roughriders were hit by two 15-yard penalties during the 16-play, 80-yard assault that ate up nearly six minutes. Straight-ahead dive plays brought the Roughriders downfield where they enjoyed a third-and-three call from the Thief River Falls 14 with 1:18 left. Halfback Steve Schiller recovered a fumbled handoff on third down before Chichy sent Loven around the right side on fourth down.

"I'd call the same play," said Chichy, a first-year Red River head coach who might have been second-guessed for leaving the power dives that the Prowlers were obviously having trouble handling. "I thought we'd catch them (Prowlers) looking in the middle. It was a good play. He slipped on the wet grass, that's all. Nothing you can do about that."

Thief River Falls defensive back Jon Stimac came up with one of those "big plays" that Schmitz referred to on that final drive when Mike Peterson broke out of the Red River backfield with 3:53 remaining. Stimac managed to get by a blocker to make a diving, possibly game-saving tackle on Peterson at the Thief River Falls 47 after a 12-yard gain.

For the game, Red River's ground game bettered Thief River Falls' attack by just a 247-243 margin, but the Prowlers accumulated 134 of those yards on the touchdown runs by Wiebolt and Ose.

It might be considered an upset in some circles, but Schmitz didn't think so. "I'm not surprised. We thought we could win the ball game," he said.

Part of the Prowlers' defensive problems were caused by the absence of senior Steve Jorstad, an experienced outside linebacker who missed the game because of illness. "We definitely missed Steve," acknowledged Schmitz.

The Prowlers will be at Detroit Lakes this Friday while Red River faces East Grand Forks.

FACING A PASS rush, Thief River Falls quarterback Scott Wiebolt looked for a receiver downfield during Friday night's high school football game against Grand Forks Red River on the Thief River Falls athletic field. The Prowlers, with Wiebolt scoring on a 76-yard first quarter touchdown and rushing for 105 yards on the night, defeated the Roughriders 12-7 in the 1980 season opener for both ball clubs.

FULLBACK SCOTT KEZAR took a handoff from Thief River Falls quarterback Scott Wiebolt and was immediately met by a Grand Forks Red River defender Friday during the 1980 high school football season opener for both teams on the Thief River Falls athletic field. The Prowlers knocked off the Roughriders 12-7. They'll be at Detroit Lakes this Friday.

Tennis Team Beats Rams By 4-1 Score

A busy first week of the 1980 season was completed Thursday by the Lincoln high school girls tennis team as the Prowlers defeated Roseau 4-1.

The week began with a 3-2 loss at East Grand Forks Monday and also included a 3-2 win at Moorhead Tuesday.

Remaining unbeaten with wins at Roseau were freshman Kim Lawrenz, a 9-3 nine-game pro set winner over Julie Skoglund at No. 3 singles, and the Prowlers' No. 1 doubles team of junior Nancy Swanson and eighth grader Michelle Olson. They beat Shelly Moren and Lori Gislason 9-5.

Thief River Falls was a 4-1 winner over Roseau in junior varsity competition.

"All of our kids are playing well right now," mentioned Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "We just hope to keep making progress."

Thief River Falls' season-opening string of road trips continues this week when the Prowlers play at Mahnomen Tuesday at 3:30 p.m., then participate in a tournament at Brainerd Friday and Saturday.

1980 State Waterfowl Season To Open On Saturday, Oct. 4

Minnesota's waterfowl hunting season will open at noon Saturday, Oct. 4, and close at sunset November 22, the Department of Natural Resources announced. The length of season and duck bag limits are the same as last year except for canvasbacks and redheads.

Daily duck bag limit will be five with a possession limit of 10. No more than three mallards may be included in the daily bag, and of those no more than two may be hens. In addition, no more than one black duck and two wood ducks may be included with the daily bag.

Possession limit may include no more than six mallards (only four of which may be hens), two black ducks and four wood ducks.

Daily limit may also include one canvasback and one redhead and the possession limit allows two cans and two redheads. Last year only one can or one redhead was allowed each day or in possession.

No hunting of canvasback will be allowed in the counties of Polk, Mahnomen, Douglas, Pope and Sibley. The Mississippi river bottoms from Hastings to the Iowa border will also be closed to hunting of canvasback. Last year these same areas were also closed to the taking of redheads but that is not the case this fall.

Shooting hours, except for the noon opening, will be one-half hour before sunrise to 4 p.m. through October 17 and until sunset thereafter.

The duck regulations are based on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service proposal to stabilize duck season frameworks at the 1979 season level for five years. During that time the U.S. and Canada will study the relationships among hunting regulations, duck harvests and duck populations.

Stabilized regulations will help waterfowl biologists evaluate the various factors affecting ducks, particularly the impact of bag limits and season length. The experiment could be terminated early if duck population levels indicate a need for more restrictive regulations.

The goose season will run concurrent with the duck season throughout most of the state. However, an extra 20 days of hunting will be allowed in southeastern Minnesota.

Bag limit on geese will be five per day and 10 in possession with restrictions on Canada and white-fronted geese. Limits on Canada's and white-fronts will be two daily and four in possession except in the Lac qui Parle zone where it is one daily and four in possession on Canada's.

A quota of 5,500 geese has been established by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for the Lac qui Parle goose zone in western Minnesota. The zone is smaller this year and the new boundaries are described in the waterfowl hunting regulations.

This year the Lac qui Parle goose zone has been added to the steel shot regulations and there is no gauge exemptions this year in the steel shot regulations.

Copies of the regulations detailing the fine points will be in the hands of license agents well in advance of the opening. Hunters are urged to read the regulations carefully since they are rather lengthy and involved.

In addition to a small game license, hunters age 18 to 64 inclusive will need a state migratory waterfowl stamp, and all hunters 16 years of age and older will also need a federal waterfowl stamp.

Officials said Minnesota, unlike the Dakotas and Canadian prairies, produced a good hatch of ducks this year and the fall flight should be as good or better than last season.

PLATE UMPIRE Paul Williams took a close look before making a call Wednesday; ruling that TRF Merchants base runner Wayne Huseth was tagged out by Swenson Plumbing catcher Gordy Markstrom in the second inning of the American League playoff finals in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. Huseth tried to score from second base on a single to center field by Bill Dicken, but was thrown out on a perfect strike to the plate by outfielder Brad Kosel. TRF Merchants won the game 13-3 to force a second title game in the double-elimination event, but Swenson Plumbing took the doubleheader nightcap and the playoff crown with an 8-7 ten-inning victory.

Action Realty Wins Playoffs

Schmidts jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead, but Action Realty roared back with six runs in the second inning en route to a 10-7 win Wednesday in the championship of the 1980 Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league playoffs.

Larry Coltom beat out an infield base hit with one out in the bottom of the first inning to start things for Schmidts. He moved to second on Jim Sethre's sacrifice bunt and scored when Don Foss singled into left field. Mark Haats followed with a two-run home run over the right field fence for a 3-0 start.

But in the top of the second, Wayne Liden drew a one-out walk, Scott Bergland singled and Kelly Gutterud walked to load the bases. Nick Drees then cleared the sacks with a three-run double to left field to tie the game.

That wasn't the end of the Action Realty second inning, however. Jeff Ulrich was hit by a pitch and Wayne Liden singled for a 4-3 Action Realty lead. Ron Ostby's base hit made it 6-3.

Schmidts got a run back in the bottom of the third and the two teams traded fourth inning runs — with Drees hitting a lead off homer — before Action Realty bounced two hits, a wild pitch and two walks together for a three-run fifth and a 10-5 game.

Completing the game in impressive fashion, Action Realty pitcher Al Erickson struck out the side in the bottom of the seventh.

AFTER HITTING a two-run first inning home run over the right field fence, Schmidts' Mark Haats found teammates lined up on the third base line to offer him congratulations during Wednesday's Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league playoff finals against Action Realty. Larry Coltom, Howard Dalager and Jim Sethre were among the Schmidts players greeting Haats. Schmidt jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead but Action Realty rallied for a 10-7 title-clinching victory in the double-elimination event.

Deer Permit Deadline Is September 15

Hunters were reminded by the DNR today that two antlerless permit areas have been added in the area in Zone 2 shown as bucks-only in the 1980 big game regulations.

The area north of U.S. highway 2 has been designated permit area 598 and that south of U.S. highway 2 is now permit area 599. Four hundred permits will be issued in 598 and 800 will be issued in 599.

Hunters were also reminded that those who wish to apply for a permit to take antlerless deer must have their applications in to the Department of Natural Resources no later than Sept. 15.

A drawing will be conducted to select the successful applicants. Hunters are required to purchase a deer license before submitting an application for the drawing.

ACTION REALTY third baseman Ron Ostby stretched, but couldn't reach a one-bounce infield single into the hole at shortstop by Schmidts' Larry Coltom in the first inning of Wednesday's Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league playoff finals. Action Realty came out a 10-7 winner to complete the five-team, double-elimination event in unbeaten fashion.

Swenson Plumbing Is Slow Pitch Champion

Finals of the double-elimination American League playoffs in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association turned into a doubleheader affair Wednesday when the once-beaten TRF Merchants knocked off unbeaten Swenson Plumbing 13-3 to start the night. But Swenson Plumbing bounced back for an 8-7 victory in the championship-deciding nightcap that went 10 innings.

National League portion of the playoffs went to First Northwestern Insurance Agency a week earlier following a 4-2 final game victory over First Federal.

Merchants 13, Swenson 3

TRF Merchants took a 1-0 third inning lead and expanded it with three straight four-run innings en route to a 13-3 first game victory.

It became 5-0 in the fourth when the TRF Merchants scored on four constructive bases-loaded situations: a bases-loaded walk; a bases-loaded error; a bases-loaded single to left field by Arden Hyland; and a bases-loaded fielder's choice play on a ball hit by Wayne Huseth.

The fifth inning featured a three-run home run by Don Grabowska that bounced out of the glove of leftfielder Gordy Collins and fell over the fence.

A two-run shot inside the bag at third base by Rick Nelson highlighted the TRF Merchants' four-run sixth.

Swenson Plumbing, held to just one hit through five innings, was scoreless until the sixth.

Swenson 8, Merchants 7

Terry Sullivan singled over the drawn-in outfield with one out and runners at first and third in the bottom of the tenth inning to give Swenson Plumbing an 8-7 championship game triumph.

The see-saw game was forced into extra innings when Swenson Plumbing scored twice in the bottom of the seventh to gain a 5-5 tie. Gary Laidley's bad-hop, two-out single drove in the tying run.

Both teams scored single runs in the eighth and the ninth inning was scoreless.

The TRF Merchants went ahead 7-6 in the top of the tenth, but lost it in the bottom of the inning.

Don Grabowska hit three home runs for the losers — all solo shots.

Approximately 800,000 snowmobilers have received formal safety training, including both classroom and field instruction.

Cards, Nordics Are Shut Out

Clearbrook surprised Middle River 20-12 Friday in area nine-man high school football action.

Elsewhere on the opening day of the 1980 football season in Minnesota, Plummer dropped a 28-0 decision at Erskine and Marshall County Central was shut out by Hallock 14-0.

Weather hit two other North Tri County Conference games. Heavy rains during the day forced postponement of the scheduled Goodridge home opener against Mentor while rain and lightning Friday afternoon put a stop to the Oklee-Grygla game at half-time at Grygla.

Oklee will return to Grygla Tuesday for the second half of the suspended game, with the Eagles leading the Bobcats 14-12. The Goodridge vs. McIntosh-Winger game is tentatively rescheduled for Tuesday night.

Hallock 14
Newfolden 0

Marshall County Central fumbled the ball nine times and produced just 30 yards worth of offense in being shut out by Hallock 14-0 in a non-conference game at Hallock.

"We didn't do anything on offense," pointed out Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart, who was watching his team make its debut in nine-man football. "Defensively we played fairly well."

Linebackers Steve Boe and Gordy Collin led the Nordics' defense with 14 and 13 tackles, respectively. Collin also came up with an interception. Other leading tacklers were Jeff Dahl, with 12; Dan Maki, 11; and Nate Stokke, nine.

The Nordics will be at Greenbush Friday.

Four different players scored touchdowns as Erskine defeated visiting Plummer 28-0 in North Tri County Conference play.

"Our first team defense didn't play bad at all," pointed out Plummer coach Gary Brantl. "But I was disappointed in our offense. I thought we would be able to move the ball better than what we did."

Defensively Brantl cited the play of outside linebackers Troy Gustafson, a freshman, and Kyle Gustafson, a sophomore, along with 5-3, 111-pound senior defensive back Brian Delage, who was credited with 12 solo tackles; defensive end Karl Sorenson, who was in on nine tackles; and Rosten, a defensive back who made six tackles and broke up eight passes.

Plummer will host Mentor in the Cardinals' home opener Friday.

Most Schools Not Taking Action To Reduce Drug Abuse

by Jeanne Hanson
"U" M News Service

As the schoolhouse doors swing open this fall, will they fan billows of cigarette smoke from third graders, jostle the Scotch bottles of junior high students, and witness the sale of the new Persian heroin among twelfth graders?

Although most students still do not use drugs, even in high school, about five per cent are hard-core users, and the number experimenting with drugs continues to increase even among younger elementary students.

"Yet most schools don't have anything approaching an adequate prevention effort," said Joseph Hendrick, education adviser to the National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA) in Bethesda, MD. The reasons: schools are running out of money and energy, and parents, who are often reluctant to admit a serious community drug problem, fail to push them into more than a token effort.

The biggest thing now in the schools that do offer drug education is "affective education," said Ardyth Norem-Hebeisen, professor of social, psychological—and philosophical foundations of education at the University of Minnesota. This involves teaching kids how to cope emotionally with all kinds of pressure — what to do when their friends tease them, and so on. Kids also learn how to clarify their values, communicate and make decisions better, and build up their self-esteem.

Also becoming more common are peer counseling programs (where kids advise each other about drugs) and cross-age tutoring (where older students advise younger ones), Hendrick said. Exploration of alternatives to drug use such as jogging, meditation, music and other arts is also increasing, but is subject to budget cutbacks, said Mark Hochhauser, professor of school health education at the university.

Scare tactics — such as movies about drug-crazed college students jumping out of high-rise dormitories — are out, the experts agree.

Effective drug education programs can help prevent future problems for kids. There is some evidence that young drug users and abusers, even if they give up heavy drug use — as many do — grow up to have problems as adults. And drugs are one key reason for the relatively high dropout rate of 16 per cent among white middle-class college students, Norem-Hebeisen said.

The wrong kind of drug education can actually increase drug use, though, Hendrick said. "Just presenting drug information, especially in once or twice-a-year assembly programs, seems to stimulate interest in drugs and encourage the risk-taking tendencies of young adults," he said. And starting drug education too early in elementary school can have the same effect, Norem-Hebeisen said.

Younger children can be helped at home, she added. Parents can show them how to stand up for their own values, understand others who have drug problems, and respect the health of their own bodies. They can point out good and bad examples of drug use among people the children know, stress that drugs change their bodies in ways that might hurt them, and provide lots of warmth and support to build self-esteem.

Studies show that sixth grade is probably the best time for a school drug education program, Norem-Hebeisen said. Kids are aware of drugs then and some are experimenting, but most haven't really decided what position to take on them. Students smoking cigarettes by sixth grade are especially good candidates for drug education, since smoking is a good predictor of later drug use. "Cigarettes act both as a stimulant and a depressant. And kids apparently learn through them how to adjust their moods with drugs," Norem-Hebeisen said.

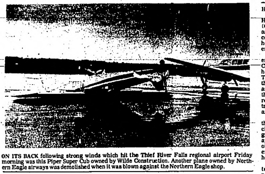
The best approach to drug education in late elementary school depends on the drug experience of the students, she said. If students have little drug experience by sixth grade, giving them basic information on drugs seems to prevent further usage in the future. Drug information plus discussion on how to make decisions seems to work best for children in that age group with greater experience.

Programs that skip the facts entirely, focusing solely on how to communicate or make decisions, tend to increase drug usage among elementary students, according to Norem-Hebeisen. And courses that deal only with "street drugs" and not with drugs like alcohol and caffeine are perceived as hypocritical, Hochhauser added.

Hendrick said parents who want more information or who want to help set up a drug education program in their schools should write for the booklet "Peers, Parents, and Pot," from the NIDA Clearinghouse, Bethesda, MD 20014, or contact the National Association of Parents for Drug Free Youth at 605 Palm Circle, Naples, FL 33940.

The Times—A Great Gift!

THESE SUNFLOWERS north of the Kratka bridge east of Thief River Falls bowed to see their reflections Friday after several inches of rain fell in the area. While most sunflower fields seemed to withstand wind and rain quite well, one field just northeast of St. Hilaire had quite a large area nearly flattened. Winds up to 75 miles per hour were recorded at the Thief River Falls regional airport about 10:05 a.m. Friday.



ON ITS BACK following strong winds which hit the Thief River Falls regional airport Friday morning was this Piper Super Cub owned by Wilde Construction. Another plane owned by Northern Eagle airways was demolished when it was blown against the Northern Eagle shop.

Hanson Uses CETA Help At Boarding Home

Lyle Hanson, owner-administrator of Hanson's boarding home, 1023 North Dewey, Thief River Falls, is happy when his residents move out. It's not that he doesn't like them. The home is for mentally retarded adults. When they become self-sufficient, they are encouraged to leave the home and live on their own.

Hanson isn't new to his work. He has lived and worked closely with the home's residents since he was 15, when his parents became the administrators. At that time the home provided board and care for the elderly. "I had a lot of grandparents in those day," Hanson recalled. Gradually, the home became a residence for mentally retarded adults.

Other things changed as well. "My parents used to do all the work themselves. Today 12 part-time and full-time people are needed to handle the expanded and more sophisticated workload," Hanson said.

As the staff increased, Hanson found that CETA, (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act), a local community program, could be helpful as a source of new employees.

Hanson's staff includes two employees he hired through CETA. One is Ben Wold, the home's maintenance man. The other is Rosemary Olson, the housekeeper. Both Ben and Rosemary began as on-the-job trainees with CETA reimbursing Hanson for the training expenses. Now both are full-time employees.

"Finding employees through CETA helps financially," Hanson said, "and it gives me exposure to more job applicants than I would have otherwise. With the expenses employers face today, CETA helps ease the burden.

"Ben and Rosemary interact a lot with the residents," Hanson said. "They get along as if they were all part of one family."

For more information about CETA, contact the Thief River Falls CETA Center, 1904 East Greenwood Drive, 681-7350. A schedule of office hours at Greenbush, Grygla, Hallock, Roseau, Warren, Warroad, Middle River, Karlstad and Lake Bronson also can be obtained from the Thief River Falls office.

Thief River Falls CETA center is operated by the Minnesota department of economic security.

Kremer, Stumpf Race Holds Primary Election Interest

Primary election contest between Jim Kremer of Thief River Falls and LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer will be decided Tuesday when voters in District 1B go to the polls to cast their ballots. The race between Stumpf and Kremer for state representative candidacy is about the only primary election interest in Pennington county.

In Marshall county's fourth district, however, a four-way race will take place for county commissioner. Incumbent Percy Stokke is opposed by Marlowe Myer, Lowell W. Lindemoen and Marcella Gonsorowski. Two of the four will be eliminated in the balloting with the two receiving the highest number of votes to meet in the general election November 4.

All cities and townships in Marshall county except Warren will vote on the state building code at the primary election, adding some interest to the voting. Warren has already adopted the code and therefore is exempt from the voting, according to Charles Cheney, county auditor.

The Stumpf-Kremer campaign on the DFL ballot has been one of the most active primary election campaigns here in recent years. Stumpf received the DFL endorsement over Kremer at the district endorsing convention, but it took a number of ballots to reach the decision.

After some deliberation, Kremer decided to try to become the DFL candidate for state representative in District 1B through the primary election process. He has campaigned vigorously and his efforts have been countered by an intensified effort by Stumpf and the DFL party.

All polls in Pennington county will remain open until 8 p.m. Thief River Falls polls will open at 7 a.m. but polling places in townships and other cities may have different hours. Election notices published in the Times have established the voting times and places for a number of these precincts.

One major change will be noted in Thief River Falls voting Tuesday. Voters from the second ward will vote at the city auditorium instead of the Masonic hall. Third ward voting will also take place at the city auditorium as it has in the past. First ward polling place is Northrop school, fourth ward is Knox elementary school and fifth ward is Franklin middle school.

Meeting with city election judges, county auditor C. W. Rodekuhr and city clerk Jerry Wigness is being held at 3 p.m. today (Wednesday) in the city auditorium. Township clerks will meet with the auditor in the county commissioners' room at the courthouse Thursday at either 3 p.m. or 7:30 p.m. Ballots will be distributed and election procedures reviewed at the meetings.

Voters are once again reminded that they may not split their ballots in the primary election. They need not vote for all offices on either the Independent Republican or Democrat Farmer-Labor side of the ballot, but they may vote for candidates of only one party.

Floral arrangements in shades of pink, maroon and white graced the altar and surrounded the wedding candles. Ribbon bows marked the pews.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in an old-fashioned, ivory lace gown with an empire bodice with long sleeves and a sheer yoke with a high neckline. Two panels of lace complemented the front of the skirt. Creating back interest were buttons and a chapel-length train. A juliet headpiece of matching lace held her fingertip veil, edged with wide lace. She carried a combination of fresh and silk flowers in pink and white, accented with babies' breath and greenery.

Mary Ferguson was the bride's personal attendant.

Maid of honor was Cathy Ehlenz, Spring Lake Park, a friend since high school. Bridesmaids were Mindy Gould, Florida, a college friend; Karin Wendt, St. Cloud; Susan Wendt, Zumbrota; and Jane Wendt, White Bear Lake, sisters of the bride. Their ivory colored gowns with spaghetti straps featured an overlay of ivory sheer with clusters of pink roses. They carried bouquets of silk flowers featuring carnations, daisies and mixed flowers in shades of pink and maroon.

Dan Reed, a neighbor and friend of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Scott Solheim, East Grand Forks; Mitch Dicken and Murray Dicken, nephews of the groom; and Rick Kezar, a friend. Cory Joppru, a nephew of the groom, was usher. The men of the wedding party wore dark brown tuxedos with ivory ruffled shirts and peach carnation boutonnieres. The groom wore an ivory cutaway tuxedo with dark brown velvet vest and bow tie, and ivory ruffled shirt.

The mother of the bride wore a cream-colored street-length dress with cranberry trim and print. The groom's mother was attired in a pale green gown featuring a beaded empire bodice with full chiffon sleeves. Their corsages were of three cranberry roses, pink and cranberry orchids and white forget-me-nots.

Special guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver J. Wendt, grandparents of the bride, and Mrs. Pearl Sheedy, grandmother of the groom.

Approximately 200 relatives and friends attended the reception that followed at the local Country club. Serving as hosts and hostesses were the groom's brothers-in-law and sisters: Bo and Patti Dicken and Roger and Pinky Vaughan. Janice Kotok registered the guests and Dawn Joppru, niece of the groom, and Lisa Arnold served the punch.

The wedding cake was a creation of three chocolate and white cakes, iced in white and decorated with garlands, stringwork and colored daisies. They were connected by strings of pearls. Topping the side cakes were white doves backed by pearlized hearts. The center cake was topped by a single bell. The cake was cut and served by Connie Wendt, cousin of the bride, and Josephine Robinson, aunt of the groom. Virginia Wendt and Jean Helgeson, aunts of the bride and groom, presided at the coffee service. Jeane Wendt and Barb Wendt, cousins of the bride, were at the gift table.

The bride is a graduate of White Bear high school, attended UMD for one year and St. Cloud State university for two years, and was employed at Best Western. The groom, a graduate of Lincoln high school, Northland Community college and the St. Cloud State university with a BA in music, was employed at the Eagles. He is currently employed at Bodin's Keyboard Center in Minneapolis. Photo, Bonnie and Greg Sampson, Northwood, N.D.

Library Co-op Meeting Set Here Sept. 11

Northern Lights Library Network (NLLN), an intertype library cooperative, is being organized in the region.

Interested persons are invited to an informational meeting between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m., September 11, at the Northwest Regional Library in Thief River Falls.

The Network, a first in this area, is a voluntary association of various types of libraries. Its purpose is to improve library service in the northwest region of Minnesota. It does not duplicate or replace existing libraries, but provides a vehicle by which libraries can coordinate their activities in a cost-effective manner.

Northern Lights Library Network is one of a statewide system of multicounty, multitype cooperatives as provided by Minnesota law in 1979. During the eight to 12 month planning period participants are to assess needs and resources of their libraries and draw up their own plans for strengthening services through cooperative efforts. A citizens' governing board and an advisory committee representing each type of library have been formed to initiate these activities.

To date, 53 libraries have chosen to participate in the planning period. They include three special libraries, seven academic libraries, thirty-two school libraries, and eleven public libraries and library systems. Included are the counties of Becker, Beltrami, Cass, Clay, Clearwater, Crow Wing, Douglas, Grant, Hubbard, Kittson, Marshall, Mahnomen, Norman, Ottertail, Pennington, Polk, Pope, Red Lake, Roseau, Stevens, Traverse, Wadena and Wilkin.

Purpose of the planning period is to draft an application for funds to carry out the desired programs. Planning and implementation funds have been apportioned among the seven library regions from appropriations of the Minnesota Legislature and from federal Library Services and Construction Act funds. These funds provide a unique opportunity for libraries of various kinds of work together to design improved services specifically for their own communities.

More information is available through the NLLN office in Detroit Lakes — the headquarters for the NLLN.

Guide To Tours Of Fall Colors Is Available

More than 40 fall color driving tours statewide are outlined in the 1980 fall color guide available now from the Minnesota tourism bureau. A calendar of events for September and October is also part of the autumn publication.

Following recommendations of local chambers of commerce, driving tours to view fall leaves were mapped for the entire state. Traditional scenic drives like the north shore of Lake Superior and highway 61 following the Mississippi river south of the Twin Cities are included along the routes on less traveled highways that are favorites of the local residents.

Copies are available free from the Minnesota Tourist Information Center, 480 Cedar St., St. Paul, MN 55101. Minneapolis - St. Paul metro area residents can call 296-5029 Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Minnesota residents outside the Twin Cities area can call toll-free 1-800-652-9747. Residents of the continental United States excluding Minnesota may call toll-free 1-800-328-1461 to request a copy of the fall color guide.

WORLD'S MOST PREVALENT DISEASF

What is the world's most prevalent disease? If your answer is the common cold - you're wrong! Tooth decay is the most univeral disease in the world. Only a minute fraction of the world's people are free of it. Only 2 per cent of the American population has been spared. Earliest cavities show up right after primary teeth erupt. The average 12-year-old already has at least five cavities in permanent teeth. Girls seem to get more cavities than boys; but then, girls get their teeth sooner.

A cavity is a hole in a tooth caused by decay which is produced by the combination of plaque and acid. It doesn't take a few days for trouble to develop. Tooth decay can start in less than 15 minutes after eating. All that is needed are three ingredients; a tooth, bacteria (in dental plaque) and sugar. When the bacteria and sugar meet, acid is formed. When the acid and tooth meet, the acid starts etching a hole in the tooth.

Today's diets, high in refined sugars and carbohydrates, are conducive to decay. But careful and PROMPT oral hygiene procedures after eating will reduce, if not eliminate, the decay-producing activity of the modern diet.

Believes Safe Nuclear Power May Be Reality

Since Three Mile Island, the threat of a nuclear accident has brought nuclear expansion to a halt, but under a bill approved by the House of Representatives recently, Congressman Arlan Stangeland believes "safe nuclear usage may become a reality."

"As a cosponsor of the nuclear safety research, development, and demonstration act, I believe there is an excellent chance of attaining a guarantee of safe nuclear power. This bill establishes a national policy aimed at improving the safety of nuclear power plants through a consolidated program of research, development and demonstration in the department of energy," Rep. Stangeland said.

"It requires the department of energy to take an active and aggressive role in the process of improving nuclear power plant safety, while making it clear that it is the utility companies who have the ultimate responsibility for safe operation of nuclear power plants.

"The results of the program carried out under this bill can be expected to do a great deal in providing the American people with the kind of assurances they are seeking, primarily that the risks from nuclear power plants are acceptably low," he added.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Your editorial titled "Inside Out Argument" in the Monday, August 4 issue of the Times came up in a discussion I had yesterday, so I found a copy of that issue and read your editorial. It is very clear that you support the initiative and referendum amendment. I am opposed to that amendment, but that is not the main reason why I'm writing this letter.

You refer to the Minnesota AFL-CIO as a special interest group. I have to agree with you on that point because the special interest is the working women and men in this state. Can you name any other group of association that lobbies to improve unemployment and workmen's compensation benefits, raise the minimum wage, improve safety in the work place, and other programs to help the working class of people in this state?

By the way, to find special interest groups that are better financed than the AFL-CIO, all you have to do is look at the employer and manufacturing associations.

You also show your support for right-to-work laws. I quote from your editorial, "take right-to-work laws for example. Polls have shown the majority of Minnesotans believe in the right of the individual to work without joining or paying fees to a union." This sounds good, doesn't it? Then, will you tell me why the people who don't want to join or pay dues to a union are so willing to accept wages and benefits negotiated in a union contract and these same people sure want union protection when they get into trouble with the boss or have a grievance they want handled by the union.

Before a union is recognized as the bargaining agent to represent a group of workers, a majority of the workers must vote in favor of union. Federal law requires a union to represent and negotiate for all workers in that unit and to process all grievances for the employees in that unit whether or not everyone joins and pays dues to the union. Why aren't you opposed to that federal law?

I say that if everyone in a group of employees is going to get all wages and benefits negotiated by the union and be represented and have their grievances processed by the union, then everyone in that group should be required to join and pay dues to the union. If the person wants the option to not join, then I say the federal law should be changed so the union has no obligation whatsoever to the non-member.

Can you tell me why, in the states that have "right-to-work" laws, the average wage for the working class of people is much lower than in states without "right-to-work" laws? That is why it should be called the "right-to-work-for-less" law.

Traffic Safety Teaching Tips For Parents

With most schools starting the week before of after Labor day, state public safety commissioner John Sopsic is reminding children, their parents and motorists to "have a safe-accident-free school year."

Sopsic said parents must play a key role in teaching youngsters good traffic safety habits. The best time to do the teaching is before school starts, but the effort is worthwhile at any time.

Specific suggestions are:

+ Help children learn a safe route to school;

+ Have children wear reflective tape on outer garments;

+ Recognize and obey school patrols and school speed limits;

+ Be aware of the increased number of motorcycles, bikes and mopeds on state streets and highways;

+ Think about safety as an integral and important aspect of a comfortable and stress-free life.

GARDEN PRODUCE reminiscent of the Tri-County fair held in Goodridge in 1919 was on display at commemoration of the event Saturday. Entries of garden items, flowers, handicrafts and crops were on display in the old gymnasium at the Goodridge school. Goodridge area historical society's museum across the street from the school was also open during the day and various collections were on exhibit and demonstrations presented at the city hall.

Voter Care Is Stressed For Primary Tues.

Voters are cautioned that their entire ballot can be disqualified if they vote for candidates of more than one party at the September 9 primary.

"Voters must be extremely careful that they heed the warning at the top of each party ballot," says Joan Anderson Growe, secretary of state.

The warning to voters states, "You cannot split your ballot. If you vote for candidates of more than one party, your ballot will be rejected."

Growe said, "Minnesota voters can decide, in the secrecy of the voting booth, which party they wish to vote for; but it is very important that they recognize that they may only vote for candidates of one party at the primary."

Growe also urged unregistered voters to take the opportunity to register and vote on election day. To register on election day, a person must provide one of the following valid documents which lists the voter's current address: A Minnesota driver's license, permit or ID card; a student ID card, fee statement or registration card; an ineffective registration notice from the county auditor.

A vote may also register on election day by having a person who is registered in the precinct sign an oath vouching for the voter's residence.

The first public employment office was in New York City in 1834, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

Now that both the Democratic and Republican conventions are behind us, the talk in Washington, as it usually is before an election, is "Tax-cut."

Recently, the Finance Committee, of which I am a member, agreed to a $39 billion tax cut for fiscal year 1981. I voted for the tax cut in the Finance Committee. But if the tax cut is not combined with a reduction in federal spending, then all this tax cut will do is add to the federal deficit and make inflation worse. We need to cut government spending as well as taxes if we are ever going to revive our economy. As things are right now, the inflation tax is far worse than the income tax.

The $39 billion tax cut is the first step toward beginning the necessary process of reforming our tax system. But the average American worker cannot expect much relief unless the Congress can limit federal spending which would give every person relief from both inflation and high taxes. This tax cut will only be more inflationary if it is not tied to sound economic spending policies.

Four years ago, when Jimmy Carter took office, the public paid almost $300 billion in taxes each year to Uncle Sam. Now, just four years later, that amount has more than doubled. Next year we will pay over $600 billion to the federal government; taxes have risen more under this president than they did under the first 38 presidents.

If immediate action is not taken to cut government spending and charge our current tax laws, taxes will rise to over $1 trillion by 1985. Your income would have to go up by thousands of dollars just to maintain the same standard of living you have today.

The spiral has to stop. A worker gets a pay increase to keep up with inflation, and that increase throws him or her into a higher tax bracket. Many times this actual pay increase ends up becoming a real loss.

In my travels around Minnesota, I have been talking about the "21-31 solution." My proposal will index inflation out of the tax rates and limit government spending at the same time. The part of my solution which limits federal spending is based on the way we all live. Only this time it is the government which must follow the example set by the American people it governs. The government must limit its spending to 21 per cent of the gross national product. Your family doesn't spend more than you earn; why should the government?

We have been told by the president to limit our spending, buy only what we can afford, stop buying on credit and limit our borrowing. Meanwhile the government continues to start programs which it cannot afford and continues to borrow. You and I pay for the government's bad economic policies. The price we pay is an inflation rate that has been as high as 18 per cent this year. We cannot control inflation until we control government.

We need a tax cut to give workers more control over the money they earn. Worker's should be making the spending decisions with their paychecks, rather than letting Congress do it with out tax dollars.

The tax cut we constructed in the Finance Committee will also help create new jobs and put the 8 million unemployed Americans back to work again.

But a tax cut without spending cuts will only fuel more inflation and drive us into a deeper recession.

We can and must do both — reform our tax system and cut federal spending.

WIN Program Aids Welfare Recipients

Work Incentive (WIN) program helped find jobs for 3,318 state welfare recipients during the first six months of fiscal year 1980, a 4.5 per cent increase from the comparable period in the previous fiscal year, the Minnesota department of economic security announced.

The WIN program reported an annualized welfare grant reduction of $6,243,788 from Oct. 1, 1979 to March 31, 1980, compared with program costs of $3,377,693.

Grand reductions to WIN participants also lowered public expenditures for Medicaid and Food Stamps. In addition, the state and federal governments gained revenue through income taxes paid by employed WIN registrants.

WIN is a federal program which helps persons receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) to become gainfully employed, reducing or eliminating their dependence on public welfare. The program also provides vocational training and other job-related services.

There were 17,852 WIN registrants in Minnesota as of March 31. This represents a 16 per cent increase over the previous March figure of 15,331.

A total of 8,412 individuals, including 1,056 voluntary participants, entered the state WIN program from Oct. 1, 1979 through March 31, 1980, up 21 per cent from the 6,939 who entered the program during the same period in the previous year.

In addition to those who entered permanent employment, 58 participated in public service employment programs, 181 were in on-the-job training, 449 received basic education or vocational classroom training, 789 were assigned to non-WIN funded training programs and 161 were in non-WIN subsidized employment.

WIN registrants had an average starting wage of $4.06 per hour, up from $3.68 per hour in March 1979.

In Minnesota, 24.3 per cent of those entering the work force took jobs in the clerical field, 9.5 per cent took jobs in benchwork and 8.7 per cent went into the professional, technical or managerial fields.

As of March 31, 6,370 WIN registrants were fully employed, about 13 per cent more than the previous March figure of 5,650. An additional 814 registrants were employed parttime. WIN registrants remain in the program until they are no longer receiving AFDC assistance.

In Minnesota, the WIN program is jointly operated by the Minnesota Department of Economic Security, through its Job Service area offices, and the Minnesota Department of Public Welfare, through county welfare agencies. More than 90 per cent of the state's AFDC recipients live in the 59 counties served by WIN.

"THE ECONOMY Has Gone to the Dogs!" proclaimed the sign on this bicycle in the Goodridge parade Saturday afternoon. The dog shared the bicycle seat with its owner, placing front paws on the youngster's shoulders, and even doing a little trick riding (one foot at a time) to show off.

Sports Boosters Meet Monday

Thief River Falls Sports Boosters club officials are hoping for a good-size turnout Monday when the organization meets at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school cafeteria.

The group, which aids Thief River Falls athletic programs with both financial support and volunteer help, is going to try to draw from a bigger base of people during the 1980-81 school year.

Tentative plans call from club meetings to be held the first and third Monday evening of every month. In the past the club met for weekly noon luncheon meetings. But the weekly format became stale and repetitious. And the noon time slot prohibited a lot of people who might have been interested in the organization from attending the meetings because they couldn't break away from their jobs or other commitments at that time of the day.

The proposed twice-a-month evening meetings should keep the programs fresh and more importantly, will give more people a chance to attend. Teachers, business persons, construction workers, housewives, clerks, office workers, etc., may now be able to fit the meetings into their schedules. The time switch should be well-received by the parents of the athletes — the people who should be most interested and most involved in the programs and organization — who will now have the opportunity to be on hand when coaches address the group.

Head football coaches John Helley of Northland community college and John Schmitz of Lincoln high school are both scheduled to be guest speakers Monday. Schmitz will present game films from the Prowlers' season-opening 12-7 victory over Grand Forks Red River. Helley will discuss the Northmen, who will open their 1980 season that following Saturday, Sept. 13, at home against area rival Crookston, coached by former Lincoln high school head coach Jim Sims.

A new Sports Boosters club board of directors will also be named that night. Refreshments will be served.

There was talk that the Sports Boosters club, which suspended operations last spring amid the contract dispute between the teachers and School District 564, might be disbanded this year. However, interest has picked up and organizers have decided to give it another shot. But the club won't continue without the support of people who are willing to get involved in the program. Beginning Monday you can contribute your support by attending the meeting.

Hunter Education Program

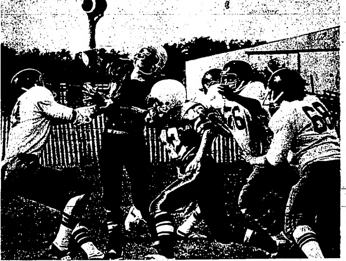
Another program well worth getting involved in is the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) hunter education program which starts tonight (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. at Northland community college.

Sponsored by the Minnesota environmental education board and the Pennington county Sportsmen's club, the program will feature six evening workshop sessions during September and October. The sessions will cover hunting techniques, wildlife management, hunter-landowner relations, outdoor survival, legal aspects of hunting and other hunting-related topics.

Dick Anderson, a well-known speaker and hunter from Fergus Falls, will be on hand to address tonight's first hunter education workshop. He'll talk about his deer hunting experiences and techniques.

We took part in the hunter education series a year ago and wholeheartedly endorse the program. It's informative, it's interesting, it's free and it's a great way to get into the hunting spirit as the fall seasons approach.

And as an added attraction, a watercolor print in limited edition by Minnesota artist Les Kouba is being offered for successful completion of the course.



GRYGLA QUARTERBACK John Nordby was in the grasp of Oklee's Brad Gunderson as he tried to throw a pass in the third quarter of the Eagles-Bobcats North Tri County Conference high school football game completed Tuesday at Grygla. Also involved in the pass rush were Mike Vetteson (76) and Joel Stolaas (68). Grygla fullback Doug Schulz (42) tried to help out with the blocking, but Nordby was lucky just to get the pass away before being brought down in his own end zone. Oklee, trailing 14-12 when the game was suspended Friday afternoon because of heavy rain and lightning, came back to record a 24-14 victory yesterday afternoon.

NCC Has 42 Report For Football

Forty-two players were on hand Monday for the start of 1980 Northland community college preseason football drills.

"Although the team is about eight players smaller than desired and depth may prove to be a problem, the team is impressive and (has) spirit and talent," wrote first-year Northland head coach John Helley in a preseason summary. "All positions are open for the players to earn a starting position at this time and no predictions are forecasted. It is easy to recognize the players that worked out hard this summer and came to play."

Northland's offense will be without the services of Tony Smith, the team's starting quarterback in 1979 and captain-elect of the 1980 offensive squad, but will return sophomores Jeff Schmitz, Thief River Falls; Brian Hourigan, Rutherford, N.J.; and Dan Levenhagen, Lake Bronson. Freshmen prospects include runningback Coby Burslie of McIntosh-Winger, an all-stater in the Minnesota nine-man ranks a year ago; Kenneth Crouch, Inkster, Mich.; Rick Olson, Thief River Falls; Mark Stock, Mahnomen; Dan Cullen, Thief River Falls; Dave Odegaard, Thief River Falls; Mark Stock, Mahnomen; Dan Cullen, Thief River Falls; Dave Odegaard, Thief River Falls; Mike Busse, Mahnomen; Dave Krajsa, Mahnomen; Mike Punton, Graceton; Jeff Canivez, Baudette; Jeff Westberg, Warren; Keith Dyer, Morton, Ill.; Russell Boyer, Badger; Dave Gorski, Lancaster; Jeff Steuck, Thief River Falls; and Mark Erby, New York, N.Y.

The Northland defense will be lead by captain Jeff Reese of Hallock, an MJCAA Northern Division all-conference honorable mention selection in 1979, along with fellow sophomores Jim McCue, Deer Park, N.Y.; Paul Wilcox, Miami, Fla.; Kelly Turgeon, Warren; Bob Benson, Twin Valley; Dan Parent, McIntosh; Blair Spikes, Inkster, Mich.; Scott Chapman, Baudette; Jeff Gobell, Thief River Falls; and Alan Johnson, McIntosh.

Freshmen ticketed for defensive duty include Kerry Hodne, Newfolden; David Lee, Badger; Kevin Malwitz, Plummer; Alan Mattson, Plummer; Steve Eckholm, Donaldson; J. Randy Harrison, Rosemount; Paul Kiecker, McIntosh; Lyndell Knight, Inkster, Mich.; Duane Kjono, Mahnomen; Tom Stecker, Gilbert; Todd Tangen, Fosston; Jim Nyland, Thief River Falls; and Mike Easton, Roseau.

Assistant coach Jon Anderson will put together Northland's offense, with help from student assistant coaches Howard Beito and Joe Kraska. Helley has put assistant coaches Scott Kays and Frank Cornacchoine in charge of Northland's defense.

The Northmen will open their 1980 schedule Saturday, Septl 13, against area rival Crookston, a 1:30 p.m. MJCAA Northern Division ball game on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Prowlers Play Lakers Friday

Buoyed by a confidence-building 12-7 season-opening victory over Grand Forks Red River, the Lincoln high school football team will travel to Detroit Lakes Friday for its first road game of the 1980 season.

"Now they know they can win," noted Thief River Falls head coach John Schmitz after his inexperienced Prowlers surprised the Roughriders. "We feel it (the victory) should keep us going."

Detroit Lakes lost its opener at Fergus Falls 14-0 last Friday, a game scouted for the Prowlers by Gene Jurgens, who left his teaching and coaching posts here just prior to the start of preseason football practice to accept a position in Fergus Falls.

"They threw the ball a lot and that's going to present some problems for us until our young defensive backs get used to seeing the ball coming at them," pointed out Schmitz. "Apparently Fergus must have played some real fine defense because they sure put the ball up in the air."

Dan Douglass, a 151-pound junior, was doing the passing for the Lakers, throwing to ends Tony Matter and Todd Jorenson, slotback Jeff Folkert and runningbacks Jim Piche and Dennis Priem. Matter is the only senior among the group. Priem is a sophomore.

More than happy with the win, Schmitz was still quick to point out there were lots of areas that needed improvement Friday. "We found we still have areas to work on," he explained, "primarily in reacting to keys. We have to learn to react to the situations. And we need to develop consistency."

Linebacker Steve Jorstad and two-way tackle Steve Olson will both be in uniform against the Lakers after missing the Red River game when Jorstad was ill and Olson was bothered by a back problem.

No major line-up changes are planned, according to Schmitz. "It's too early to give up on a player at this stage of the season." The coaches would like to take quarterback Scott Wiebolt out of the defensive backfield to give him a rest, "but we need him as a safety," said Schmitz.

Season openers are scheduled Thursday for the Lincoln sophomore and freshman teams. They'll both be at home that day as the freshmen host East Grand Forks at 4 p.m. and the sophomores entertain Grand Forks Red River at 7.

Lincoln Volleyball Team Beats Lakers But Falls To Ponies

First two outings of the 1980 season produced a 1-1 record for the Lincoln high school volleyball team. The Prowlers opened with a 2-1 victory at Detroit Lakes Friday but dropped a 2-0 decision at Warren Tuesday.

Thief River Falls' season-opening string of road matches will continue Thursday when the Prowlers play at Alvarado. Thief River Falls' home opener will be Tuesday against Fisher, a 7:30 p.m. match in the Lincoln gym.

TRF — Warren

Defending Region 8A champion Warren was an 18-14, 18-14 winner over Thief River Falls Tuesday night in the Ponies' gym.

"Warren looked really good," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss, who was quick to point out that the Prowlers had their bright spots, too, in building an 11-6 first game lead before losing momentum.

"We let it get away from us," explained Stauss. "They have to keep their concentration to 18 points instead of stopping at 12 or 13."

Thief River Falls' serving was good, with the Prowlers putting 92 per cent of their first game serves into play and hitting 83 per cent in the second game.

"We served really well," noted Stauss, singling out co-captain Stacy Ehrenstrom, who had "four real nice kill spikes."

Junior varsity match went to Thief River Falls 8-18, 19-7, 18-12, with Warren taking the C squad match 18-7, 18-6.

TRF — Detroit Lakes

Thief River Falls, after blowing a 12-3 lead and losing the first game 18-13, bounced back to handle Detroit Lakes 18-4, 18-7 for a 2-1 season-opening victory Friday.

"They lost their concentration," explained Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss when talking about the first game collapse.

But strong serving, featuring two ace serves apiece in the second game by Barb Pfeifer and LeAnn Paetznick, carried the Prowlers all night. They were successful on 96 per cent of their serves in the first game, 88 per cent in the second contest and 92 per cent the third time on the court.

"The girls were really placing their serves well," noted Stauss.

Thief River Falls was an easy 18-4, 18-3 junior varsity winner, but Detroit Lakes took the C squad match 18-13, 18-11, 20-18.

City Class Champion . . .

Sjoberg Wins Trap Crown

Stan Sjoberg outlasted Pat Fischer and Gerry Paulson Tuesday in a three-way shoot-off to emerge as city champion in the annual Thief River Falls trap league city class championship shoot at the Marshallton Gun Club.

Paulson hit 19 while Sjoberg and Fischer remained deadlocked with 22s in the first round of the 25-bird shootoffs. A second round draw with 24s necessitated a third round where Sjoberg finally prevailed, 25-24 in the longest shoot-off in the history of the event.

Wayne Smith Named MVP In Fast Pitch

Wayne Smith collected three awards Saturday, including the most valuable player award, to highlight the annual Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league banquet held in the American Legion club rooms.

Smith earned the Dale Thomsen memorial most valuable player award for his 1980 season that featured a .432 batting average, five home runs and 16 runs-batted in. The Action Realty catcher shared the league lead in the home run and RBI departments and was the league's second leading hitter.

Larry Coltom was named as the new league president. Mike Drury was selected vice-president and Dick Bjerken was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Special award winners were Smith, most valuable player award; Drury, highest batting average (.465); Smith and DelRay Beito, co-leaders in home runs; Smith and Jeff Hendrickson, co-leaders in RBI's.

Bjerken, long-time league publicist, was named the first recipient of the new Frank Harger memorial award for meritorious service given to Thief River Falls softball.

Team trophies were presented to regular season pennant winner Coca-Cola and post-season playoff champion Action Realty.

Mike Drury Is Leading Hitter In Fast Pitch

Mike Drury of Coca-Cola finished with a .465 batting average to lead the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league in hitting according to final 1980 statistics announced this week by league publicist Dick Bjerken.

There were five league batters, with a minimum 23 at-bats, who hit .400 or better.

DNR Officials Remind Hunters About Permits

Deer hunters were reminded today by the Department of Natural Resources that antlerless deer permit applications must be properly filled out.

Hunters are required, when filling out their applications for the antlerless drawing, to indicate the permit area in which they desire to hunt. Officials cautioned hunters not to confuse the permit area with the zone.

Applicants are urged to read the big game regulations and application forms carefully before applying for the drawing.

Improperly filled out applications are automatically rejected.

Deadline for permit applications is September 15.

DUCK CAMP PERSONNEL from Jimmy Robinson's St. Ambroise duck club in Manitoba were in Thief River Falls last week following an 83rd birthday party for Robinson in Detroit Lakes the previous night. Robinson, an outdoor writer for many years who is a living legend in reporting of trap shooting and waterfowl populations, was honored by several people who have been guests at his internationally famous camp. Among them is Stan Upham of Thief River Falls. Presentation of the personalized duck boat shown above was made at the birthday party. Frank Lavallee, a guide at Robinson's camps for 43 years, is third from right in the photo above. Other guides are Leonard Lavallee, 21 years; Laurence St. Goddard, 16 years; Raymond Lamerande, two years; Mel St. Goddard, 14 years; Louis Lamerande, 18 years; and Paul Ducharme (not pictured) five years. Paul Lavallee (right) lives in Winnipeg and is an entertainer at the camp.

Robinson Duck Camp Guides Stop In TRF

Frank Lavallee, guide for Jimmy Robinson at his St. Ambroise (Manitoba) duck club for 43 years, has seen many ups and downs in waterfowl numbers during his 70 years of life near the famous Delta marsh.

Lavallee, in town with several other guides at the camp last week following an 83rd birthday party for Robinson in Detroit Lakes, is looking forward to another season of guiding. Robinson, who lives in Minneapolis but spends about a month at the duck club each fall, is a living legend in outdoor and trapshooting writer circles.

While in Thief River Falls the guides were guests of Stan Upham who has been a hunting guest at Robinson's lodge.

Lavallee said he can remember when duck limits were 15 a day and easy to get, with possession limits of 30. Then they were cut to 12 a day and now are about five a day. While duck numbers were high years ago, numbers of geese are now greater than they have ever been in Lavallee's memory.

Frank tells of Robinson's zeal for hunting, to the extent that he once went out on the marsh in the evening and spent the night in a duck boat to be assured of his hunting spot in the morning. The marsh offers 60 square miles of hunting, he said, and reaching the best hunting sometimes requires rowing several miles. Motors are not permitted.

Guiding involves taking one or two hunters in a boat, rowing to the hunting site, setting out about 25 decoys, building a blind, helping to identify ducks for inexperienced hunters, retrieving downed birds, rowing back to the camp and doing camp chores, Frank said. By camp rules, hunters come back in at noon and do not hunt in the afternoon, and any guest who comes in with more than a legal limit is summarily asked to leave the camp and not return.

The guides laughed at Robinson's insistence on always being in the center of any picture taken of him. He says he learned that from Babe Ruth after being on the edge of a group of people photographed with the home run king and later finding he was not on the photo. "Always get in the middle," Ruth advised him.

The St. Ambroise duck club lodge accommodates about 18 people and was built in the early 1960's. It became Robinson's replacement for the Sports Afield camp he established in 1935 at another location on the marsh. Many "big name" people have stayed at the camp, including Clark Gable, Robert Raylor, Mary and Pat Hemingway and others.

"It's a fantastic experience," Upham observed about a stay at the camp. "The marsh is a perfect place to hunt waterfowl — and it is a Ducks Unlimited project. There are many stories told during the evenings at the lodge, and Robinson is at the middle of everything. I hope I have that much enthusiasm when I'm 83."

A study conducted by the University of California revealed that eight per cent of the owners of registered snowmobiles in that state were over 60 years of age.

Schedule

Fri., Sept. 5 — Grygla at Erskine, Gonvick at Middle River, Goodridge at McIntosh-Winger, Clearbrook at Oklee, Mentor at Plummer.

What could go into the record books as the longest game in the history of the North Tri County Conference was completed Tuesday afternoon when Oklee scored a pair of second half touchdowns to defeat Grygla 24-14 in a nine-man high school football game that began four days earlier.

Grygla surprised the favored Bobcats by building a 14-12 halftime lead Friday afternoon before heavy rains, which flooded the Grygla field, and lightning forced officials to suspend the contest. It was resumed with the second half kickoff Tuesday.

Another season-opening North Tri County Conference game hit by Friday's weather was the scheduled Mentor vs. Goodridge contest at Goodridge. But that one never got started and has been rescheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 23.

In games that were completed, McIntosh-Winger opened with a key 26-6 decision over Gonvick in a battle of preseason conference favorites, Clearbrook upset Middle River 20-12 and Erskine shut out Plummer 28-0.

Gonvick and Middle River will both be trying to bounce back into the title picture Friday when they meet at Middle River. Elsewhere Friday, Grygla will be at Erskine, Goodridge at McIntosh-Winger, Clearbrook at Oklee and Mentor at Plummer.

Grygla 14

Short second half touchdown runs by Richard Bronken and Ricky Dulka erased a two-point halftime deficit and lifted Oklee past Grygla 24-14 Tuesday.

Asked what effect the extra-long halftime had on his team, Oklee coach Dale Svaren smiled and said, "It didn't hurt. We weren't playing very well Friday. It was like two different ball games."

Oklee went ahead yesterday when Bronken used a quarterback sneak to score from inside the one-yard line in the third quarter.

A fumbled Grygla handoff was recovered by Oklee's Joel Stolaas at the Grygla 15-yard line to start the fourth quarter, a play that led to Dulka's game-clinching two-yard touchdown plunge.

Oklee proved to be its own worst enemy as the Bobcats accumulated 15 penalties, fumbled five times, threw an interception and had three successful two-point conversions erased because of penalties.

Bronken finished 6-for-12 passing for 112 yards, including a 50-yard second quarter touchdown pass to Brad Gunderson. Paul Gunderson led the Bobcats' 167-yard rushing game with 67 yards.

Trap League Completes Its Post-Season Field

Final week of regular season shooting was completed Tuesday in the Thief River Falls trap league at the Marshallton Gun Club when Auto Body Repair and Hartz Wholesale gained post-season league championship shoot-off berths.

The line-up for Monday's 6:30 p.m. season finale will feature Northern State Bank, Pizza Hut, Wilson Brothers, Arctic-Dunrud Trucking, Auto Body Repair and Hartz Wholesale.

Top four teams in the league's final first half season point standings — Northern State Bank, Pizza Hut, Wilson Brothers and Arctic-Dunrud Trucking — were to be joined for the post-season league championship shoot-off by the top four second half season qualifiers. But Wilson Brothers and Northern State Bank finished 1-2 Tuesday to reduce next week's field from eight to six teams.

Wilson Brothers, involved in a third place tie with Arctic-Dunrud Trucking in the final first half season standings, one point behind co-leaders Northern State Bank and Pizza Hut, won the second half season title last night with a 116-112 victory over Triple J Trap Co.

Northern State Bank settled for second place, one point behind the leaders, with a 118-117 win over Arctic-Dunrud Trucking.

Auto Body Repair beat First Northwestern State Bank Southside 113-105 for a post-season championship shoot-off berth, with Hartz Wholesale making the field despite a regular season-ending 116-115 loss to Pizza Hut.

OKLEE RUNNINGBACK Paul Gunderson benefited from some strong blocking and carried for a first down to the Grygla nine-yard line in the third quarter of Tuesday's North Tri County Conference football action at Grygla. The Bobcats scored four plays later from the one-yard line to take an 18-14 lead in the game that was suspended Friday because of heavy rain and lightning. Ricky Dulka (62) and Matt Radniecki (50) helped clear the area on Gunderson's run. Oklee went on to claim a 24-14 win.

Bird Populations Present Problems

A shaving cream manufacturer once used terse jingles printed on signs tacked to fenceposts along highways for advertising. Listen birds, one sequence read, "These signs cost money . . . roost awhile . . . but don't get funny!"

"If birds could read signs," director Lynn Greenwalt of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said, "it would solve some horrendous problems we have throughout our country. How fine it would be if a No Trespassing sign would protect a farmer's cornfield from blackbirds; or a Detour sign would shunt birds around airport runways; or an Off Limits To Gulls sign would save the remaining tern nesting colonies on an East Coast barrier island."

As it is, Fish and Wildlife Service scientists have spent years studying bird habits and populations in an effort to find effective, environmentally safe methods of reducing bird damage. Most of the techniques developed are designed to frighten birds away, but the service has also conducted research on humane, selective methods of killing birds when it is necessary to reduce their numbers in local areas.

"We avoid it whenever possible but there are times when we have no alternative but to reduce bird populations," Greenwalt said. That's a polite way of saying that we have to kill birds, often lots of birds. With our marvelous system of refuges, fish hatcheries, habitat restoration programs and law enforcement activities, we sometimes like to think of ourselves as strictly a wildlife producing and protecting agency. However, there are many instances where populations of some animals — including birds — must be controlled for their own good, for the good of other animals, or for the good of humans."

Actually, bird-control programs began with the earliest settlers. Blackbirds, which had always subsisted on insects and weed seeds, quickly turned to the far more convenient crops of the colonists. The depredations must have been serious. The Massachusetts Bay colony established laws in 1667 requiring citizens to help reduce blackbird numbers. One law even withheld the marriage license of any single male until he had fulfilled his quota of six birds.

During the early spring when their numbers are at a low ebb, there are about 430 million blackbirds in the United States, according to annual surveys of winter roosts by the Fish and Wildlife Service. After nesting, their numbers more than double to 900 million. A typical flock contains about 40 per cent red-winged blackbirds, 22 per cent grackles, 20 per cent starlings, 15 per cent cowbirds, with the balance distributed among other species of blackbirds.

Large concentrations roost together in trees to share one another's body heat during the night. Sometimes their roosts are in towns where the incessant yammer of as many as one million birds in a small grove is a serious disturbance to the citizens. The accumulated guano left on the ground not only creates an untenable stench, but eventually kills the trees and — insidiously — forms a breeding place for the human disease, histoplasmosis.

Blackbirds also cause an estimated $50 million in damage to corn, wheat, rice cherries, grapes, sunflowers and other crops throughout the country each year. Starlings flocks into feedlots, polluting with their droppings the grain intended for fattening livestock.

These birds also cause problems for other wildlife. Starlings, which were introduced to the United States in the late 19th century, have multiplied rapidly and have taken over many nesting cavities, displacing native birds such as wood ducks, bluebirds, tree swallows and woodpeckers. Grackles feed on the eggs and young of other birds and have caused considerable losses among white-winged doves in Texas. The female cowbird, is a nest parasite, laying her eggs in the nests of other birds and letting the foster parents raise her large, robust young — usually at the expense of the rightful siblings. Cowbird parasitism has been especially hard on the Kirtland's warbler, an endangered species that nests only in one area in Michigan.

Blackbirds often can be driven from crops or roosting trees by persistent use of scare devices such as shotguns, propane cannons, firecrackers, or recorded bird-distress calls. Sometimes, however, these tactics merely transfer the problem elsewhere. Then the only alternative is to reduce the local blackbird population. One nonpoisonous and very selective method is to spray the blackbirds on cold nights when they are concentrated in roosting trees. The spray, PA-14, breaks down the oil in feathers, removing the birds' natural waterproofing and insulation, thus causing them to die of exposure. Spraying and other damage control methods are carefully carried out to insure that other species are not harmed.

Like blackbirds, gull populations have also rocketed to unprecedented numbers. And, similary, their population explosion is related to human activities. Uncovered garbage dumps, the offal from fish-processing plants, and litter have given gulls seemingly unlimited food supplies — and they have flourished as never before.

Gulls have become a hazard at several airports and also have — like some of the blackbirds — encroached upon the traditional nesting grounds of other birds. Their most apparent inroads have been upon the terns on the barrier islands off the New England coast. About 1960, gulls invaded Monomoy national wildlife refuge, an eight-mile-long island just below Cape Cod. Since then they have spread their own nesting colonies over almost the entire island, destroying the tern nesting colonies one by one until only a few tern colonies remain. Among the five species of terns represented is the roseate, a tern that is being considered for the endangered species list.

To protect Monomoy's terns, the Fish and Wildlife Service recently began a program to kill a limited number of gulls with DRC 1339, a poison that attacks the kidneys of birds, causing them to die painlessly in their sleep within 72 hours. Mixed with margarine and spread on pieces of bread, the poison bait is being placed in the nests of gulls that are encroaching on tern areas. Inasmuch as the gulls are garbage eaters, and the terns are not, the poison is selective and has been very successful so far. The service is extremely careful to reduce the numbers of only the offending birds.

Though birds cause serious problems at times, they often are of incalculable value to farmers. Gulls kill locusts. Blackbirds kill weevils, earworms, and rootworm beetles. Grackles eat cutworms and mice in newly plowed fields. Cowbirds feed on insects that harass grazing livestock. Starlings feed on the notorious Japanese beetle.

"The trouble is," Greenwalt said, "they all come back to help harvest the crop. Our objectives are not primarily to kill gulls, blackbirds, or other animals, but to save the wild diversity of wildlife we enjoy so much, and at the same time save crops and livestock from needless waste."

Top Of State Teams Begin League Play

After all six teams opened the 1980 season with nonconference games last week, the first-year Top of State nine-man football conference will kick off league play with three conference match-ups Friday as Marshall County Central travels to Greenbush, Hallock visits Stephen and Tri County high school of Karlstad drives to Argyle.

There were two games matching conference opponents last Friday as Stephen shut out Karlstad 24-0 and Hallock blanked Marshall County Central 14-0, but both of those go into the books as nonconference games since they'll be meeting again later this fall in the second half of the two-game, home-and-home schedule adopted by many of the Top of State teams.

Elsewhere Friday, Argyle beat Elbow Lake 15-6 and Greenbush dropped a 24-0 decision to Mount St. Benedict.

Public Shows Interest In Loon Survey

Minnesota's state bird, the loon, has awakened considerable interest in outdoor enthusiasts, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

A recent DNR announcement that the agency was seeking individuals to take part in a loon observation program brought a large response.

The program, conducted by the department's non-game wildlife office, involves sending in observation reports of loons so as to provide the DNR with data on the status of the bird's population.

Carrol Henderson, non-game specialist, said many people have requested additional information on the life history, calls and ecology of the loon.

He said there are three types of educational material currently available. One is an outstanding record entitled "Voices of the Loon" produced by the North American loon fund and the National Audubon Society. Copies are available from the Bell Museum of Natural History, 10 Church Street S.E., Minneapolis, MN 55455.

Another information source is a 15 minute slide-tape program called "Wisconsin's Vanishing Loon?" available from the Sigurd Olson Environmental Institute, Northland College, Ashland, Wisc. 54806. Henderson said the information presented applies as much to Minnesota as Wisconsin and he recommends it highly to schools and nature centers.

There is also a three page pamphlet "The Common Loon" available from the Non-Game Supervisor, Department of Natural Resources, Box 7 Centennial Building, 658 Cedar Street, St. Paul, MN.

Henderson added that it is still not too late to request a set of loon observation cards by writing the above address.

HE GOT THE pass away, but Grygla quarterback John Nordby was then belted by Oklee defensive linemen Brad Gunderson (89) and Joel Stolaas (68) during Tuesday's North Tri County Conference high school football action at Grygla. Suspended at halftime Friday because of rain and lightning, the nine-man contest resumed yesterday afternoon when Oklee scored a pair of unanswered touchdowns to come out a 24-14 winner.

Rain, Cool Weather Aids Ducks

Late-summer rains and cooler weather have at last helped provide some of the moisture needed to break the record dry conditions which plagued would-be nesting waterfowl across the Canadian prairies this spring. But despite disappointing production from the Prairie Provinces, Ducks Unlimited has announced it is pleased with the role its water-control projects have played in countering the effects of the drought.

"During July and August, some 40 to 70 per cent of the natural ponds across Canada's prairies were dry," said DU executive vice president Dale E. Whitesell. "At the same time, and in the same areas, only 15 per cent of our projects did not hold water. All the rest efficiently retained water for the birds."

Whitesell added that, looking back, the overall picture appears even brighter so far as total project effectiveness is concerned. "Considering that some areas of Canada were hit harder than during the drought of the 1930s, Ducks Unlimited projects fared very well," he said. "In fact, only two per cent of our 1,700 habitat restoration projects across Canada were dry."

Though the drought has, for now, run its course, DU is tackling a related problem southwest of Brandon, Manitoba. It was here that a botulism outbreak at Oak Lake recently claimed 12,200 waterfowl. With help from the local volunteers and government agencies, DU crews forced healthy birds out of the area, then disposed of carcasses to help stem the spread of disease. Whitesell said that thanks to a contingency plan formed in early July, DU biologists have been keeping careful watch over some 37 "hot spots" which have presented botulin-related problems in the past. Beaver Hill Lake, in Edmonton, Alberta, is one such place. Biologists estimated that a die-off there could claim many times the numbers of birds killed at Oak Lake.

"We've lost some 50,000 birds across Canada to the disease so far," Whitesell said, "but the situation must be kept in perspective. Botulism outbreaks are a fact of life. They happen each year, especially in instances where water levels decline. This year's drought situation simply intensified things by concentrating large numbers of birds in relatively few water areas.

"Efforts which deal with botulism outbreaks certainly help waterfowl in a day-to-day basis," Whitesell said, "but perpetuating waterfowl populations over the long haul is Ducks Unlimited's main concern. The way to bring this about is to build populations through improved habitat. If we have large numbers of birds and quality water conditions to begin with, the impact of disease die-off will obviously be reduced."

NWAC Seeks Another Sweep

All five Northwest Athletic Conference football teams will be on the road this week for nonconference games, including East Grand Forks' short cross-town trip to face Grand Forks Red River.

Elsewhere Friday, Bemidji will be at Little Falls, Fergus Falls visits Alexandria and Thief River Falls travels to Detroit Lakes. Crookston plays at Grand Forks Central Saturday.

It was a perfect season-opening Friday night for NWAC teams last week as they swept five nonconference games: Crookston beating West Fargo 29-18, Fergus Falls blanked Detroit Lakes 14-0, Thief River Falls got by Grand Forks Red River 12-7, East Grand Forks shut out Grand Forks Central 14-0 and Bemidji handled Crosby-Ironton 21-0.

Bemidji held Crosby-Ironton to just three first downs and only 85 yards worth of offense to headline a week of defensive-dominated ball games. The Rangers did not pick up a first down in the second half when they were limited to a mere 15 yards. Quarterback John Herath, along with runningbacks Mark Beer and Pat Erhart, scored for the Lumberjacks. Beer carried 14 times for 93 yards while Erhart carried 18 times for 73 yards.

Jeff Strandell went 65 yards on a touchdown spring and Rob Sorenson also scored for East Grand Forks against Grand Forks Central.

Touchdowns by Dan Snustad and Brian Balken supported a shutout effort by Fergus Falls' defense in the triumph over Detroit Lakes.

Steve Johnson scored on touchdown runs of 32, 67 and 53 yards to spark Crookston Pirates over the Packers.

Public Help Needed To Find Recycling Sites

Statewide recycling directory is being compiled by the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) who needs the public's help to identify recycling sites for cans, bottles, newspapers, drain oil, and other materials.

The directory will be a reference guide for Minnesotans which will publicize recycling centers throughout the state. To insure that the new directory is as complete as possible, the MPCA is asking citizens with information to contact the MPCA. The public's contribution to the directory will be an important part of the agency's efforts to locate sites.

"This directory will be a significant tool for encouraging recycling in Minnesota," said MPCA director Terry Hoffman. "It will mean that anyone in the state will be able to find out where the nearest recycling center or drop-off point is located, and that information will bring widespread recycling one step closer."

Minnesota no longer can afford to throw recyclable materials away. Of the 3 million tons of solid waste generated per year in the state, only eight per cent is currently being recycled. The MPCA estimates that as much as 30 per cent of Minnesota's waste could be recycled, which means that about 660,000 tons ore reusable materials are being buried and lost per year in costly landfills.

Recyclable materials include all colors of glass, paper and corrugated cardboard, aluminum and nearly all other kinds of metals, and drain oil. Anyone who knows of a location which accepts any of these materials for recycling should contact Marit Eastling, MPCA, (612) 296-7262 or write: Recycling, Public Information Office, Minnesota pollution control agency, 1935 West County Road B2, Roseville, Minnesota, 55113.

In Memoriam
In loving memory of our dear mother, Mabel Windeness, who passed away Sept. 6, 1976:
What would we give her hand to clasp, her patient face to see, to hear her voice, to see her smile, as in the days that used to be; but some sweet day we'll meet again beyond the toil and strife, and clasp each other's hand once more, in Heaven, that happy life.
Missed by her children.
1t69p

In Memoriam
In loving memory of our dear brother, Harvey Sletten, who passed away Sept. 19, 1972:
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Nice to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
Missed by his sisters and brothers. 1t69p

AMERICAN FARMER was the title of this float in the parade held at Goodridge Saturday afternoon to commemorate the Tri County fair held there in 1919. At the back of the float was the somewhat bitter slogan: "Never have so few fed so many for so little." Candy kisses being thrown to the crowd are caught in mid-air by the Times' camera.

Molskness Ends 2-Year Mission Tour In Europe

Janet Molskness, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Molskness of rural Thief River Falls, recently returned from Europe after spending almost two years with Operation Mobilization.

Operation Mobilization is an international, interdenominational mission organization that is involved in evangelistic work in more than 15 nations around the world. It also has two educational book exhibition ships: the Logos, which is currently in the Far East, and the Doulos, which is now in South America. Janet spent her first month with O.M. at a training conference held on board the Doulos while it was docked at the West India Docks, London, England.

Following the conference she served as bookkeeper at the main headquarters in Zaventem, Belgium. Because of the international aspect of the organization she had to work at various times with any of 20 or more different currencies.

Besides bookkeeping, she took part in weekend evangelistic outreaches held on board ships docked from all over the world in Antwerp, Belgium.

Janet lived and worked with people from France, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, England, Scotland, Ireland, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Italy, Malaysia, Singapore, South Korea, South Africa and Canada. She was also in France, Germany, England, Scotland, Ireland, Holland and Luxembourg and spent one Christmas in Belgium and one in Ireland.

She was transferred for the last three months of her stay to help the O.M. office in Manchester, England, with its bookkeeping.

Although her schedule was often extremely intense and fatiguing, she said, she felt the experience of working overseas was very rewarding.

'U' Delegation Visits China This Month

A delegation from the University of Minnesota will visit the People's Republic of China August 29 through September 19 to explore ways to increase exchanges of faculty and students.

The 12-member delegation, headed by Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs, is especially interested in exchanges in law, liberal arts, biology and library science, fields not represented in present exchanges.

This is the second such educational delegation from the University to visit China. The first group led by Wenda Moore, chairperson of the Board of Regents, visited China in September 1979 and initiated exchange agreements in science, technology and agriculture.

The second delegation will visit 43 institutions in seven cities. The official host is the Ministry of Education in Peking. The trip is supported by funds from private sources.

Crash test cars

A 1980 Ford Mustang, left, and a 1980 Toyota Celica stand idle in Washington after going through 35 mph head-on crash tests. The tests proved too tough for most small cars — especially the imports — to pass.

Small cars crashed at 35 mph

Foreign cars fail test

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Small cars manufactured by domestic automakers out-performed similar sized Japanese and German models in recent crash tests, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Tuesday.

Not one of the 10 new Japanese and German cars that were crashed head-on into solid barriers at 35 mph received a passing grade. That meant that their drivers and passengers would have been killed or seriously injured in an accident of similar severity.

By contrast, the 1980 Chevrolet Chevette — the only American car involved in the most recent tests — received a passing grade. The other recent passing grade went to the Fiat Strada, the only foreign car that passed.

Previously, three lines of 1980 Detroit cars weighing less than 3,350 pounds passed the same crash test: the Chevrolet Citation and the similarly built Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark; Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon; Ford Mustang and Mercury Capri.

The test results were announced as a guide for consumers and not as part of any enforcement action, according to Joan Claybrook, who heads the federal safety agency. She said the agency also hopes to "generate competition" among automakers for good safety marks.

American car makers have "made a real effort" to build safer cars, using government crash test data, and "that's terrific," said Claybrook. She drives a 1968 Volvo, manufactured in Sweden and generally given high marks for its safe design.

The cars that failed this year's tests were:

- The Honda CIVIC, in which the driver's head "severely struck the steering wheel."
- The Toyota Corolla and Corolla Tercel models, in which both passenger compartments were severely damaged and doors were jammed shut.
- The Honda Prelude, in which the steering wheel "caused severe driver head impact."
- The Datsun 310, in which the passenger seat belt gave way and caused "severe head and chest impact."
- The Subaru GLF, in which both seat belt buckles released during the crash.
- The VW Rabbit, which barely failed.
- The Audi 400, in which the driver's head hit the steering wheel.
- The Mazda 626, in which both dummies "suffered severe impact" with the car interior.
- The Datsun 200 SX.

Previous failures, from last year's tests, included the Ford Fiesta, the Plymouth Champ, Ford Pinto, Mercury Bobcat, and the Toyota Celica.

The trend toward small fuel-efficient cars — expected to account for half of all cars on the road by the mid-80s — is dangerous, Claybrook said.

"The bad news is that small cars don't protect their occupants as well as the large cars and we expect a substantial increase in serious injuries and deaths," she said.

Engineers have determined, for example, that people without seatbelts in large cars are approximately as safe as those in small cars wearing seat belts, Claybrook said.

The safety agency estimates that without improvements in safety design, the automobile death toll will rise from 37,000 Americans last year to 42,000 by 1990.

You never mistake the meaning of a Church spire.

Even to those who are cold to the ideals for which the Church stands, that finger of faith always points to something that is comforting, reassuring, safe.

The very presence of a Church, whether in a crowded city street or on a quiet country road, is a benediction to all, including those who are not conscious of worship.

Such an influence, with what it means to those who open their hearts to truth, is worthy of a second thought. It merits acceptance as a refuge. It commands confidence as a port in time of storm.

The Church deserves your support — your membership — because it affords real protection for the family whose welfare it is your duty to defend and whose proper upbringing is your solemn obligation.

Paying For College May Now Be Easier

Paying for your children's college education may be getting easier after all. Before you discount this statement as pure folly, or calculate that sending three kids to college could cost $120,000, consider the changes that have been taking place.

For one thing, even though the cost of college has been increasing, the rate of increase has slowed, says the Minnesota Society of CPAs. From 1978 to 1979 college costs increased only six per cent, compared to a 17 per cent increase in 1973. At the same time, the amount of financial aid available increased 15 per cent last year. Federal aid alone doubled between 1974 and 1978, and last year 60 per cent of college students got some financial aid from government, industry, foundations or service organizations.

Twenty years ago, a family of four with a $12,000 income and one child in college had to pay $1,805 toward college costs. Today, that family would contribute only $270. If you earn $20,000 and have three children, you would be expected to pay just over $1,000 a year toward college costs.

Some developing trends may reduce the cost of college education even more. The student population is decreasing, and many colleges are streamlining curriculums to pare expenses. There are more work-study programs available which allow students to pay their way through school.

There is also increasing emphasis on living at home, and local community colleges are beefing up curriculums to handle increased enrollments. More companies are providing financial aid for children of their employees in the form of scholarships and low interest loans. And finally, the federal government may come up with some future tax incentives for families strapped with college tuition costs.

In addition to outright grants and scholarships based on need, there are many sources of low interest college loans. The federal government offers loans at seven per cent with no ceiling on family income. Students can borrow as much as $2,500 a year and repayment doesn't begin until after graduation. National Direct Student Loans, with an interest rate of three per cent, are granted by colleges themselves. These can provide a maximum of $5,000 for the four-year period. Banks offer college loans with longer payback times, and often at lower than normal interest rates. (There has been some talk recently of raising interest rates on some of these loans.)

It is important to remember that families don't begin early enough to explore all the sources available to them. It's wise to contact a college while the student is in the junior year of high school, and find out what sources of aid they offer — and what they know about other sources. High school guidance counselors are also becoming more knowledgeable in this area. Ask about books and directories of college aid.

Enlist your child in the search. Remind him his summer earnings will be considered part of his college aid. A copy of your income tax return may also be required, CPAs say, so it's a good idea to get your taxes done early in the year your child is applying for financial aid.

The need for financial aid is based not only on your income, but on the number of children you have, your living costs, and any unusual expenses (such as medical bills or support of aged parents). So don't assume that because you make $40,000 you will have to pay the entire college bill yourself, CPAs say.

Although you may qualify for considerable aid, there will undoubtedly be a portion of the college expense that you and your family will provide. If you are serious about sending your children to college, you should start planning and saving when the child is born, or by the time he is in kindergarten. If you start to save $50 a month, even at a mere 5¼ per cent when the child is eight, you will have $8,000 when he's 18. If you wait until he's 13, you'll have to save $145 a month to reach the same goal. Start your planning based on today's cost for college and increase the amount along with the annual rate of inflation. Use term savings accounts with higher interest rates.

Custodian or trust accounts earn interest and provide a tax benefit to you. If such an account is opened in your child's name, he will pay the tax on any interest or dividends over $1,000 a year at a lower rate than you would. When the child reaches the age of majority, he controls the money — so you may want to consider this in your planning. Are you willing to give your child the money if he chooses not to go to college?

In the same vein, you could make an interest-free loan to your child; he could invest the money and pay tax on the earnings at his lower tax rate. Giving your child appreciating stock which he could sell to pay for college, is another idea. His tax on any capital gain would be less than yours, CPAs say. In any savings program that shifts tax from you to your child, always check with your tax advisor to be sure the program will have the desired effects.

Other ways to get money for college could include refinancing your mortgage, borrowing on your life insurance or pledging your savings account passbook for a loan. Any loan with an interest rate lower than the rate of inflation, say CPAs, is good leverage. You will repay with cheaper dollars. In fact, the use of low interest college loans at say three or seven per cent, is even more sensible than using your capital.

Be sure your insurance coverage is adequate during your children's college years. If your child, at 19, is no longer included in your family medical insurance policy, you may want to buy group insurance which some colleges offer for about $150 a year.

And before you make up your financial plan, don't forget there is always money needed for additional food, entertainment, telephone bills, and all the incidental costs students incur away from home. They can add up to $1,000 or more a year.

And then, too, your own phone bill will probably increase . . . with all those collect calls from college asking you to "send money."

NEWS OF HEALTH

Most people want what's coming to them. Yet, sometimes, for a variety of reasons, they don't get it.

One such group that may "miss out" are those eligible for Medicare reimbursement, under the Medical insurance part of the plan, for certain medical equipment prescribed by a doctor. Those eligible to receive Medicare benefits fall into three groups: (A) persons 65 or older; (B) those who have been on Social Security disability for two years; and (C) individuals who need dialysis treatments or kidney transplants because of permanent kidney failure.

Of the estimated 35 million handicapped people in the United States, some four million of them are age 65 or older. Those that require "durable medical equipment" (DME) are eligible to receive up to 80 percent reimbursement of the purchase or rental price, if covered by Medicare's medical insurance plan. DME is equipment, prescribed by a doctor for in-home use, which (1) can withstand repeated use (2) is primarily used to serve a medical purpose, and (3) generally is not useful to a person in the absence of an illness or injury.

A recent report by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare indicates that 4 percent of the Medicare population submit claims for DME reimbursement.

A few years ago, Sears conducted a consumer research study of the customers of its Home Health Care Catalog. And, among other things, learned that few expected to receive reimbursement for the purchase of home health care products from Medicare or any other medical insurance. Part of the problem stemmed from a lack of information about benefits or a "fear of forms."

Sears 1980 Home Health Care Catalog is trying to remedy this situation. For the first time, included among the 44 pages of health care items, is a four-page section devoted to easy-to-read, step-by-step instructions for filing a DME claim.

This section includes: a definition of "durable medical equipment;" an explanation of how the DME benefit works; facts to consider before buying or renting such equipment; a "Certificate of Medical Necessity" form (for the physician to fill out); the official government "Request for Medical payment" form; and instructions on "How to Fill Out Your Medicare Form."

A copy of the 1980 Home Health Care Catalog can be obtained free at the catalog order desk in Sears stores or at any Sears catalog sales office.

Ripple Effect Felt From Auto Industry Slump

Auto industry slump is touching the lives of virtually every American to some degree, reports the Automotive Information council (AIC).

The effect on the nation's total employment is massive and widespread, says AIC, which points out:

For every car not built, as well as for every car imported, there is a reduction in U.S. production of five tires, five wheels, six windows, four shock absorbers, four to eight spark plugs, a complete exhaust-muffler system, hoses, belts, wiring, battery, yards of fabric and vinyl, gallons of paint and hundreds of other supplier-made items — plus the basic raw materials of steel, iron, aluminum, plastics and zinc.

That helps explain why some 650,000 employees in auto-related industries have joined the 250,000 autoworkers on layoff, says AIC.

But the "ripple effect" goes even deeper, affecting the farmer, oil worker, miner, cattleman, lumberjack and trucker.

People who are on layoff have to hold down their expenditures, so a further ring of ripples goes out to reduce sales of all types of goods and services, especially those which are considered discretionary, or not a necessity. Reduced income and sales tax revenues also result.

It therefore becomes apparent that the auto industry slowdown, propelled by the flood of import-car sales, touches almost all of us, said AIC.

The auto industry truly is the cornerstone of the nation's economy, it added.

Editors Sue Regents Over Daily Dispute

Editors of the Minnesota Daily will sue the University of Minnesota board of regents and president C. Peter Magrath to stop an optional Daily fee plan the regents have approved for this fall.

Under the plan, which was approved May 9, students would be allowed to collect a refund of their $2 fee that helps support the Daily. The quarterly fee had previously been mandatory. The regents and Magrath maintained that this was a procedural change and not punishment for a humor issue the Daily published in June 1979.

The humor issue, which featured a mock interview with Jesus Christ, was called obscene, anti-religious and racist by its detractors. In the furor surrounding the issue, two legislative hearings were called to examine the Daily fee structure, and a four-member subcommittee of regents was formed to investigate the structure of the Daily. The regents' subcommittee recommended that no action be taken, and in August 1979 the full board voted 9-3 not to change the fee, concluding that the internal fee-setting system should be allowed to work.

The Daily suit charges that the May 1980 vote in favor of a refundable fee was in retaliation against the humor issue of nearly a year before. The Daily's attorneys, Marshall Tanick and Samuel Heines, will claim violations of the First Amendment press freedoms and Fourteenth Amendment due process and equal protection guarantees, according to the current Daily editor, Jeff Goldberg.

Goldberg and Kate Stanley, Daily editor from June 1979 to June 1980, are the plaintiffs in the suit, both as individuals and as editors of the Daily. Magrath and the regents are charged both individually and as officials of the university.

The board of student publications, publisher of the Daily, voted unanimously Tuesday to appropriate $25,000 of its reserve funds to finance the lawsuit. The lawsuit asks that mandatory student fees for the Daily be continued, that the Daily be reimbursed for its legal expenses, and that the Daily receive any other relief the court deems just.

Tanick, the Daily's attorney, said the case has "a reasonable chance of succeeding" but could take "a substantial period of time" to be resolved, the Daily reported in a copyrighted story Wednesday.

Goldberg said he does not expect the lawsuit to reach court before fall quarter begins at the end of September. That will be the first opportunity for students to seek a refund.

The Daily is figuring a 15 per cent loss in revenue because of the refund option, said Jim Clark, chairman of the publications board. That works out to around $30,000 a year, he said. The bulk of the Daily's income comes from the sale of advertisements.

The Daily story reported that the lawsuit would be filed in U.S. district court Wednesday. As of noon, the university had not been served with the suit, according to Carol Pazandak, an assistant to president Magrath. "Until we see the lawsuit, it would not be appropriate for us to speculate on what will happen," she said.

The change in the fee structure was made at the May regents meeting during an annual review of the 27 Twin Cities student service fees for the coming academic year. The regents' student concerns committee, a subcommittee of the full board, voted three to two to keep the mandatory fee. The full board voted eight to three to make the fee refundable.

The student services fee committee, the elected body of students that recommends what fees should be charged, had called for continuing the mandatory Daily fee. But at the April regents meeting president Magrath recommended a refundable fee.

Vacation Funds Can Grow With Savings Bonds

Vacation savings can be accumulated quickly and easily through the payroll savings plan for United States savings bonds, according to the U.S. treasury department.

Persons on the payroll plan set aside a small portion of each paycheck toward bonds. The bonds grow at an average rate of 6.5 per cent per annum when held five years; seven per cent if held 11 years. In addition, bond buyers have the benefit of a number of tax advantages, which can raise the effective yield, and complete safety for their savings.

Since bonds can be cashed at any time after a six-month holding period, they are one way to save for vacations or any other need. Many a home, car or college education has been paid for in part with savings bonds.

When planning your finances, ask your employer about the payroll savings plan and start your savings program right away.

What Exactly Is Junk Food?

by Ralph Heussner
"U" M News Service

Junk food is as American as mom's apple pie.

But what, exactly is junk food? And how nutritious or non-nutritious must food be before it deserves the "junk food" label?

Although the term is a household phrase, the federal government's attempt to classify junk foods, or foods of minimal nutritional value, has fired a debate in the food-producing industry and among public health professionals and nutritionists.

The dilemma: There's no agreement on a definition, but a working definition of junk food is a prerequisite to legislation on food advertisements.

"The lack of a definition of junk food has seriously delayed the formulation of nutrition policy and legislation that would provide guidelines for the nutritional descriptions of foods advertised and the nutrition messages conveyed in advertisements," says Dr. Judy Brown, director of public health nutrition at the University of Minnesota.

Brown and her colleague, Dr. Phyllis Fleming, have collected data which may help the U.S. department of agriculture define the widely used yet hard-to-describe phrase.

The Minnesota nutrition experts surveyed 300 Minneapolis and St. Paul consumers on their perceptions of junk food. Consumers were asked to define the term, and then rate 41 different foods as junk, of high nutritional value, or neither.

"The results of this analysis reveal major differences between what consumers and the (proposed) USDA standard would identify as junk," Brown said. The study suggests that consumers may be willing to accept standards for junk food classification more stringent than the government's proposed guidelines.

According to the USDA proposal, a 100-calorie portion of food which does not supply 5 per cent or more of the required daily allowance for any one of the eight specified nutrients (protein, vitamin A, ascorbic acid, niacin, riboflavin, thiamin, calcium and iron) would be classified as a food of "minimal nutritional value."

But, Brown contends, "The USDA standard fails to take into account some of the negative components of foods, such as high sugar, saturated fat, or salt content, and does not address the concern that nutrients will be added to fabricated foods to bring them above the minimum nutrients density level . . .

The Minnesota study reported that: consumers attributed the following characteristics to junk foods: high in sugar, high in calories, bad for health, high in salt, fatty, and high in additive content; selections of high quality foods were, for the most part, based on nutrient content and low fat; of the 41 foods considered, potato chips, presweetened cereals, soft drinks, candy, gum, French fries, vitamin-fortified presweetened cereals, diet soda and cookies were considered "junk" by over 50 per cent of the consumers.

Also, over 50 per cent of consumers considered oranges, green beans, baked chicken, eggs, whole wheat bread, white potatoes, whole white milk, honey, unsalted nuts, unsweetened cereals, margarine, hamburgers and butter high quality foods; only four foods — tea, coffee, wine and sugarless gum — were classified by over 50 per cent of consumers as neither junk nor high quality foods; the description "fortified by vitamins" does not automatically make food high quality in the minds of the consumer.

Interestingly, Brown and Fleming found that four of the top nine foods designated as junk by consumers would not be covered by the proposed USDA ban on selling foods of minimal nutritional value in public schools. These foods are presweetened cereals, French fries, cookies and vitamin-fortified pre sweetened cereals.

Brown noted that junk foods are not necessarily all bad. The effect depends on the quantity of such food consumed and the content of the rest of a person's diet.

Therefore, Brown said, public health nutritionists must provide consumers with understandable information on the effect of junk food on diet and health. "We must show consumers that diet will make a difference. For instance, by cutting out sticky sweets, they can cut their dental bills in half. Unless consumers see enough benefit, they will not change their diets."

Nutritionists acknowledge that consumers are slow to change their eating habits.

"But if certain foods are classified as junk, at least there are some guilt feelings associated with eating them. Maybe in the long run the guilt will get them (consumers) and they will give it up," Brown said.

Why do Americans continue to consume potato chips and candy even when they know the foods are low in nutritional value?

"People will eat junk food," Brown said, "simply because they like it."

NEWS FOR WOMEN

SKIN CARE FOR THE ACTIVE WOMAN

Excercise is just great for toning your muscles, building up stamina, stimulating the heart's action, and helping to ease tension. If you're very active in sports or in an exercise regime, you may think your skin is taken care of too, but it's simply not so! Too much exposure to the elements, salt water or chlorine tends to enlarge skin pores, and if you've been using an oily skin protector, the problem is compounded.

Look in your mirror right now, and if you see that you've been neglecting your skin, a good way to begin to revive and refine it is with a good cleansing mask and a good moisturizer.

The new MUDD Two-Step Beauty Treatment consists of two products, the first one a clay cleansing mask, to be left on for 15 minutes and rinsed off. It's not only a very effective pore cleanser, but it's also fun to use—be on the alert for laughing children and the dog who doesn't recognize you!

The natural clay draws out dirt, makeup and excess oil, leaving your skin cleaner than with ordinary cleansing methods. It also opens your pores to receive maximum benefit from the second step—a very rich, white, non-greasy moisturizer, also a mask to be left on for 15 minutes, and rinsed off.

Because it is a mask and not just an ordinary moisturizer, the MUDD Super Moisturizing Treatment provides your skin with longer-lasting moisturizing. You'll find your skin silken smooth, with superficial lines significantly diminished.

Give yourself a facial at least once a week; preferably twice a week, and look for results immediately. The two MUDD products are widely available at drugstores, supermarkets and mass distributors.

Social Issues On Agenda For ALC Conclave

Discussions and actions ranging from how to work together with other churches to whether it is proper to own stock in corporations that do business in South Africa will highlight the 10th general convention of the American Lutheran Church (ALC) to be conducted in Minneapolis October 1-7.

Agenda items will include such things as the election of a president and vice president, consideration of a task force statement on abortion, a recommendation supporting the equal rights amendment, consideration of statements on other social issues, the formal launching of a $30,000,000 drive for ALC seminaries and presentation of a 1981 budget of more than $35,000,000.

U.S. Secretary of State Edmund Muskie has been invited to address the convention. Special guests who will speak to the delegates include Minnesota Gov. Albert H. Quie; Bishop L. E. Dlamini of the Evangelical Lutheran church in Southern Africa; Dr. Augusto E. Kunert, president of the Evangelical church of Lutheran Confession in Brazil; Dr. Christoph Klein, a theologian from the Evangelical Lutheran church of Romania, and the presidents of other Lutheran church bodies in the United States and Canada.

Ceremonial events will take note of the 20th anniversary of the ALC, the 10th anniversary of ordination of women in the ALC, and the 450th anniversary of the Augsburg confession, which will be highlighted in a full evening's program.

Dr. David W. Preus, ALC president since 1973, has been nominated for reelection. Four other nominees, all of whom will address the convention prior to the election, are Dr. Charles S. Anderson, president, Augsburg college, Minneapolis; Dr. James G. Kallas, president, Dana college, Minneapolis; Dr. James G. Kallas, president, Dana college, Blair, NE; Dr. Lloyd Svendsbye, president, Luther-Northwestern theological seminaries, St. Paul; and Dr. William H. Weiblen, president, Wartburg theological seminary, Dubuque, Iowa.

After the election of the president, the vice president will be elected from the four remaining candidates.

ALC relationships with other Lutheran bodies as such is not up for action, but delegates will be asked to approve a process of study, discussion and response among congregations and districts to be conducted during the next two years. According to this process, a more definitive action would be taken at the 1982 convention that could lead to a closer organizational relationship of the ALC with the Lutheran Church in America and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran churches.

Four actions on social issues likely to come in for spirited debate are a task force statement on abortion, a recommendation by the church council that the ALC support the equal rights amendment, and memorials from several districts that the ALC support the Nestle boycott and take its investments out of corporations doing business in South Africa.

Also likely for considerable debate are proposed changes in the ALC pension plan, which calls for increased premiums made necessary by the high cost of major medical benefits, and changes required by government regulations.

Food Stamps Costs Cut By $80 Million

An estimated 200,000 people, including 150,000 college students, will be dropped from the food stamp program, and food stamp costs will be cut by $80 million a year under new rules published by the U.S. department of agriculture.

Assistant secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said the new rules, required by 1980 amendments to the Food Stamp act, will cause most of the 200,000 adult students (over 18 and under 60 years of age) who now receive food stamps to lose their eligibility on September 1. The only exceptions will be low-income students with disabilities, or those who: (1) work more than 20 hours a week, (2) head households with dependents, (3) participate in a federal work-study program, or (4) are enrolled in a work incentive program.

In addition to eliminating most college students from the program, the new rules will cause 50,000 more food stamp recipients to lose their eligibility when a new assets limit takes effect on October 1.

Under the present food stamp law, most food stamp households must have assets worth less than $1,750. The new law and regulations lower this limit to $1,500. Households of two or more people, in which at least one person is elderly, will not be affected by the change. The assets limit for these elderly households will remain at $3,000.

"The rules issued carry out 1980 amendments to the food stamp law aimed at cutting program costs and tightening management," Foreman said. "Earlier this month, the semi-annual cost-of-food increase was cancelled, and new procedures lowering food stamp income limits took effect."

"Together these changes are expected to save $448 million in the upcoming fiscal year," Fireman said. "With the publication of today's rules, we have implemented all of the savings provisions of the new law that will affect eligibility for food stamps and benefit levels."

The interim final rules published in the July 8 Federal Register also exclude the counting of federal, state and local energy assistance payments as income or resources in determining a household's eligibility for food stamps. Vehicles used by handicapped people also will not be counted as a household resource. These latter two provisions become effective Oct. 1, 1980.

Storm-Damaged Elm Trees Need Pruning

Recent heavy storm damage to trees in Minnesota has raised the question of whether or not to prune elm trees, since pruning can expose otherwise healthy elms to Dutch elm disease.

If the tree has been storm-damaged, it should be pruned, says William Phillipsen, University of Minnesota extension entomologist. Such pruning is called "sanitation" pruning, and is one of three basic kinds of pruning; the others are called "therapeutic" and "aesthetic" pruning.

Sanitation pruning is the removal of elm branches that are dead or dying from any cause. This type of purning reduces the number of breeding sites for elm bark beetles, which transmit the disease from tree to tree. Since pruning wounds can attract the beetles, it is safer to do sanitation pruning in the fall and winter, when the beetles are not breeding. However, when trees are damaged during the spring and summer, as they have been in recent weeks, it is important to remove the potential breeding area right away.

Therapeutic pruning is the removal of branches already infected with Dutch elm disease, in order to save the rest of the tree. It is conducted in spring and summer, when disease symptoms appear. Therapeutic pruning works only if the disease is transmitted by beetles and not through root grafts from adjacent trees. If the infection reaches the main trunk, the tree is lost and there is no point in pruning. The best candidates for therapeutic pruning are large trees with small infections. The pruning cut should be at least 10 feet from the nearest brown discoloration in the infected branch. On a community-wide basis, therapeutic pruning is best when populations of elm bark beetles are small and where multiple or successive beetle-carried infections are minimal. For additional protection, therapeutic pruning can be used in conjunction with injection of the fungicide Arbotect.

Aesthetic pruning is designed to give trees a desired structure and appearance. Many communities do aesthetic pruning on a regularly scheduled basis. For elm trees, aesthetic pruning should not be done in the spring or summer, because the pruning wounds attract elm bark beetles. Aesthetic pruning should only be done during the beetles' inactive period, from mid-October to the end of March.

Teleconference System Used Through BSU

How can a university provide easily accessible post-secondary education for northern Minnesota residents living in a geographically large, sparsely populated, rural area? That's the question being answered, at least in part, by a program coordinated by Bemidji state university's office of area services.

Delivering educational programs to non-traditional off-campus students has long been a problem in rural regions of the state, especially considering escalating fuel costs, difficult winter driving conditions, lack of enough students in a specific location to justify offering some courses, and time limitations in sending instructors out in the field.

Bemidji state has been utilizing a unique teaching-via-telephone and radio system called teleconference, however, that is making the classroom situation more feasible in outlying communities. The program is not new, having begun prior to the 1978-79 academic year, but is being expended starting fall quarter to encompass nine locations: Brainerd, Bemidji, Grand Rapids, Hibbing, Virginia, Thief River Falls, International Falls, Ely and Wadena.

Upcoming classes to be offered are Sociology 331-831 Juvenile Deliquency, and Industrial Arts and Education 463-563 Special Learning Needs in Vocational Education. The credited courses will meet Wednesday and Monday evenings respectively starting September 10 and 8, from 6 to 10 p.m.

In concept, teleconferencing refers to meetings or classes conducted via telephone lines between two or more groups of physically separated individuals. In 1976, the division of telecommunications of the department of administration began testing teleconferencing as a means of exchanging educational programs among post-secondary institutions. Shortly thereafter, several northern Minnesota institutions began their own experimentation with the program, and after significant demonstrated potential, further plans were made.

The division of telecommunications expended its support to the network in 1978-79 — the same year Bemidji transmitted courses to students in Grand Rapids, Hibbing and Virginia. The project once again expended on a local level, and after continued success, gave way to this year's programming.

Pre-registration is required for BSU's two teleconference classes. For details on exact locations, fees, etc., contact: Area Services, Sanford Hall, Bemidji State University, Bemidji. MN 56601.

SIDE SALAD ADDS VARIETY

If you're looking for variety in meals, and at the same time trying to please the family, introduce yourself to the concept of side salads. Pear Yogurt Salad, for example, is a refreshing salad that adds color, flavor and texture to the simplest meal. Give eating excitement to a plate of rolled ham slices and cheese triangles with a salad that combines apricot flavor gelatin, plain yogurt, diced fresh or canned pears and chopped celery. It turns out to be a satisfying meal with the addition of a crisp hot roll and glass of cold milk. Whether chilled in a three-cup mold or individual molds, this side salad promises to complement a variety of favorite meat entrees.

PEAR YOGURT SALAD

1 package (3 oz.) Jell-O apricot flavor gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 container (8 oz.) plain yogurt
1-1/3 cups diced fresh pears*
1/4 cup chopped celery

*Or use 1 can (16 oz.) sliced pears, drained and diced.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Blend in yogurt and chill until thickened. Fold in pears and celery. Pour into individual molds or a 3-cup mold. Chill until firm, about 3 hours. Unmold. Serve with crisp salad greens, if desired. Makes 2-2/3 cups or 5 servings.

Water And Soil

Following comments were made by Wesley Libbey, recipient of the American Motors award as one of three outstanding conservationists in the nation, in a talk to the state Izaak Walton league:

I would like to emphasize that the United States is bleeding to death. We have lost half of our top soil. A soil scientist at Iowa State University has calculated that at the present rate of soil loss, there will not be a grain of topsoil left in the state of Iowa by 2060 -- our tall corn state. An acceptable rate of soil loss of topsoil is five tons per acre. Iowa is losing 10 tons per acre, as is Minnesota, and many other midwestern states. It seems to me that agriculture is headed down a one-way street. Something seems wrong when farmers put in several units of energy for one unit of food in return. Large scale mechanized farming of row crops is one of the major causes of erosion.

As an environmentalist, I see two problems with high production agriculture. One is monoculture, or lack of diversity. In nature, endless diversity is the rule. We can wonder when man uses brute force to turn wetlands, fence rows, groves, grasslands into endless black soil devoid of wildlife. The first sportsmen's clubs in the United States were formed on the east coast when trout streams became fishless because of the effects of land use in the watersheds. Wildlife is an early warning system. Man can be concerned about an environment in which wildlife cannot survive; man also is a part of the environment. It seems that drastic changes in agricultural practices are unavoidable.

We must recognize that there are levels of production beyond which the soil cannot be pushed indefinitely. There are limits to all resources and man needs to adjust to them — nature's laws cannot be violated, endlessly.

At the risk of being clobbered by a shopper, fresh from the supermarket, I suggest that food prices are too low. United States consumers spent about 17 per cent of their income on food, far below that in other countries. This saving is often at the expense of the soil. Farmers must receive enough for their products to permit recovery of both production costs and soil conserving costs. We need a soil conserving program which can be funded through the sale of farm products as a cost of production.

The easy days are gone. It is time to pay the piper. Soil conservation can no longer be left to voluntary cooperation. Participation in soil conserving practices by the farmer must be made possible through public or market funding. We cannot mine the soil at the expense of future generations in order to have artificially low prices on food for ourselves.

We probably face big changes in irrigation. Agriculture consumes about 83 per cent of our water resources. It is the most consumptive use. It damages soil quality by depositing salts which accumulate. Watertables in Arizona are dropping seven to 10 feet per year. Eighty per cent of its production is irrigated. Stewardship requires a rate of use of ground water no greater than the rate of recharge. Research is urgently needed to determine the rate of recharge. Land surfaces are subsiding. In Galveston, Texas, the land surface has sunk as a result of groundwater withdrawal to a level which makes half the city vulnerable to destruction by a tidal wave.

Soil tilth is deteriorating from excessive use of chemicals, machine compaction, lack of organic material. We need a national tilth center to research soil quality needs and solutions.

We need a land use program. The plowing of grasslands and marginal land when wheat was $5 a bushel was disaster that should not be repeated. The dust bowl can return. Lest we forget, the strength of a Nation is dependent upon the fertility of the soil and the wise management of that great source. When the good topsoil has all gone down the river, then what? When the last grain of topsoil is gone from the state of Iowa and Minnesota — what then do we eat?

Kids and Elections

Grade school teacher Harold Dunn, author of a book entitled "Our Hysterical Heritage", received the following thoughts from his students in Ballwin, Mo.:

+ "A minor party is one that people under 21 are allowed to join."

+ "An 'Independent' is a Republican or Democrat that cannot make up his mind which."

+ "For campaigns, take two aspirants every four years."

+ "A 'split ticket" is when you don't like any of them on the ticket, so you tear it up."

+ "Elephants and donkeys never fought until politics came along."

+ "When the radio mentions a landslide, cross your fingers and hope it is talking about an election!"

+ "The people who are expected to help the President sometimes are locked up in his cabinet."

+ "Before taking office, the President must raise his hand and take some oats."

+ "A caucus is something people vote in. Sort of a small booth."

+ "When they talk about the most promising Presidential candidate, they mean the one who can think of the most things to promise."

+ "The President has the power to appoint and dis-appoint the members of his cabinet."

+ "The difference between a king and a President is that the king is the son of his father, but the President is not."

+ "James Buchanan was elected President even though he was accused of being a batchelor."

A Hazardous Substance?

Add to the list of potentially hazardous substances (based on tests which apparently show some other substances to be hazardous) one of the most common necessities of life. This release pokes a little fun while making a point at the same time:

"Imperial Chemical Industries, Australia, has announced the discovery of a new fire-fighting agent known as WATER (Wonderful and Total Extinguishing Resource). It is particularly suitable for dealing with fires in homes and other buildings, lumber yards and warehouses and is cheap to produce. It is intended that quantities of about 1½ million gallons should be stored in open ponds or reservoirs near installations of high fire risk.

"WATER is already encountering opposition from safety and environmental groups. One group spokesman has pointed out the danger of this product, that if anyone immersed his head in a busket of WATER, it would prove fatal in as little as three minutes.

"Each of the proposed reserviors will contain enough WATER to fill a half-million three-gallon buckets. Each Bucketful would be used a hundred or more times, so there is enough WATER in one reservior to kill the entire population of an area as large as the Twin Cities.

"It has been reported that WATER is a constituent of beer. Does this mean firemen could become intoxicated from the fumes when they use it to put out a fire?

"The 'Friends of the World' said they obtained a sample of WATER and found it made clothes shrink. It shrank cotton, so what would it do to people?

"The government has been asked whether it would prohibit the storage and use of this lethal new material. 'A full investigation is needed' was the official reply. A committee has been formed to conduct intensive public hearings and file a report."

Borrowed Nonsense:

Lawyer: "Yes, whiplash cases are my specialty. I take it you were struck from behind."

Client: "Well, sort of. The bank guard nearly took my head off when he grabbed my ski mask!"

Angry Buyer: "What kind of pet shop are you running down there. I just noticed this canary I bought from you has only one leg."

Pet Shop Owner: "So what did you want, a singer or a dancer?"

Classified ad: "Wanted: Apartment for childless couple, large enough to keep wife from moving back to mother, small enough to keep mother from moving in with us."

Interesting Opinions:

"People don't ask for facts in making up their minds. They would rather have one good, soul-satisfying emotion than a dozen facts."

—Robert Keith Leavitt

"The most optimistic person I ever met was undoubtedly a young artist in Paris, who, without a franc in his pocket, went into a swanky restaurant and ate dozens of oysters in the hope of finding a pearl to pay the bill."

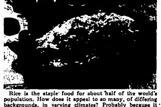
—Sacha Guitry

"With different persons we may be quite different individuals. We cling, however, to the illusion that we remain identical for all persons and every situation."

—Luigi Pirandello

* INFLATION-FIGHTING FOOD IDEAS *

CALCUTTA RICE — Easy, Thrifty, Tasty



Rice is the staple food for about half of the world's population. How does it appeal to so many, of differing backgrounds, in varying climates? Probably because it adapts to so many flavors and textures. Calcutta Rice is a perfect example. Rice mingles with the hot curry flavor so typical of India and at the same time mixes well with the crisp texture of celery, and the sweet crunch of apple slices. It's easy to make, not expensive, and will dress up any entree with which it is served.

CALCUTTA RICE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 to 2 teaspoons curry powder
1 teaspoon seasoned pepper
1 cup sliced celery
2 medium apples, peeled, cored, and sliced
1/4 cup sliced almonds
3 cups cooked rice

Melt butter; stir in curry powder and pepper. Add celery, apples, and almonds; saute until tender crisp. Stir in rice and heat thoroughly. Makes 6 servings. Good with leg of lamb, Bombay Duck, or Tandoori Chicken.

Wheat Council Invests In China Bakery

Development of a modern bakery and baker training facility in the People's Republic of China is becoming a reality with the recent signing of an agreement between U.S. Wheat associates and representatives of the PRC government. Elner Satter, chairman of the Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council from Norcross, reports that the agreement between the Chinese and the wheat grower organization is a significant step in assisting the Chinese to moderize their wheat food industry while expanding the potential for increased U.S. wheat exports to that country.

According to Satter, the Model Bakery will be located in Beijing (Peking) at a cost of $1.5 million. The costs for constructing the facility however, will be shared approximately evenly by the Chinese and U.S. Wheat. Satter indicated that the Minnesota Wheat Council contributed $50,000 toward the project.

Under the agreement the Chinese will provide the land and the building which is currently under construction and will pay for on-going operational costs. U.S. Wheat Associates will provide equipment, installation, and will train bakers and baking instructors for the facility.

"There are relatively few bakeries in the PRC," Satter stated, "and the Chinese want to improve and modernize the existing industries while expanding the baking industry as a whole. The Model Bakery, when completed in approximately one year, will have a capacity to produce for sale 1,500 pounds of bread per hour. In addition it will be a training facility for bakers in Beijing who wish to observe and learn proper bread baking techniques."

"The Minnesota Wheat Council considers the development of the Model Bakery in the PRC as an investment that will return benefits many times over to the Minnesota and U.S. wheat producer," Satter stated. "China purchased 2.5 million tons of U.S. wheat last year and has already purchased 3.8 million tons from the U.S. this year. With a population of almost one billion people, only a slight increase in per capita consumption of bread products in the PRC could have a tremendous influence on world grain demand."

U.S. Wheat Associates is a wheat market development and promotion organization, supported by Minnesota and 12 other wheat producing states.

Recession And Tax Cuts Cause U of M Cutback

The $14.1 million Gov. Al Quie has told the University of Minnesota it must trim from its budget by June 30, 1981, is more than double the cutback University administrators were expecting, and its has sent them back to the drawing board.

"Now that it's worse than the worst we had imagined, we're looking at everything," said Stanley Kegler, vice president for institutional relations. "We had earlier restricted ourselves to a small series of options for cutting and budget, but everything is open now. The only thing that's sacrosanct is faculty positions. We're assuming we have a contractual agreement on the number of faculty for this coming year."

Kelger said the administration plans to have some cutback options for the Board of Regents to review at its meeting September 4 and 5.

University cutback is part of the $195.1 million — 8.3 per cent of the state budget — Quie says the state must trim to avoid a deficit in the state treasury. The state is constitutionally prohibited from ending its two-year budget cycle in the red.

Quie announced recently that the recession and tax cuts were the major causes of the projected deficit, and that state agencies, local governments that receive state aid, school districts, state universities and the University of Minnesota would have to cut their budgets to cover the loss.

State appropriations make up about 36 per cent of the University's total 1980-81 budget of $608.5 million. Much of the other income comes from tuition and fees, from the federal government and from University-generated sources.

"The torpedo has struck and we're in damage control right now, trying to figure out the best way to make repairs," Kegler said.

Bursitis Is Treatable Type Of Arthritis

Bursitis is a common form of arthritis that can painfully remind us that the human body is like a machine in many ways, according to the Arthritis foundation. For example, the body has levers and cords operating its joints. And these joints, just like opposing surfaces in a machine, need lubrication.

Function of the bursa, a small, slippery, cushion-like sac found in many joints, is to reduce friction when one surface — a tendon or muscle — slides over another, such as a bone. But, as with any machine, things can go wrong.

A bursa may become rough, or inflamed or filled with fluid. The result may be tenderness, considerable pain and swelling. Because the symptoms of bursitis closely resemble those of other kinds of arthritis, the Arthritis foundation urges anyone suffering from them to report them promptly to a physician. Bursitis treatment is usually simple and effective if undertaken quickly.

The Arthritis foundation has a special message on bursitis that may be heard by calling the foundation's toll-free number, 1-800-552-1278. Literature is available free of charge, and answers to questions about arthritis will also be sent to inquirers.

Medic Alert Emblem Saves Time, Lives

A New York City businessman who was in Miami for a company sales meeting sustained severe injuries to his head, neck, abdomen and right leg in an automobile accident recently.

He was unconscious when paramedics arrived on the scene. They assessed his injuries, applied dressings, bandages, began oxygen therapy and intravenous fluids — but did not inject penicillin, because of his Medic Alert emblem which was engraved, "Allergic to Penicillin."

"Once at the hospital," according to Dr. William T. Haeck, "a call to Medic Alert's emergency information center quickly provided additional data which saved valuable time."

"Thanks to Medic Alert, we were provided with his name, address, home and business phone, blood type, nearest relative, insurance policy, plus a tranquilizer medication he took regularly, and the name and phone number of his family physician."

"Quick access to this type of information can be a key in emergencies, and in many cases, such as this one, it can assist in fast and appropriate medical attention plus saving a life," Haeck says.

Haeck urges anyone who is allergic to penicillin to wear a Medic Alert identification emblem on their neck or wrist.

If penicillin is administered to someone who is allergic to it, a severe reaction called anaphylactic shock can occur and may be fatal. Reaction can take place in minutes or within a couple of hours.

Dr. Haeck, who is a past president of the American College of Emergency Physicians, sees Medic Alert as an important link between patient and physician.

"In the last couple of decades we have seen significant progress in medicine," he says. "Within this growth, we have witnessed a more intense concentration on emergency medicine, as a total specialization. Medic Alert and the comprehensive system it provides is entirely supportive of that specialization," Haeck adds.

When an unconscious individual is admitted into an emergency room, one of the first things the emergency team does is try and determine the patient's name, age, significant medical problems, medicines being taken and drug allergies.

"You'd be surprised how little medical information even a close relative is aware of," Haeck says, adding that, "there is no way the emergency physician can determine if the patient has an allergy to a particular medication. In a 'Stat' emergency, there simply isn't enough time."

To obtain information, write Medic Alert, Turlock, CA 95380 or a regional office in New York City, Orlando, Chicago and Salt Lake City.

Feminists Initiate Anthropology Task

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

It sounds like a simple scene from a traditional culture: The men stalk buffalo; build earth lodges, and plant crops. The women sit around, painting ceramic pots, making moccasins, and watching the kids play with the buffalo bones.

Right? Wrong, says Janet Spector, professor of anthropology at the University of Minnesota.

In one perhaps typical culture Spector has studied, the women built and repaired all the earth lodges and other structures, planted the crops, made all the household furnishings, prepared all the food, and gathered the wood, water, wild foods and medicines.

The men brought in four poles for each lodge, grew the tobacco, and then spent the rest of their time "preparing for hunts and raids, which involved long hours of discussion, days of fasting, vision quests and self-torture," Spector said. And they brought home muskrat more often than buffalo.

Spector developed this "task inventory" of the Hidatsa Indians, who farmed, hunted, and gathered food on the Great Plains. Their work roles are probably not a typical of other native cultures. And, until recently, the women's side of the work wasn't told.

"Women's role in the economy of cultures here and all over the world has been glossed over," Spector said. Female anthropoligists are now analyzing who did what work, where and when, and with what tools. Women add up as much more important to their cultures than male anthropoligists used to think. After all, Spector said, anthropoligists spoke mainly to the tribal males. And women's roles were even ignored by the older female anthropoligists, all trained by men.

One of the myths about precolonial cultures is that women couldn't have been strong enough to do much of the work, Spector said. A fragile female wouldn't have lasted long, though, traveling miles into the forest to bring back logs, then building the earth lodges. "These women were much stronger than we are," Spector said.

Another myth is that big game hunting must have required male muscle. Actually, the men killed a lot of rabbits and other small game. Among the Dakotah, another Great Plains tribe Spector has studied, women were considered strong enough to accompany the male hunters, carrying everything but their bows and arrows. Hidatsa women typically gathered cranberries and wild rice, while the men hunted muskrat. "How much strength does it take to hunt an animal mired in a swamp?" Spector said.

The largest group of myths surrounds early women and their biological role, she said. Pregnancy was not considered as mysterious as many anthropologists used to think. Actually, most groups had very effective birth control, often herbal.

Pregnancy, nursing, and caring for young children were not considered handicaps either. In some groups men did almost all the child care, she said.

"The myths we have about sex and sex roles in other cultures may tell us more about our own culture," Spector said.

Women have done virtually every job in some culture or another, and, except for giving birth, so have men, Spector said. After all, rigid sex roles would be an unlikely luxury for people living in groups of only about 50. Whoever was there had to be able to step in and do the work, she said. Feminist anthropologists are now trying to figure out why and where the sex roles varied, and when they became less flexible.

Cultures probably became much more sexist when they adopted settled agriculture, Spector said. As hunting and gathering wild food became less important, fields and villages became more permanent, and private property was established. Children were then heirs, and women might then have become more like property, she said.

One evidence of female solidarity, the "matrilocal option," definitely declined at the beginning of the agricultural era, supporting this theory. In this older cultural practice, a married couple could go to live with the wife's family instead of the husband's. Up to 65 per cent of hunting and gathering cultures offered this possibility to some degree, but moving around at all became much less likely once they began to raise crops.

Also adding to sexism was probably the increased size of the group, Spector said. Work became more specialized, and so more stereotyped by sex.

If the link between female subordination and agriculture is correct, Spector said, the last 500 years of well-organized agriculture have been more sexist than the previous three million years.

Hints For Homeowners

HOW TO DESIGN YOUR OWN ROOF

Nowadays a roof is a lot more than a drab-looking collection of either black or white shingles to keep the rain out. It's the icing on the cake and tops off your home's beauty. The right kind of roof will keep the house dry and safe and will provide important insulation, too.

When you choose a new roof, consider color, design and protection. All three can add up to a good new roof as well as an exciting visual experience.

Surveys tell us that color tops the list of homeowners' priorities in a new roof. Since most homes in the U.S. have asphalt shingle roofs, and will be re-roofed with the same material, asphalt manufacturers offer the most extensive color choice of any roofing material manufacturers.

Generally, if you have light sidewalls and want a dramatic-looking roof, pick a dark shingle. GAF Timberland shingles, for example, are available in charcoal, heather and weathered wood blends. All give strong visual impact to a light sidewalled home.

Dark sidewalls are best matched with a light colored roof. The Timberline shingles designed to complement dark sidewalls are the cedar and redwood blends.

Design is very important. Random-tab, three-dimensional shingles offer a deep shadowline and rich visual texture. Standard three-tab shingles fit in with almost any style of architecture. For a more sweeping appearance, excellent for ranches and wide rather than high structures, a twin-tab shingle is most effective.

Most important is protection. Your new roof must be leakproof and withstand fire and wind as well. Standard shingles, applied by a professional roofer, are warranted by manufacturers such as GAF for 15 years, premium Timberline shingles for 25 years.

There's much to consider when re-roofing. When you design with these three elements in mind, your house will be well protected, look good, and increase in resale value in the years ahead.

Lung Ass'n. Annual Report Is Available

Citing the control of tuberculosis (TB) as one of "the hallmark achievements in this country's health history," R. Paul Marvin, Ph. D., outgoing president of the Minnesota Lung association (MLA), expressed the association's commitment to "attack the other major diseases of the lungs with the same relentless vigor and determination as TB."

Dr. Marvin's remarks are included in the just released MLA 1979-80 annual report which commemorates the 75th anniversary of the American Lung association.

The report explains Minnesota Lung association services and indicates expenditure totals for association programs in adult and child lung diseases ($200,677), anti-smoking education ($143,180), community health services ($91,410), non-smokers' rights ($30,408) and environmental health ($21,462).

Public support for lung association services and research activities was provided primarily by contributors to the 1979 Christmas seal campaign. The report says that approximately 200,000 Minnesotans gave to Christmas seals during the year. Additional income resulted from a special 75th anniversary appeal and from memorial and special occasion gifts.

The MLA annual report, including a complete financial accounting, is available free to those requesting it. Contact the Minnesota Lung Association, 614 Portland Ave. St. Paul 55102 (612) 227-8014.

Travel Center Has Millionth Visit July 29

Paul Figved, Oslo, Norway, stopped July 29 to ask for a map and information on the best route to the Minneapolis-St. Paul international airport and became the millionth visitor at the Minnesota department of transportation's (Mn-DOT) Moorhead travel information center.

Mn-DOT operates the center on Interstate 94 to provide travel information for tourists, business travelers and truckers. Mn-DOT also maintains a rest area with restrooms and picnic tables as a part of the center.

Besides the map and travel information, Myron Frannea, Moorhead center supervisor, presented Figved with a certificate and a set of souvenir cups for being the millionth visitor to use the center's services.

The Moorhead center is one of five at major entry points to Minnesota. Each center has trained counselors who can answer traveler's questions on how far, how long, how much, and are children or pets allowed. Counselors can also point out features along a traveler's route that might otherwise be missed.

Not all travelers are tourists, however, Frannea said. Truckers and business people often stop to ask for the best routes to take or for up-to-date information on road conditions. The Moorhead center has a cathode ray tube terminal, hooked directly with Mn-DOT's emergency services section in St. Paul, which gives weather and road condition information.

Besides helping the travelers find their way, Frannea said, the counselors can help them save gas by showing them direct routes to their destinations.

The Moorhead center has had increased usage almost every year since it opened in July of 1969, Frannea said. More than 54,000 visitors stopped at the center during the first seven months of this year. Although down from a high in 1978, usage is up about 10 per cent from the same period in 1979. A gas shortage in 1979 caused a slowdown in travel, he said.

The other information centers and their locations are: Albert Lea — northbound lane I-35, one mile north of Minnesota-Iowa line; Beaver Creek — eastbound lane I-90, 4.5 miles west of Beaver Creek; Dresbach — westbound lane I-90, 2.5 miles north of LaCrescent; and Thompson Hill — junction US 2 and I-35 at west limits of Duluth. Another Mn-DOT center is located at Anchor Lake — US 53, nine miles south of Eveleth — and is staffed by the Iron Range rehabilitation resource board.

Minnesota Has High Increase Of Measles

For the past several years, Minnesota has been one of the leading states in a rather dubious kind of national competition.

We have, it seems, one of the highest measles rates in the country. And while many people think of measles as a relatively "harmless" childhood disease, authorities at the state health department see our high incidence of this disease as a serious health problem. They point out that this once common but now preventable disease can cause lasting harm to some children.

Partly in response to this problem, the state legislature strengthened Minnesota's school immunization law earlier this year. The law now requires that all children, regardless of age or grade in school, be immunized against measles and six other vaccine-preventable diseases. Up-to-date immunization records will be required before they can enroll in school this fall. Before, the law only covered children entering school for the first time.

Minnesota has had a thousand or more cases of measles for three out of the last four years, state authorities report. Over 1,200 cases were reported during 1979, when Minnesota ranked second nationally in measles incidence. So far this year we rank fourth, with over a thousand cases since the beginning of the year.

Measles can be a serious disease, authorities say. The possible complications can include deafness and mental retardation. In rare cases, measles can even be fatal.

Until a few years ago, when an effective measles vaccine first became available, nearly all children had the disease by the time they were 15. Now measles is completely preventable, authorities say, and federal health officials have even launched an effort to completely eradicate measles from the U.S. by late 1982. The problem, however, is to get children immunized.

Because the old immunization law didn't apply to older children, many of them remain unprotected against measles, authorities say. The problem is especially noticeable in the state's secondary schools. A recent survey found that 78 per cent of the children in grades 10 through 12 and 87 per cent of the children in grades seven through nine had been immunized against measles, compared with 97 per cent in kindergarten through grade six. Authorities say that roughly 60 per cent of the state's measles cases have occurred among junior high and high school students.

The new version of the immunization law went into effect earlier this month. All students must now be immunized before they can enroll, unless they have special medical problems, or their parents are conscientiously opposed to having them immunized. If the new law works, authorities say, Minnesota may soon be able to start "losing" the measles race.

Patrol Checks Truck Weights Near Duluth

Minnesota department of public safety's state patrol division began a new federal highway safety project June 2, involved with checking equipment and weights of commercial vehicles that enter Duluth from various state and U.S. highways.

According to Major Art Rinta, patrol operations officer, the project is an experimental one. "Our purpose is to supplement the current weighing and inspection being done in that patrol district. We want to detect overweight vehicles and those with defects in equipment which could create safety problems. Of particular concern will be brakes, lighting, tires and other safety components," Rinta said.

Continuing through November of this year, the project will provide the state patrol with a large sampling of the commercial traffic in the Duluth area. It will provide more accurate information as to what is happening with weights of vehicles and status of their safety equipment, Rinta said.

Weighing will be done on highway 210 north of Duluth and on Interstate 35 in the Duluth area. The project will employ 10 people and a trooper supervisor.

The patrol picked the Duluth area because of its hilly terrain. "It poses particular problems and increases the difficulties caused by safety equipment," Rinta added. "Overweights also tax the capability of safety equipment and coupled to the steep highway grades in this area can more easily lead to failures with often tragic results."

The project, which will use portable weigh-in scales, is being directed by Captain Owen Borchert of the Duluth district.

Population Explosions Of Insects Examined

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

For the second consecutive summer, farmers and ranchers throughout the country are gearing up for an onslaught of grasshoppers. Billions of these creatures are expected to attack as many as 30 million acres of prime crop and range lands.

Even without this latest assault, U.S. farmers would still have their hands full battling brigades of borers, beetles and weevils. For, despite the arsenal of pesticides and newer biological control methods at the disposal of farmers, insects are winning the war. Worldwide, at least 10,000 species of insect pests yearly ravage pasture, grain and forage, devouring nearly 14 per cent of the market value of crops.

Plagues of insects have been recorded since Biblical times, but the underlying reasons for these sudden surges in population are unknown, according to agricultural scientists and biologists who are studying insect populations and their control.

"Population explosions of grasshoppers, for example, are definitely promoted by warm, dry weather during their hatching season," Dr. John E. Henry, research scientist with the USDA Rangeland Insect Laboratory in Bozeman, MT., says, "but we still don't have a good handle on exactly why these large outbreaks of insects occur. If we are to develop good strategies for controlling them, we need to know a lot more about the relationships of insects to their environment."

In temperate environments such as the United States, agricultural scientists have made substantial progress toward understanding insect ecology and control. Scientists at the Rangeland Laboratory, for instance, have nurtured a naturally occurring parasite of grasshoppers and are now testing its effectiveness in reducing infestations.

Insect ecology in the tropics, however, has been sorely neglected. This is both unfortunate and ironic, according to Dr. Henk Wolda, a biologist at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute in Panama, because there are so many more insect species in the tropics than in temperate climates.

Moreover, he says, the tropics have the highest rate of human population growth in the world, and insect infestations seriously aggravate existing food shortages, adding to the spread of chronic malnutrition and hunger. In both tropical and temperate climates, insects also are important carriers of debilitating and sometimes deadly diseases.

Wolda came to Panama from the Netherlands in 1971 to learn more about insect populations in the tropics. "I quickly found out that I couldn't even ask the question 'why' populations fluctuated," he recalls, "until I had answered 'how' they fluctuated."

"At that time, a popular theory among biologists proposed that tropical ecosystems were very stable, that insect populations there fluctuated little relative to their temperate counterparts. Many of the scientific arguments were persuasive, but there was no data to back them up. I thought, 'nature may not feel itself limited by the biologist's lack of imagination'."

As Wolda was to show later, the theory was wrong; insects in the tropics do indeed fluctuate in abundance from year to year, much as they do in temperate zones.

Wolda came to this conclusion slowly, after years of collecting literally thousands of insects, most belonging to the order Homoptera. The 32,000 species in this order feed on plants — and frequently damage them in the process — by sucking sap; they include such common insects as aphids, whiteflies, cicadas and leafhoppers.

A rich source of insects was Barro Colorado Island, the Smithsonian's 4,000-acre biological preserve in Gatun Lake, the freshwater lake that contains the Panama Canal. The forested island is home to many thousands of insect species in addition to numerous species of other animals and plants.

Wolda captured the insects in "light traps" — one situated only 10 feet above the forest floor, another suspended from the treetops at 100 feet. Essentially, a light trap is nothing more than a light atop a long funnel with a jar at the bottom filled with preservative. The traps operated every night, all night, all year long.

At the same time, other scientists at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute were collecting information on the overall environment as part of the Smithsonian's Environmental Sciences Project. This involved measurements of temperature, rainfall and the amount and type of plant growth on Barro Colorado Island. Wolda also collected insects and environmental information at other locations in Panama with different rainfall patterns.

Weekly collections from Barro Colorado Island were transported by boat and train to Wolda's laboratory in Panama City. There, carefully trained technicians began the painstaking task of sorting, identifying and counting the insects.

Identification was especially complicated because many insects were no larger than mere specks while others were damaged or missing parts. "Sometimes we found a species that I couldn't identify," Wolda says. "I sent those to classification experts who have identified many new species of insects over the years."

The resulting collection, accumulated since 1973, is impressive, filling dozens of drawers with insects of every imaginable shape, size and color, all neatly mounted and labeled. In all, Wolda has studied some 2,500 species of Homoptera from different locations in Panama. In particular, over the course of four years of collecting on Barro Colorado Island, Wolda has analyzed the abundance patterns of 750 species of Homoptera, a total of 100,000 individual insects, and correlated these patterns with environmental factors.

"These studies show conclusively that populations of insects in the tropics are not any more stable than insect populations in temperate zones," he says emphatically. "As in the temperate regions, species of tropical insects may reach outbreak proportions one year and be at very low levels of abundance the next year."

"We're still not sure exactly why this happens," he says, "but we have found that very small changes in rainfall strongly affect both the availability of foliage — the insect's food — and the size of the insect population. So it appears that population size is related to how much of the insect's food source is available at certain critical times in the insect's development.

Insects still arrive weekly at Wolda's laboratory as he continues to follow populations on Barro Colorado Island and elsewhere in Panama. Long-term, large-scale studies of insect populations in the tropics are necessary, he believes, because the populations change radically from year to year.

"Without such basic information," he says, "it will be impossible to develop truly effective means of controlling outbreaks of insects, whether they are American grasshoppers or tropical sugar cane pests."

And most scientists agree with the USDA's John Henry that more effective control methods are urgently needed. Throughout the world, insects already have developed resistance to many of the currently used insecticides. Alternatives often have unwanted and even unforeseen effects on the environment and on humans accidentally exposed to chemical methods. "We must begin to wean ourselves away from the use of chemical insecticides," Henry insists, "but there is so much more we need to learn."

By combining information from temperate and tropical environments, scientists hope to gain a global understanding of insect population explosions, an understanding that may someday give farmers the edge in their ancient battle against insect pests.

Safety Council Urges Drivers To "Drive 55"

Economists warn of the consequences of continued dependence on foreign oil. Washington experts continue to talk about gasoline rationing. Cost of automobile travel takes a bigger and bigger bite out of our paychecks. Perhaps this is the time for Minnesota motorists to declare independence — and take positive steps toward conserving automobile fuel and reducing the necessity of importing foreign crude.

Minnesota safety council has launched a new campaign to remind us of the importance of the 55 mph speed limit. It's theme: "Be Independent — Drive 55". Its aim is to save gasoline and Minnesota lives due to auto accidents.

The safety council recites some impressive statistics. Minnesota traffic fatalities have continued to run almost 20 per cent below record highs posted before the inception of the 55 mph speed limit in late 1973. And driving 55 mph can increase a car's mileage by 17 per cent to 40 per cent — a real savings in gasoline and in dollars, the safety council said.

Other common-sense driving techniques that can save gasoline are: Start slowly and accelerate gently; avoid unnecessary braking and tailgating; avoid excess idling; keep cars well tuned and in good running order; plan trips to bulk errands and avoid extra back and forth travel.

Urging folks to drive 55 mph is not revolutionary, but it is an opportunity to move toward independence in the energy market.

LEGAL BRIEFS

Law Day USA--A Day For All Citizens

By Theodore I. Koskoff
President
Association of Trial Lawyers of America

Our modern Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the Constitution, guarantees freedom of religion, of speech, of assembly, and of petition to the government.

It also provides for fair arrest and trial of persons accused of crimes, and forbids courts to impose cruel and unusual punishment.

These rights were not easily gained for us. They represent the imagination, the dreams, and the blood of patriots over hundreds of years. Thus, it was fitting that we paused recently on Law Day USA to reflect upon the meaning of law to our everyday lives.

T. I. Koskoff

The obvious oversimplification of this reflection is that without law there is anarchy and chaos. But law represents to us in our everyday living a more complicated and sophisticated part of our lives.

Our law is living and changing all of the time as the needs of our people change. It represents the greatest interplay and interdependence that exists anywhere in the world between government and the people. It answers the needs of the people. Nowhere is this more clear than in the operation of the courts and the jury system.

Jury trials are a precious heritage for which our forefathers fought, and they must be retained despite the ill-advised attacks on them. To the public, the retention of jury trials is a constitutional safeguard of their rights and liberties.

On Law Day USA, we are again reminded of the various freedoms and privileges that are afforded to us all by our Constitution. We all should keep in mind that the independence of the Bar is probably the most important element in our judicial system. Coupled with a totally free and independent Bench, it makes our judicial system work. This independence means dedication to all classes of people in our society and to the preservation of justice for all.

Urges SBA To Act On Gov. Quie's Request

Congressman Arlan Stangeland announced that he has urged the administrator of the small business administration to give immediate and favorable consideration to Minnesota Governor Al Quie's request for SBA economic injury assistance to farmers and small businessmen in the 15 disaster-declared counties in northwestern Minnesota.

"In light of the economic hardship currently facing the farmers and small businessmen in these counties, I feel it is essential that action be taken as expeditiously as possible to offer some assistance to these serverly-impacted individuals," Stangeland said.

In order for an area to be made eligible for low-interest SBA economic injury loans, the governor of the state must initiate the request for SBA assistance. Stangeland indicated that he had worked closely with the governor's office prior to Quie's July 2 appeal for SBA assistance and was disturbed that the SBA had not yet acted upon the governor's initial request.

"The entire economy of the 15-county area is heavily dependent upon a healthy agricultural community and the businesses in the drought-stricken region are already suffering because of the farmers' loss of buying power," Rep. Stangeland said. "Farm production is estimated to be 30 to 50 per cent of a normal crop year in these counties and the losses for the businessmen of the area will be in direct ratio to the losses experienced by the farmers."

In conclusion Stangeland remarked, "No decision has yet been made on whether or not to make low-interest SBA loans available to individuals in this area who have sustained severe economic losses because of the drought conditions. I am hopeful the administrator will take appropriate action in the near future to insure that assistance will be made available for the small business men who have been severely affected by the drought."

Make Safety Part Of Your Summer Fun

"Summer sports can be enjoyed by all of us if we follow a few basic rules for safety," says one life insurance company spokesman. "The most important thing to remember is not to overdo. No sport should cause you pain. If what you are doing begins to hurt — stop."

Here are some general tips to follow to help prevent injuries when participating in sports:

+ Warm up. Do stretching exercises. Begin your sport at a slow pace and gradually increase activity. If you're a jogger, run slowly before you lead into your normal jogging pace. Cyclists should do the same. Tennis or racquet-ball players should volley for a while before they begin regular play.

+ Cool down. After sports, let your heart, lungs and muscles return to their normal functions gradually. For example, joggers shouldn't sit immediately after running. They should walk for a while to avoid muscle cramping.

+ Try to avoid participating in your sport when it's too hot or too cold. It is not a good way to exercise your body and can lead to muscle cramps as well as other complications.

+ Drink a moderate amount of unsweetened liquids regularly when exercising. Don't drink too much at any one time.

+ If you're over 35, or question your body's condition, consult your doctor.

"Some sports result in higher incidences of injuries than others," the insurance company spokesman said.

Those sports and their respective safety measures include:

+Biking: Ride one that's the proper size for you for better control. For example, when the driver sits in the bike's seat, the upper part of his body should be inclined slightly forward and the handlebar grips should be at right angles to the handlebar stem and about the same height as the seat. Also, the driver's leg, thigh and heel on the lower pedal should form a straight line. Make sure your bike is in good condition; this includes properly inflated tires, well-lubricated chains and gears and sound brakes.

+ Boating: Know how to operate yours by taking instructions if necessary. Follow all boating safety rules regarding your passengers. Keep your boat properly maintained and repaired.

+ Jogging: Follow the general tips already mentioned. Warm up. Start slowly. You may want to walk for a while before beginning your regular pace. And you should pace yourself. If you push yourself too fast at the start you may run out of energy before you've given your body sufficient exercise.

+Skating: Learn how to use skates or skateboards and practice. Wear knee and elbow protection. Skate in areas not obstructed by other traffic or other hazards. Don't show off.

+ Swimming: Be sure you know how. Use the buddy system — always. Don't mix this sport with alcohol. About 40 per cent of the adults who drowned last year were drunk. Stay away from electrical equipment if you're all wet.

"Most sporting safety is common sense," says the spokesman, "but we all tend to forget when we're having fun."

Appreciation Of Miracle Vine Is Diminishing

What grows a mile-a-minute, is able to leap up an empty house in a single summer, and is nearly indestructible? Look! Up in the trees! It's kudzu!

Kudzu? That's right. Kudzu is an exotic vine with a broad three-pointed leaf and woody stem which was imported to the U.S. from Asia, according to the current issue of Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine. And while many Southerners call it the mile-a-minute vine, it doesn't grow quite that fast. Actually, "at most, a stem can grow about one foot per day," says the National Wildlife Federation's monthly publication for children.

Once Kudzu starts to grow, it doesn't want to stop. The vine has engulfed much of the south, where long growing seasons and abundant precipitation are to its liking. Now it's spreading northward into Kentucky, Virginia and Maryland, and westward into Texas and Oklahoma.

The plant begins growing in the early spring with its green tendrils radiating from its tap roots. It produces great quantities of foliage and, by late summer, clusters of fragrant purple flowers. Its tendrils can grow 60 feet in a season, often climbing vertical obstacles as high as 40 feet.

"Americans first saw kudzu at the Japanese exhibit during the U.S. Centennial celebration in 1876," reports Ranger Rick. "They liked the way it looked, so they began to plant the vine to share their porches." By the early 1900's farmers found that kudzu was inexpensive forage for livestock.

During the Great Depression, it was discovered that the vine's deep roots, dense foliage, and rapid-growth, along with its contribution of nitrogen to the soil, provided ground cover to control erosion, stabilize road banks, and rejuvenate nitrogen-deficient soil. Some southerners called it the "miracle vine."

Asians have always put kudzu to good use. In Japan the vines are used to make cloth, baskets, and paper, and hay is made from the leaves. The Chinese grind up the vines to make a popular kind of flour.

For most Americans, however, kudzu has lost its charm. Farmers have found that as forage, it is early overgrazed, and much of the vine is woody stem, useless as hay. It also invades pastures and crowds out crops. An estimated one million acres or more of southern farm, forest, and pasture land are now covered by kudzu.

The vine isn't popular with foresters, either, since it engulfs all vegetation in its path, killing both large trees and saplings. "Telephone companies don't like the way it sometimes pulls down their poles with its heavy, grasping vines," says Ranger Rick.

So Kudzu's aggressive growing behavior outweighs the positive qualities which caused many southern communities to form "kudzu clubs" and elect "kudzu queens" back in the '40's. Now the U.S. Department of Agriculture lists the vine as a common weed.

Since the vine has spread so widely in the south, only a massive eradication effort using chemical herbicides would be effective. Economic and environmental costs make such a campaign unlikely.

So landowners wage their own battles against the "mile-a-minute" vine, remembering that if kudzu is on the loose, you can't stand in one place for too long.

'U' Study Compares Home Care Services And Nursing Homes

In Sweden, mail carriers check on the elderly people along their routes, one of the "home care" services that help older people remain in their homes.

In this country, 90 per cent of our long-term care bill is for nursing homes.

As America grays, options for the elderly should be enlarged, a University of Minnesota study suggests.

Results of a five-year study comparing home care services and nursing homes in Minnesota were released this month by the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of public affairs and the center for health services research at the University of Minnesota. Prepared for the Minnesota board on aging and the U.S. department of health and human services, the study compared 550 clients of seven nursing and-or homemaker agencies with approximately 450 residents of 11 nursing homes.

The report makes several key points regarding present care of the elderly: Average cost per person receiving nursing home services is significantly higher than the cost for home care. These services include such things as personal care, nursing procedures, mental health and special education, and housekeeping. For example, the cost of formal nursing procedures (administering medication, skin care, physical therapy, etc.) is two and a half times higher for the average nursing home resident than similar procedures received by home care clients.

—Nursing home residents are generally more incapacitated than home care clients in areas of self-care such as bathing, feeding and dressing. However, when comparing persons in intermediate care nursing homes with home care clients, the opposite tends to be true: home care residents are more functionally incapacitated in performing common self-maintenance tasks. Overall, nursing home residents show a much greater impairment in mental functioning than do home care clients.

—Attitudes and feelings on life satisfaction are similar among home care clients and nursing home residents, according to their responses on attitude evaluation surveys. Home care clients perceived themselves as having more choice than nursing home residents.

—Goverment policies still favor nursing homes in that nursing home residents on Medicaid receive more benefits from government programs than comparable Medicaid recipients at home.

Report was prepared by Nancy Anderson, associate professor of public affairs in the Humphrey Institute, Sharon Patten, public affairs instructor for the Institute, and Jay Greenberg, assistant professor in the Health Services research center. Data on costs, patient care and patient attitudes were gathered in three Minnesota urban areas — Hennepin, Olmsted and Ramsey counties.

Researchers said that various studies estimate that 10 to 40 per cent of people now in nursing homes could have remained in their homes if a good variety of home care services had been available. A national average of 25 per cent was estimated recently by U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., head of the House Select committee on Aging.

Average cost for six basic services in nursing homes is $496 per month per person for the entire nursing home sample, the study found. Basic services include: nursing procedures, personal care, homemaking - housekeeping, mental health and special education, care planning, and client supervision. In a sample of 90 nursing home residents who were most similar to home care clients in their level of care, the average cost for the six services was estimated to be $337 per month. This compared with a $67 per month average for the same six formal home care services. These figures do not include room and board costs or the cost of other services such as physician care and help from the family — an important part of care at home.

Nancy Anderson, a professor of public affairs at the Humphrey Institute and principal investigator in the study, said elderly citizens do not necessarily go into nursing homes because they become seriously ill. Instead, entry into nursing homes is more often the result of a breakdown in the informal network of family and friends, finances, or mental health. With home care services, some problems could be avoided.

More home care wouldn't mean the end of help from spouses and children. Families would probably use home care services as a welcome complement to their help or to take the kind of break they need, the researchers said. Study found that informal networks of families, neighbors and friends now provide a massive amount of service to the elderly. "Families hang on as long as they can," Anderson said.

Circumstances of the elderly at home and those in nursing homes are more similar than most people believe, Anderson said. About 42 per cent of those in nursing homes are confined to their beds or to the home, compared to 32 per cent in the home care program.

About 85 per cent of both groups have a relative in the same metropolitan area, and had been visited by one of their children in the past two weeks, though more than a third of the nursing home clients were starting to see less of their families. Those in institutions are less likely to be married, are more likely to be males, and more likely to be considerably more mentally impaired. Only 4 out of 450 nursing home residents were discharged after one year compared to 19 per cent who were no longer receiving home services.

Government policy continues to favor institutionalization, the report states. Medicare covers home nursing services only after a hospital stay and usually for no more than 100 visits. Medicaid, for low-income people of all ages, pays 100 per cent of nursing home costs but only limited amounts for home care.

Publicly funded home care services should be one option of several offered to the elderly, Anderson said. "We should be offering them, along with federally subsidized high-rises, more adult daycare centers for the elderly, church homes with individual apartments and a shared health center, more 'sheltered housing' (private units with shared services), and day or night hospitals where elderly people can stay temporarily (as in England and Scandinavia), all in addition to the nursing homes," she said.

The Wagner-peyser Act of 1933 created the United State Employment Service, a nationwide network of federal-state public employment offices providing free job counseling, testing, referral and placement services to workers; it is also known as the Job Service.

If you have a fire, will you have to pay money out of your pocket to help cover the loss?

Most homeowner insurance policies pay only replacement cost, less depreciation for personal property. For example, an $800 sofa could be valued at just $200 when depreciation is taken, and upon replacement, you would have an out-of-pocket expense of $600, plus the deductible. NOW MSI INSURANCE HAS A BETTER SOLUTION! It will insure most of your personal property at replacement cost value. With this type of coverage, you would receive the full $800, less the deductible.

IT'S GREAT TO GET OUT OF THE OFFICE. . .

A relaxing stretch on the lawn at the Columbus, Ohio zoo shows this gorilla is no chump. When Scotts®, the lawn people, recently provided bluegrass sod for the gorillas' cageless outdoor summer quarters, the keepers noticed an immediate improvement in the gorillas' dispositions, eating habits and digestion. Their frolicking on the green has become so popular that the zoo has had to put up bleachers for the visitors, who now sit by the hour watching the gorilla family cavort in their tranquil grassy setting.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

Is there any connection between goiter and cancer of the thyroid gland? How can doctors tell the difference between a goiter and a tumor?

Miss M.O.

Dear Miss M.O.:

No, there is no relationship between the two. Goiter, or enlargement of the thyroid gland, is not a tumor in the cancer sense. There are several different types of goiter, each having different causes and characteristics.

Some goiters are smooth, some irregular, and some lumpy or nodular. One medical textbook estimates that about 4 per cent of Americans have nodular goiters, while only about 0.002 per cent get thyroid cancer.

When an enlarged thyroid gland has numerous lumps, the condition is usually not malignant. Cancer generally shows up as a single lump in an otherwise normal gland. A variety of tests and sometimes a biopsy are usually done to establish whether the lump is benign or malignant, and whether it should be removed.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My brother was told he had cancer of the prostate when he was 68. By the time it was discovered, it had spread to other parts of his body. He died within two years.

I am 62 now, and am wondering what my chances are of getting prostate cancer. If a person does get this kind of cancer, what are the symptoms?

Nervous Brother

Dear Brother:

The main warning signs of cancer of the prostate are urinary problems. These can include the need to empty the bladder frequently (especially during the night), the inability to urinate, difficulty in starting urination, or a weak or interrupted flow of urine. Other signs can be a flow of urine that is not easily stopped, painful or burning urination, or blood in the urine.

The prostate is a male gland that lies just below the bladder. It surrounds the urethra (the tube through which urine is excreted) just as it leaves the bladder. If the entrance of the bladder is blocked by a tumor of the prostate gland, urinary systems can result.

Pain is sometimes the first symptom of cancer of the prostate. This pain could occur in the hip bones, lower back, or upper leg.

Any man over the age of 50 should be aware of these signs. Although they often indicate problems less serious than cancer, they should never be ignored. If any symptoms appear, a doctor should be consulted immediately.

One way of detecting prostatic cancer before symptoms develop is by having a rectal examination as part of your annual physical examination. During this examination, the doctor can usually feel a tumor of the prostate while it is still small, before it has spread, or started to produce symptoms. The vast majority of tumors discovered at this stage can be treated successfully.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I just learned that one of my best friends has cancer. I was really shocked as she is only 26. As a matter of fact, it is really frightening to think that it could have been me. Now I don't know what to say or how to act around her. Do you have any suggestions about how to talk with a friend who has cancer?

T.S.

Dear T.S.:

First of all, you must realize that your friend is still the same person and needs your friendship and support as never before. You need to help her maintain hope, and the best way to do so is to familiarize yourself with some facts about cancer.

In the United States, one out of four people will develop cancer. Almost everyone sometime will have to face the problem of talking with someone who has cancer. There are no simple rules because each person and each situation is unique.

The word "cancer" is frightening and makes many people think of death. It is important to know that one out of three persons treated for cancer now has a normal life expectancy. Most cancers are treatable and research is constantly improving treatment of all cancers. Thus, the fear you are experiencing should be tempered with hope.

The American Cancer Society has listed some guidelines which might help you in your relationship with your friend who has cancer:

Let her take the lead. If she wants to talk, be a good listener. Listen to what is said and how it is said as well as what is meant but not said.

Try to feel comfortable when there is a lull in the conversation. People can sense discomfort in others. Silences can be helpful in putting our thoughts into focus. Constant talking can be mere words with little meaning or true communication. Don't feel you have to say something.

A person also learns from your tone of voice or even your facial expression. Try to maintain eye contact so she will feel you are being straightforward and open. Touching, smiling, looks that convey affection show others that, even though they are ill, they have not changed in your eyes.

Cancer patients do not want to think about to talk about their disease all the time. It is human and adds to the quality of life to laugh and enjoy things.

Try to involve your friend in as many shared activities as possible. If you used to play cards — play cards now! If you used to go to the movies together — continue to do so. This, of course, is dependent on whether your friend is physically able to do so. Use your judgment. Don't underestimate the effects of the illness but don't be overprotective. Continue to visit. Continue to invite and urge the patient to do things with you and others. Encourage friends to visit and, if they can't, urge them to write to call on the phone. Perhaps they might be willing to do errands or care for the children.

How do you talk with someone who has cancer? Listen to her, and listen with your heart.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My cousin, a woman in her late fifties, was told that she has cancer of the voice box and she must be operated on. I thought this was a disease that only elderly men got. Can women get it as easily as men? What causes this kind of cancer?

Also, she says that her doctor told her she will still be able to talk after the operation. How would that be possible?

Concerned Cousin

Dear Concerned Cousin:

Cancer of the voice box, called the "larynx," is a disease that can afflict anyone, not just elderly men. The fact is that laryngeal tumors are mostly found in men in their fifties and sixties, but this doesn't mean that women cannot get it, too. The ratio of male to female patients is about 7 to 1.

No one caused has been identified for cancer of the larynx as yet. However, smoking and chronic use of alcohol are generally thought to be primary contributors.

Many people who have surgery of the larynx are able to talk after the operation. However, the way they speak may be changed depending on the amount of tissue that needs to be removed.

Many times the patient does not need to have the entire larynx removed (an operation called a laryngectomy) to cure the cancer. In fact, over half of all patients with laryngeal cancer who require surgery need only a partial laryngectomy. This means that it may be necessary to remove just one vocal cord, half of both vocal cords, or the epiglottis (the lid-like structure that covers the entrance to the larynx). If a patient has a partial laryngectomy, she or he can continue talking in much the same way as before the operation, although some change in voice may occur.

Some patients with certain early cancers are recommended for x-ray treatments instead of partial or total laryngectomy. In that case, the only surgery needed is a biopsy. This means that a small piece of the tissue is surgically removed and examined with a microscope to determine the type and extent of the cancer that is present. X-ray treatments for early cancer are used when all evidence suggests that they can eliminate the tumor. Like patients who have had a partial laryngectomy, these individuals are able to continue talking in much the same manner as they did before treatment.

If the entire larynx must be removed, the patient must learn to produce voice sounds in a different way. The larynx makes speech possible by vibrating muscles to produce a tone of varying pitch. The tongue, lips, and jaw shape this laryngeal tone into words, phrases, and sentences. When the larynx has been removed, a substitute must be found for that laryngeal tone.

Most speech therapists find that the best substitute is "esophageal" speech. This is produced by forcing air down the esophagus (the swallowing tube) and bringing it up again, releasing it over a period of several seconds. A sound is created that can be used as a substitute for laryngeal tone, although the range of pitch will be lacking, and loud voice sounds are difficult. The tongue, lips, and jaw are used to shape this sound into words, phrases, and sentences, as before. This type of speech is remarkably effective for many patients, although not all are able to master the technique.

A qualified esophageal speech therapist works with the patient, often in group sessions, to teach him or her how to speak in this way. Esophageal speech is the most convenient and the best understood method of substituting for laryngeal speech. However, alternate methods, including mechanical speech aids, are available for those who choose them.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I have had a vaginal yeast infection with severe inflammation for about three years, off and on. I am worried that this may lead to cancer. Am I right?

R.P.W.

Dear R.P.W.:

No, you are wrong.

Yeast infections are a common nuisance to women of all ages, but fortunately, they never lead to cancer. Nonetheless, you probably don't need to put up with it — discuss it with your doctor. He or she will probably be able to find an effective treatment for it.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My grandmother and mother both died of cancer of the kidney. Is this type of cancer passed from one generation to another? I am only 29 years old but am very concerned about my health. What kinds of tests can be done to find kidney cancer early?

Christine

Dear Christine:

Cancer of the kidney, also called hypernephroma or renal cell carcinoma, is not common. There are approximately 16,000 new cases per year in the United States. It is unusual that two cases of primary kidney cancer would occur in the same family, particularly since there is no evidence that a tendency to develop this disease is hereditary. Also, kidney cancer is twice as common in men as in women.

Given your family, however, the concern about your health is understandable.

According to one cancer specialist, it is important that you have a regular physical evaluation at least once a year. This evaluation should include general blood work and routine laboratory tests. Also, it would be wise to stick with one physician who is aware of your family history.

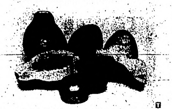
In addition to undergoing regular physical examinations, you should report to the doctor any symptoms you may experience, such as blood in the urine or a persistent lump or pain in the abdomen or side.

There are no other routine screening techniques available for the early detection of kidney cancer. When needed, x-rays of the kidneys can be taken. Routine kidney x-rays aren't recommended, however, because of the possible complications from repeated exposure to the x-ray.

Ultrasound, the medical application of echoing sound waves, is another type of diagnostic examination sometimes used when kidney cancer is suspected.

If you would like additional information about kidney cancer, call the Cancer Information Service serving your area. The toll-free telephone number for Minnesota is 1-800-582-5262 and for North Dakota and South Dakota 1-800-328-5188.

A FRUITFUL ESCAPE TO PARADISE



Paradise. There's something about this word that conjures up irresistible thoughts of shady trees, balmy seas and persistent sunshine. Not to mention thoughts of lush, exotic fruits of paradise.

Consider first the succulent papaya. Often called the "sunshine melon from Hawaii," papayas have a Crenshaw melon-like taste, with an added pineapple twist. A papaya's skin coloring may range from green to yellow though the inside flesh is bright gold with a wealth of black seeds nestled in the cavity of the fruit. Mainland dwellers will find papayas available in most markets year 'round, and favorite ways to use the fruit have a strong Polynesian influence whether served with pork, beef or barbecued kabobs or as half shells filled with seafood.

The legendary mango has been known for centuries to be one of "the most eaten fruits in the world." The flavor is like that of a peach with a hint of pineapple, and the fruit may be either round or elongated in shape. Depending upon variety, mango skin color may be green, yellow or tinged with red and yellow, though the inside flesh is a brilliant gold with a long flat seed in the center. The islander way to eat a mango is like a banana, by scoring the skin in quarters and peeling the sections of skin away. Mainland markets will find mangos arriving in the early spring and staying through the summer.

A venture into paradise is not complete without sampling the curious kiwifruit. The brown, fuzzy exterior hides an interior of brilliant emerald green with tiny black edible seeds. New Zealand's kiwibird gave the fruit its name and both its namesake country and California provide this fruit year 'round to most markets. A tangy, tart-sweet flavor with a delicate taste of watermelon, strawberries and bananas all rolled into one distinguish the fruit.

Fortunately for all frustrated paradise vacationers, those exotic fruits are no longer confined to the tropics. According to Calavo Growers of California, a major marketer of tropical fruits in the U.S., these fruits are enjoying widespread popularity in this country with expanding supplies foreseen for the future. Bananas and pineapples, move over!

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Whose Side Is This Government On Anyway?

Back in school, we learned that the founding fathers added the Bill of Rights to the Constitution to protect the individual liberties of the American people. Just imagine, then how stunned these men would be if they returned today and saw how federal bureaucrats abuse the Constitution. They would witness an incredible spectacle: Our own government trying to harrass Americans and violate their Constitutional rights, even as it protects the "rights" of Iranian demonstrators intent only on disrupting our country. It sounds like a bad dream, but it's actually happening.

Five years ago, a gutsy small businessman from Pocatello, Idaho, Bill Barlow, turned away a federal inspector who tried to enter his plumbing and heating plant without a search warrant. Barlow felt the inspector who worked for OSHA, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, would have violated his rights as spelled out by the Fourth Amendment which reads: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

Barlow battled the federal government all the way to the Supreme Court. Incidentally, we were proud to take part in that case on Barlow's side, and to see the Supreme Court finally uphold him in 1978 when it ruled that a warrant is required for OSHA inspections when the employer demands it. Through its decision, the Court made an important statement that all employers have Constitutional rights which must be protected.

Almost immediately, however, the Department of Labor went to work to undermine the Barlow decision. Now it has proposed a new rule which would allow OSHA inspectors to obtain warrants from local magistrates before even attempting to inspect workplaces, and without the opportunity for employers to have notice or respond.

So doesn't it seem just a bit ironic that this same government, which does not hesitate to trample over the rights of its own citizens, now allows Iranians, literally, to walk all over us? Some people maintain, of course, that our government must submit to the Iranian antics, because the First Amendment provides for freedom of speech and for the right of people to peaceably assemble.

I disagree. Although we must be as vigilant protecting the First Amendment as all others, that is not at issue here. What is at issue is whether a foreign power can pay aliens to demonstrate in and disrupt American cities while that same foreign power holds innocent Americans hostage at gunpoint.

The 191 Iranians who were arrested in Washington, D.C., July 27, following violent demonstrations on behalf of the Ayatollah Khomeini, were held in custody for only six days. Then, under pressure from Khomeini, and reportedly from our own Justice Department, all were released. Not one was deported. Adding insult to injury, they returned to the streets to demonstrate again. No one will ever convince me that all the people who demonstrated did so voluntarily, without any coercion, that all of them did so without pay and without being given transportation, food and shelter, or that all of them are here legally.

What has become of this great country? Isn't it time we restore our self-dignity by treating our own citizens at least as well as we do the scavengers who roam our streets denigrating America? Isn't it time we restore the strength of America and our leadership around the world by making those in Washington understand that we must have a government of the people, by the people and for the people?

Will Social Security Be In Your Future?

Will the Social Security system still be solvent and able to pay the money you will be due when you retire: This question might have been scoffed at just a decade ago, but now it is being asked in earnest by more and more Americans. They have good reason to be concerned.

Social Security is in trouble for three basic reasons. First, the Social Security trust fund is currently being propped up thanks only to a tremendous tax increase. Unfortunately, this tax increase is only one of many the Administration has imposed as a kind of knee-jerk response to every economic problem from inflation, to energy, to Social Security. But, as the U.S. Chamber has repeatedly warned, people do not work just to pay taxes, but to earn more after-tax income. Not surprisingly then, all this excessive taxation has depressed the economy and made the recession worse. Should the result be a long, drawn-out recession, the Social Security trust fund will be depleted further and faster than expected.

Second, we are beginning to experience the long-predicted "graying of America" as the over-65 segment of the population grows larger in proportion to other age groups. And within 25 years, the post-World War II baby boom will become the twenty-first century retirement boom. That, combined with our present low population growth, means the ratio of Social Security taxpayers to beneficiaries will drop sharply at the very time larger and larger outlays for the Social Security program will be needed.

Finally, although 90 per cent of the American work force is covered by Social Security, about nine million workers — mostly federal, state and local government employees — are exempt from paying Social Security taxes. Nonetheless, about 70 per cent of those "uncovered" employees finally qualify for Social Security benefits, as a result of working in covered employment at some time in their career. (Incidentally, in discussing this problem in a recent column, I unintentionally conveyed the impression that government workers can collect Social Security benefits without ever paying Social Security taxes. This is obviously not possible as I have pointed out in prior columns, so I want to thank those readers who alerted me and make sure the record is made clear.)

Nevertheless, government workers generally qualify for benefits equal to about two third of what they would have earned if their full career had been in covered employment, even though they pay less than one-third of the amount career-long covered employees pay in Social Security taxes. Health and Human Services estimates this windfall amounts to about $840 million a year. It happens because the Social Security benefits formula allows workers with low average career earnings to receive a higher return on their contributions than do workers with high earnings. This subsidy is intended to benefit workers with a lifetime of low wages. Unfortunately, it makes no distinction between these low income people and federal employees whose average private sector earnings are low only because they have worked so long in government employment.

In terms of fairness, there is simply no reason why any working American should be exempt from supporting and participating in Social Security. I say this because Social Security is not really an individual retirement program, but rather a form of welfare in which today's workers are taxed to supplement the incomes of those who have already completed their working careers, or who are widows, orphans or disabled. If mandatory universal Social Security coverage were anacted and made effective by January, 1982, the Social Security system could receive an additional $123 billion in revenues by 1987. That would constitute a big step in the right direction.

It is also estimated that tens of billions of dollars could be saved by slightly reducing the benefits of future beneficiaries. This would obviously be a controversial decision, however, and I personally believe the government has an obligation to begin offering much stronger tax incentives to encourage Americans to set up or expand their own individual retirement accounts.

The integrity of the Social Security system must be preserved, but to date, Congress has lacked the courage to take the decisive action we need. If our public servants cannot seem to see the light, then the upcoming election offers a perfect opportunity to make them feel the heat.

FOODFACTS & FANCIES

The largest single dish in the world is probably roast camel, a specialty at Bedouin wedding feasts. Its stuffing consists of cooked eggs stuffed in fish, the fish stuffed in cooked chickens, the chickens stuffed in a roasted sheep, and the sheep stuffed in a whole camel.

Properly cooked vegetables keep many more nutrients, says the Professional Nutritionist, a publication of Foremost-McKesson Foods. Sugar, fat and protein remain relatively stable during preparation, but vitamins and minerals may be lost more easily. The most liable to loss are the water-soluble vitamins C and B_1 (thiamine). To retain these and generally assure better retention of most other nutrients as well, cook potatoes in their skins and steam frozen vegetables in a covered pot.

Freezing meat at minus 20°C (or 0°F) or below is recommended for ideal storage. Wrapping meats properly will reduce freezer burn and nutrient loss. A good rule-of-thumb is to store foods no longer than three months in the refrigerator freezer compartment.

Instead of thawing, you should cook foods from the frozen state. Thawing may result in considerable loss of protein, B vitamins and minerals in the discarded juices—especially for chopped, cubed and organ meats. Any juices should be reserved for sauces, gravies and soups.

Store vegetables in plastic bags or crispers in the refrigerator. They should not be washed or trimmed before storage, but fruits such as bananas and pears should be ripened at room temperature, then placed in the refrigerator uncovered to prevent deterioration.

Budget Like Diet; Motivation Needed

Budgeting is like dieting; you start with the best intentions to systematically pare away expenses, then you fall by the wayside. You are tempted by impulse buying the way you are tempted by desserts. For this reason budgets should be flexible enough to accommodate an occasional urge to splurge.

People who live from paycheck to paycheck with only a few dollars left over believe they don't need a budget — that there's not money enough to worry about. But maybe it's squandered on the little things you buy week after week. Sometimes, says the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants, they keep you from getting the bigger items you need.

Healthy businesses rely on budgets. They practice tight control over their money and understand the long-range rewards of budgeting to acquire capital, reducing taxes and building investments. Families, too, will profit from businesslike financial planning.

It's best to begin with a quarterly budget, CPAs say, because it's difficult to control expenses for any shorter period. First, find out where your money went last year. Add up what you spent for housing, food, entertainment, clothing. (Include taxes only if they are not withheld from your pay.) Your budget for this quarterly period should include columns for the same period for last year, the "projected" budget for this quarter and the "actual" expenditures for this period.

Just as motivation is the key to maintaining a diet — so it is the key to adhering to a budget, CPAs say. You need to decide what you want to do with your money before you can know how to spend it. Think of the things you need and want — and then plan to get them. If you want to take a trip next summer, and you know it will cost $700 — then you have 12 months to save. It means putting aside $60 a month. Include this as the top line in the budget, the first payment you make to yourself from each paycheck.

Take into consideration "weaknesses" you have. If you are a stamp collector and can't resist adding to your collection, then allow a place for it in the budget.

Of course, the primary or fixed expenses may not allow much latitude for anything else, but even small amounts set aside for vacations or entertaining will make your budget realistic.

Unless you have sufficient savings, your budget should make allowances for contingencies that might otherwise unsettle your finances. Also, each member of the family should have "walking around money" so that budget categories and bookkeeping won't grow cumbersome.

Making a budget and getting a clear picture of your spending habits will make it easier to cut back. If bringing your lunch to work means you save $15 a week and $60 a month, and that means you can take that vacation next summer, you are less inclined to grumble "I can't afford it," and more inclined to understand you are achieving a goal.

After a year of budgeting you may realize you are spending 20 per cent of your income on two automobiles you and your spouse drive. Knowing this, you might then ask yourself, would buses or cabs cost as much; can we extend the loan on one car to lower monthly payments; can we eliminate collision insurance on the older car; or can we trade in one car for a more economical model?

To make financial management less complicated, CPAs say, put money for household expenses into a checking account; put money for long term goals into an interest-bearing account.

Because money can be a major cause of marital discord, both spouses should cooperate in working out the family finances. Even if only one partner chooses to do the actual recordkeeping and bill paying, both should know where the money goes. Set aside a regular time each month for bill paying and record keeping. That shouldn't take more than two hours, CPAs say.

Your ability to make decisions about life goals is rooted in realistic financial planning, CPAs not, and after figuring out your net worth, budgeting is the key to carrying out that planning.

Studies Prove Diets Don't Cure Arthritis

Many dietary remedies are available for people suffering from arthritis. Unfortunately, according to the Arthritis foundation, there is no reliable evidence that they work to cure or to prevent arthritis.

Fad diets are popular, an Arthritis foundation spokesman observed, because they usually promise an easy solution to a desperate problem.

The problem with testimonials is really a problem with arthritis, the spokesman continued. Arthritis flares up and subsides, often spontaneously. So if someone is on a diet of unbuttered popcorn, say, at the time his or her arthritis subsides, that person can be convinced that unbuttered popcorn was the reason for the improvement.

But controlled tests of dietary remedies when given to large numbers of carefully observed arthritics do not indicate that the reduction of arthritis symptoms is more frequent than would have been predicted by chance alone. Some patients may indeed find that their symptoms subside, but others experience flare-ups. Most seem to be unaffected.

Studies of vitamin supplements have produced the same results: Vitamins do not make arthritis better or worse.

Medical investigations have concluded that the best diet for arthritics is a balanced nutritious diet that keeps weight at the individual's ideal level — exactly the diet that's best for everyone.

The Arthritis foundation has a message on fad diets for arthritis that may be heard by calling the foundation's toll-free number, 1-800-552-1278. Free literature is also available to callers.

Hospital Annual Meeting Tonight

Operating revenues of $7,053,451 and operating expenses of $6,951,085 for the 1980 fiscal year will be reported at the annual meeting of Northwestern Hospital services tonight (Monday) at 8 p.m. at Lon's restaurant in Thief River Falls.

Three members will be elected to the board of trustees at the annual meeting. Board chairman Robert Bredeson, secretary Harley Kelly and Harry Oen have been nominated by the nominating committee to succeed themselves for three-year terms. Each has served two three-year terms on the board and would be ineligible following a third term under by-laws of the association.

Also placed in nomination by petition for positions on the board of trustees are Darrell Bakke, Roger Reiter and Chris Twomey. All members of the hospital association are eligible to vote in the election.

Speakers at the meeting will be Dr. Steve Levinson, clinical director of the day-night unit at the hospital, and Judy Janneck, director of patient education and community services.

Annual financial report of the hospital association shows that total operating revenues of the hospital at $7,053,451 in fiscal 1980 were up from $5,908,328 the previous year. Expenses showed a similar increase to $6,951,085 from $5,929,416.

The hospital also had non-operating revenue of $330,334 in 1980 for a total excess of revenues over expenses of $432,700 or 5.6 per cent. Among operating expenses were $3,083,256 in nursing services, $1,665,738 in professional services, $1,381,311 in general services and $820,780 for administration, including interest of $183,641 in 1980 and $225,842 in 1979. Income from operations in excess of expenditures was $102,366 or 1.3 per cent.

At the end of fiscal 1980 the hospital has a fund balance of $4,451,522, an increase from $4,016,223 in fiscal 1979. The hospital has current assets of $1,990,341, other assets of $1,294,535, land, buildings and equipment (less depreciation) of $5,551,892 for total assets of $8,836,768.

Current liabilities total $1,074,371 with long-term debt of $3,310,875 secured by land, buildings and equipment. Total liabilities of $4,451,522 show an increase from $4,016,223 a year ago. Total assets of $8,836,768 show an increase from $8,260,024 last year.

There were 4,325 admissions to the hospital's acute care units and 115 to the convalescent and nursing care unit during the year for a total of 4,440, an increase from 4,357 the previous year. Number of patient days increased to 19,915 from 19,149 for an increase of 766. Length of stay increased to 6.01 days from 5.96 days in the acute hospital and decreased from 302.20 days to 268.64 days in the CNC unit. There were 517 births during the year.

Development Meeting Set At Goodridge

Initial meeting to explore possibilities of a development organization for the Goodridge area will be held Monday, September 22, at 9 p.m. in the Goodridge city hall, according to Dr. David M. Brown, mayor.

"In order for Goodridge to have some of the things needed in the area, a group needs to be formed to serve as a focal point in the making of a better community," Dr. Brown said. "At the September 22 meeting we would list some of the goals of the community and perhaps place them on a priority list."

Stan Weber of the Midwest Minnesota community development corporation has offered to attend a meeting in Goodridge to discuss goals, methods of achieving them and how to set up a permanent development organization for the area, Dr. Brown noted.

"A second meeting could be held at a future date to plan further action for a development organization if it is decided to form one," the mayor added. "We need local input along with help from experts outside our area, and this may be a method of getting both."

Board To Meet At Goodridge

Goodridge school board will hold its regular meeting tonight (Monday) at 8 p.m. in the Goodridge school.

Primary Election Scheduled Tuesday

Polls for the primary election Tuesday in Thief River Falls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and all eligible voters are encouraged to cast their ballots. Voters are once again reminded that they may vote for candidates of only one party in the primary election. To do otherwise will result in having the ballot disqualified.

A change in Thief River Falls voting was announced by city clerk Jerry Wigness, who notes that second ward voters will cast their ballots at the city auditorium instead of the Masonic hall as they have in the past.

Other polling places are Northrop school for the first ward, city auditorium for the third ward, Knox school for the fourth ward and Franklin middle school for the fifth ward.

Area election interest is centered on the DFL legislative contest between LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer and Jim Kremer of Thief River Falls, and the fourth district commissioner race in Marshall county where incumbent Percy Stokke, Marcella Gonsorowski, Lowell W. Lindemoen and Marlowe Meyer are in a four-way race for two positions on the November general election ballot.

30 Enrolled At Our Saviour's Academy Here

Our Saviour's Christian academy, formerly Kings Way Christian academy, opened its doors for the 1980-1981 school year on Tuesday with 30 students in attendance.

Nine kindergarten pupils are pre-enrolled for the classes that will begin in January. Eighteen of the present students are new to the academy and represent membership in nine area churches, according to Rev. Eugene Enderlein, pastor of Our Saviour's Free Lutheran church and the academy's principal.

Full-time supervisors (teachers) are Mrs. Donald Lerud, a graduate of Concordia college, Moorhead; and Mrs. Eugene Enderlein, a magna cum laude graduate of Baldwin-Wallace college in Ohio. Supervisor for music, physical education and art is Mrs. Marvin Kading, a cum laude graduate of Concordia college, St. Paul. The supervisors have had teaching experience in both public and private schools.

Assisting as monitors (teacher aides) are Mrs. Ted Johnson, Mrs. Gary Erickson, Solveig Swenson, Pam Swenson, Mrs. Jerry Swenson and Randy Moe. Serving daily as the lunch room aid is Mrs. Dorothy Erickson. Mrs. Maurits Scholin will teach a home economics class later in the year.

A five-man school council comprised of members of Our Saviour's Free Lutheran church will direct affairs of the academy. Chairman is Gary Erickson; vice chairman, Ellsworth Senum; secretary, Donald Balmer; treasurer, Philip Grothe; and special committee leadership will be provided by Harlan Halvorson.

Christian Academy Boosters club (CAB), involving interested and concerned people from the area, meets the second Tuesday of every month to "boost" school affairs and assist in meeting the needs of the academy. The next CAB meeting will be on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the academy, located just east of highway 59 on Sorteberg drive.

Ceremony Thur. Marks End Of Soils Survey

To officially observe completion of the soil mapping of Pennington county, a "Last Acre Ceremony" will be held Thursday at 1 p.m. at Oakland park near Oakland Park nursing home in Thief River Falls.

Anyone interested in attending the event is welcome, according to Rod Heschke, leader of the soil survey party which has spent the past five years on the Pennington county project. Work is now underway in Beltrami county (see story in this issue) on a projected eight-year mapping project there.

The survey has revealed 52 different types of soils in Pennington county. All necessary samples have been taken and the crew, which consists of Heschke, Jim Schulzetenberg and Mike Oja, will road check soils maps this fall and develop interpretation tables and write the text of the report this winter. The survey is expected to be published in 1981.

Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director, will serve as master of ceremonies for the program with the welcome to be given by Leonard Skaar, chairman of the Pennington soil and water conservation district's board of supervisors. Skaar, a past chairman of the state association board, will also speak on "Why the Soil Survey and Its Relationship with SWCD".

Albert Koop, member of the county board of commissioners, will speak on "The County's Involvement in the Soil Survey". Don Barron, acting area conservationist for the SCS, will review "The History of Soil Survey and Its Benefits".

Maynard Scilley, retired as state soil scientist, will talk on "Cooperating Agencies and Their Roles in Soil Survey" and Rod Heschke, party leader for the SCS, will discuss "The Pennington County Soil Survey — How It Was Done".

Allan Gustafson, work unit conservationist for the Pennington SWCD, will outline "What Will Be in the Soil Survey Report" and selection of the honorary soil survey team will be announced by Skaar and Gustafson.

Citizen Committee Looks At Costs Of Bond Issue

Members of the Thief River Falls school district citizens' committee took an initial look at tax costs for construction of a $15 million project to build a new high school and improve existing schools at a meeting held Thursday evening in the Lincoln high school cafeteria.

What they saw was a cloudy picture of a substantial tax increase which would affect residential, commercial and agricultural property in the district. And what they learned was that it is virtually impossible to clarify that picture because of the complicated formulas that apply in the levying of taxes on individual properties.

Several members of the news media are meeting tonight with county auditor C.W. Rodekuhr, county assessor Gerard DeHaan, citizens' committee chairman John Seaverson, several members of the committee and school district officials. Objective of the meeting will be to find an acceptable method of outlining the building project costs to the taxpayer in an accurate, concise and understandable manner.

In material received by citizens' committee members Thursday evening, a schedule of repayment of a $15 million general obligation bond issue at an estimated eight per cent interest was presented. The schedule shows a repayment period of 24 years, during which time total payments of principal and interest would be $35,130,000 on the proposed project ($15 million principal and $20,130,000 interest).

Average annual tax levy required during the 24 years to retire the debt would be $1,405,261 or 32.43 mills based on the current assessed valuation of the district of $43,332,578.

Statistics presented by Springsted, Inc., public finance advisors, were reviewed by the committee and a number of questions were asked. Because of the apparent confusion in attempting to relate the tables presented to the taxation procedure, the committee determined a review with the county auditor and assessor would be in order before presenting further public information on the tax question.

Chairman Seaverson reviewed a telephone conversation he had held with officials from the Bemidji school district which recently passed a multi-million bond issue for new school construction. Four votes were held on the bond issue in Bemidji over a period of two and one-half years.

"The first and fourth questions were identical," Seaverson said. "Two schools were included in both those proposals. In the second and third votes, one or the other of the schools was eliminated. The project finally passed at $14.5 million and was the same project which had been

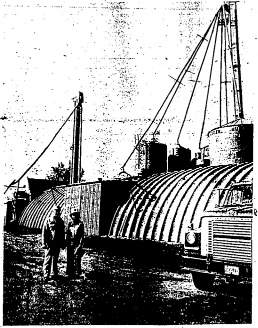
Determination And Faith Build Natural Way Mills



STANDING BESIDE their flour milling industry, Natural Way Mills, Inc., near Middle River, are Ray and Helen Juhl, who have created a profitable business out of a hobby. The industry, which began seven years ago with a 10-foot Lee Mill, is now capable of producing 1,100 pounds of flour an hour. "We have decided the Lord led us into this type of business," Helen said.

ALL GRAIN MUST BE cleaned before it's milled, according to Ray and Helen Juhl of Middle River, who are the originators of Natural Way Mills, Inc. The flour milling plant on the Juhl farm, which was converted from a heifers' pole barn, houses various rooms and machines which have helped make their stone-ground flour milling industry a profitable business.

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

When Ray and Helen Juhl of Middle River began their flour milling industry as a hobby, they had no idea that seven years later that industry would become a profitable business, offer them the opportunity to market their products all over the United States and that their stone-ground flour mill would be capable of putting out 1,100 pounds of flour an hour.

The Juhls began their industry (now called Natural Way Mills, Inc.) seven years ago with a 10-foot Lee Mill, Helen said. And, when more and more people became interested in getting flour, the Juhls converted a heifers' pole barn into a flour mill.

"We are also naturally interested in good flour ourselves," she said. "We are not happy with the regular flour on the market."

That factor seemed to be one of the major reasons encouraging the Juhls to begin their own flour milling industry. That and the fact that the family is vegetarian — due to their religious upbringing as Seventh Day Adventists and because they believe a vegetable diet is more healthful.

"We debated over having organically grown grains or regular wheat," Helen said. "After talking with people we decided to go organic. We have decided that the Lord led us into this type of business."

The Juhls moved to Middle River from Bowesmont, ND in 1954, Helen said. They have four children, including Douglas, 29; Bruce, 28; Rayleen, 27; and Shanda, 26 — and six grandchildren, she smiled.

Within the flour-milling industry, the Juhls make stone-ground whole wheat flour, rye flour, two kinds of breakfast cereals, and their newest product — golden white flour — which contains wheat germ and most of the nutrients of whole wheat, Helen said.

The family also produces vegetarian steak mix which consists of wheat, oats, barley, soybean and nutritional yeast with Vitamin B 12.

"This is a natural replacement for meat," Helen said. "It is complete with protein, it's healthful, nutritious and has no cholesterol, fat or added salt. You can do anything with it that you can with meat only it's nutritionally better."

Two of the steaks made from the mix are equivalent to an average serving of meat, she said.

"I haven't had meat for 20 years," she said. "But I've actually been a vegetarian all my life for the amount of meat I've eaten."

According to Helen, a vegetarian diet is more healthful for three major reasons: (1) a person gets the nutrients first hand, while a meat eater gets his nutrients second-hand; (2) there is no problem with disease as in meat where chemicals are transmitted through the meat; and (3) as far as energy conservation is concerned, it takes seven acres of land to produce an equal amount of animal protein that one acre of land will produce of vegetable protein, she said.

Helen, besides helping her

Rood And Sorenson Vows Said at Lawn Wedding

Miss Denise Rood and John Sorenson were married at a four o'clock lawn wedding on July 11 at Holt at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rood. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Sorenson, Thief River Falls.

Rev. Albert Stromlund, Galena, Mo., uncle of the bride, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Music was provided by Mrs. Albert Stromlund, aunt of the bride. She played the autoharp as she sang, "Gem of My Heart," and also played the wedding march.

Forming the setting for the ceremony was an arch decorated with greenery and white flowers. Beneath the arch was a white floral arrangement, backed by a white wrought iron candelabra featuring three candles in hurricane globes.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a bridal gown of white organza trimmed with reembroidered Chantilly lace and seed pearls. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline and short butterfly sleeves, edged with matching lace. Corresponding lace appliques and a deep flounce enhanced the bouffant skirt that flowed back into a chapel-length train. A lace headpiece, etched with pearls, held her bridal illusion veil, edged with the same lace that trimmed her gown. She carried a bouquet of purple violets, blue and white daisies and babies' breath. Her flowers, like those of the bridal party, were of silk.

Mary Sorenson, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. She wore a blue empire fashioned, floor-length gown with long sleeves trimmed with wide, white lace. Her bouquet was similiar to the bride's.

Serving as flower girl was Lisa Rendulich, a niece of the groom. She was attired in a floor-length gown of a light blue floral with sheer puffed sleeves. Her bouquet was a miniature replica of the bride's.

Best man was Scott Rood, Coon Rapids, a brother of the bride. Both the groom and best man wore gray Regency tuxedos with a cluster of purple, blue and white flowers pinned on their lapels. Ushers were David Sorenson, brother of the groom, and Rob Madden, International Falls, a friend of the couple.

The mother of the bride was attired in an ivory colored street-length dress with macrame lace at the neckline. The groom's mother wore a beige two-piece, street-length dress with a floral top. Their corsages were of dark and light colored roses.

Honor guests were: Mrs. Alma Stromlund, Galena, Mo., Annie Rood, Strandquist, grandmothers of the bride, and Edith Sorenson, Thief River Falls, grandmother of the groom.

An indoor-outdoor reception followed with the dining area decorated with white wedding bells and blue and white streamers. Centering the serving table was a three-tiered, pillared wedding cake, decorated with blue flowers and topped by a miniature bride and groom under a white archway. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Dewey Rood, Thief River Falls, aunt of the bride. Gertrude Anderson, Spring Valley, Wis., aunt and godmother of the bride, poured the coffee.

Hostesses at the reception were Mrs. Ivan Johnson, Holt, and Cecelia Swenson, Thief River Falls, friends of the family. Mrs. Tim Hanson, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the bride, registered the guests. The punch was served by Cessily Johnton, Holt, and Pam Hamling, Coon Rapids, friends of the couple. Waitresses were Becky Swenson, Middle River, and Nikki Leach, Holt, also friends of the couple.

Approximately 75 relatives and friends attended the ceremony and reception. They were from Missouri, Wisconsin, Grand Forks, Stephen, Warren, Crookston, International Falls, Greenbush, Karlstad, Thief River Falls, Strandquist, Newfolden, Middle River, and Holt.

Determination, Faith Build Milling Firm

husband on the farm and partaking in numerous hobbies including rosemaling, macrame' and sewing (which she says she rarely has time for), also conducts natural foods cooking schools throughout the area — an idea which developed from her bread baking demonstrations two years ago. She has conducted baking demonstrations all over the United States — as far as Portland, OR she said. Next week she has eight scheduled in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

In these demonstrations, Helen introduces students to different ways of making bread, she said. The process takes time — people have to be taught, but it's "definitely doing its thing" she exclaimed. Her objective, she said, is to help people learn to use flour.

The flour produced by the Juhls is different from regular flour, she said. It's dry because of the way it's milled. The wheat, when taken out to dry, has a 13.5 per cent moisture content which means that the flour has from nine to 10 per cent moisture content — less than in regular flour which means less is used in baking.

The Juhls use a reduction type of milling where the flour is sifted between each stone mill. So, what doesn't get milled the first time around goes down the lane until it's milled. The family employs from eight to 10 full and part-time people on their farm, and they have three trucks on the road all the time.

"It's a full-time job," she said. She estimated that she and her husband put in from 15 to 16 hours of work a day into their industry because there is such a demand for the products, she said.

"We're usually up by 6:30 and to bed by 10:30 or 11," she said. "But we don't mind that. Ray came in from work one evening and said, 'It's too bad it isn't morning'. We really enjoy our work. There just doesn't seem to be enough hours in a day to get everything done."

A main objective behind the Juhls' milling operation is to reduce their farming operation and "stick with the mill," Helen said. Until two years ago, the Juhls farmed 2,500 acres of land. And, although the drought witnessed this past summer seemed a disaster to most farmers, the Juhls were aided by it since their quality of wheat went up and they were able to mill all of it.

"This is the first year we could do this," Helen said.

Even though this year was a good year for the Juhls, they had to buy a good share of their grain. And, all of the grain bought must be produced without the use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides so their products can be marketed as natural products to various places throughout the United States.

The Juhls ship their products to bakeries, chain food stores, and health food stores (including Health Food Specialities in Thief River Falls) in such places as Sarsota, FL; Atlanta, GA; Boston, MA; New York, NY; Pennsylvania and all points in between, Helen added. Distributions are made once a month. The couple also hopes to someday set up outlets in Idaho, Washington and Oregon, they said.

As with all businesses, there are problems, the Juhls agreed.

"We face the same problems as big business but with no capital," Ray said. "Right now, we are running about one-third of our capacity."

"There are always growing pains," Helen stressed. "Probably our biggest problems are improving our production, installing equipment and meeting the financial demands of a growing business."

Helen and Ray Juhl, throughout their working years, have also had time to begin a Seventh Day Adventist school year their farm. The school, which is tucked into a wooded area that is reached only by a winding gravel road, presently houses seven students, from first to seventh grades.

According to past newspaper stories on the family, the school and the flour milling business work together.

"Our business helps support the school, and the school helps attract people to work at our business," Ray said in a previous interview.

Helen, who is also in charge of all bookwork for Natural Way Mills, Inc. last week was able to relax for a while when she was given the chance to run the big tractor out in the field. "It was so peaceful out there I stayed out 'til about two in the morning. Sometimes you just have to get away from it all," she said.

"But I've always said, work isn't work unless there is something else you'd rather be doing," she added.

SBA To Assist Pennington And Other Counties

Eighteen counties in the Seventh district have been designated by the Small Business administration to receive low-interest economic injury loans, according to information received from Congressman Arlan Stangeland.

"I am extremely pleased the Small Business administration has made the decision to provide these necessary loans. These 18 counties are heavily dependent on the agricultural economy and have suffered tremendously due to the recent drought and subsequent loss of income and buying power to the farmer. Farm production is estimated to be 30 to 50 per cent of a normal crop year in these counties and the losses for the businessmen and the local communities will be in direct ratio to the losses experienced by the farmers," Stangeland said.

The counties designated to receive assistance are Becker, Clay, Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Mahnomen, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, Roseau, Wilkin, Otter Tail, Wadena and Cass.

For physical damage loans, applications may be filed until the close of business March 5, 1981. Physical damage loans can be made at an interest rate of five per cent of 8 and one-quarter per cent for 30 years. For economic injury disaster loans, applications may be filed until the close of business June 5, 1981. Economic injury disaster loans can be made at eight and one-fourth for 30 years. To find out more about making an application, write to Small Business administration, Plymouth Building, 12 South 6th Street, Minneapolis, MN 55402.

ST. BERNARD'S PARISH SCHOOL today announced its policy for determining eligibility of children who may receive free and reduced price meals and free milk served under the NATIONAL SCHOOL LUNCH, and SPECIAL MILK PROGRAMS.

St. Bernard's School officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

FAMILY SIZE	ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR FREE MEALS AND FREE MILK			ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR REDUCED PRICE MEALS
	Annual	Monthly	Weekly	Annual	Monthly	Weekly
1	$ 5,230	$ 436	$ 101	$ 8,150	$ 679	$ 157
2	6,900	575	133	10,760	897	207
3	8,580	715	165	13,380	1,115	257
4	10,250	854	197	15,990	1,333	308
5	11,930	994	229	18,600	1,550	358
6	13,600	1,133	262	21,220	1,768	408
7	15,273	1,273	294	23,830	1,986	458
8	16,950	1,413	326	25,440	2,203	508
Each additional family member . . .	plus-1,680	plus-140	plus-32	plus-2,610	plus-218	plus-50

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs higher than 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in the school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the parent or guardian that the information provided is true and correct.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, Carol Amundson will review applications and determine eligibility. If a family is dissatisfied with the ruling of the approving official, they may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis.

If they wish to make a formal appeal, they may make a request either orally or in writing to Rev. James Bernauer, 105 Knight Avenue North, Phone: 681-3571 for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size income changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of school nutrition programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, or national origin.

The main office of St. Bernard's has a copy of the complete policy, which may be reviewed by any interested party.

Revised Iowa Tests Given At Franklin

Franklin middle school will administer the revised Iowa tests of basic skills to students in grades six, seven and eight September 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Tests will be given during the first two hours of each day. Results of the tests will be available to parents after October 13 and formally distributed during parent conferences November 6 and 7.

This is the first year that the new forms of the I.T.B.S. will be used; parents and students will have an opportunity to react to the changes in content and structure which reduce testing time and should lessen fatigue as well as provide additional information.

Major changes include the addition of a math computation subtest which assesses basic facts skills, and the modification of the work study skills subtests so that a visual materials score is reported instead of the old maps, graphs and table subtests.

Test data is used to augment teacher input on student progress and can serve as a barometer of student growth between grades. Opportunity also exists for teachers to make predictions of student mastery on individual test items reflecting instructional goals, time allocated to skill development and teacher feedback on instructional technique.

Interpretive services are available from the guidance office and interested parents may contact counselors Pam Carlson or Jim Fremstad for further information.

Citizen Group Looks At Cost Of Bond Issue

proposed only two and one-half years earlier for $10.5 million.

School people at Bemidji say the reisdents of their district finally realized that the need wasn't going to go away," Seaverson said. "Opponents in those elections caused a loss of two and one-half years of time and $4 million in building costs alone, not to mention interest which would boost the total loss from waiting to around $10 million."

Discussion at the meeting caused one of the committee members to state, "I can't afford to build now, but I can't afford to wait, either." He was referring to the inflation which causes building costs to rise substantially each year.

Chairman Seaverson also commented on the likelihood of obtaining favorable bids for construction if it was to take place on 1981. He said a contractor from Grand Forks told him it used to be unheard of for a large contractor to bid on a house. But that firm had just submitted a bid on a 20x20 addition to a home and there were 21 firms bidding for the work.

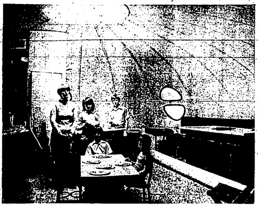
Helping you say it right.

THIS SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST schoolhouse, buried deep within the woods near the Ray Juhl farm near Middle River, is one of many projects begun by Juhl and his wife, Helen. Their Natural Way Mills, Inc. flour milling industry and the school work together, according to Juhl, who says that, "the business helps support the school and the school helps attract people to the business."



THIS DOME-SHAPED structure is only a portion of the Seventh Day Adventist school devised by Ray Juhl and his wife Helen of Middle River. The couple are also the owners of Natural Way Mills, Inc., a stone-ground flour milling industry near Middle River. Instructors at the school include Mrs. Sharon Schmidt (standing, left) and Mrs. Bonnie Dunston. Seated around their flat bread cooking projects are John Thygeson, John Schmidt and Joel Meuth; standing are Sharon Schmidt, Eileen Schmidt and Joel Schmidt. The students are five of the seven students attending the school.

A HOBBY IS SOMETHING YOU GET GOOFY ABOUT TO KEEP FROM GOING CRAZY ABOUT THINGS IN GENERAL

HELEN JUHL stands beside the "words of wisdom" which summarize the lives of Helen and her husband Ray. The Middle River couple, seven years ago, became interested in milling flour when they were dissatisfied with the regular flour on the market. The industry began as a hobby and has now grown to an entire stone-ground flour milling industry, called Natural Way Mills, Inc.

Preparing for their high hilarity journey, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (left) and Peter Graves show young Rossie Harris how they check out the controls as Frank Ashmore in the background checks other data in the comedy spoof "Airplane!". Starts Wed., Sept. 10 at the Galaxy Twin Theatre.

Funeral services for Clarence Hanson were held today (Monday) at 11:30 a.m., at the Immanuel Lutheran church in Plummer. Rev. Clifford Randall officiated. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery with the Belmont Funeral home in charge of arrangements.

A complete obituary will be published in Wednesday's edition of the Times.

Dear friends,

Prearrangement of funeral service is especially sensible where there are no close family members to properly assume the funeral responsibilities. The concerned person may select his clergyman and funeral director in advance, decide details of the burial and service, and place the expense funds in a trust for that purpose.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

President At U Orders Freeze On Hiring

A freeze on hiring for all non-faculty positions at the University of Minnesota has been ordered by President C. Peter Magrath, effective immediately.

The freeze covers jobs supported by state funds, Magrath said in a letter sent to the university community. All new and replacement positions in administrative and civil service ranks are affected.

According to university personnel department figures, roughly 185 open positions will remain unfilled as a result of the freeze.

The halt on hiring is a result of Gov. Al Quie's announcement that the University must trim $14.1 million from its 1980-81 budget, a cutback more than twice the size university administrators were expecting.

Last week, Gov. Quie announced a projected $195 million deficit in the state budget for next year and told all state-supported and assisted agencies to reduce their budgets by set amounts.

The university must trim 6.08 per cent, or $14,130,900, from its state allocation of $232,463,700. "The consequences of such an action are extremely serious," Magrath wrote in his letter. "Clearly, we must explore all options including the reduction of certain programs as well as efforts to generate other funds."

Jobs excluded from the freeze include those directly involved in instruction, jobs not supported by state money, and existing work-study jobs, which are considered part of the student aid package.

"The Primary value of the university is in its teaching, research and instructional work, and to the maximum extent, these must not be affected," Magrath said.

The freeze is not permanent, Magrath said, but is an effort to keep "as many options for us as open as possible" and to give University administrators flexibility until the board of regents can approve an official cutback plan.

Specific cutback options are currently under scrutiny within the central administration, Magrath said, and will be presented to the regents when they met September 3, 4 and 5.

State appropriations make up about 36 per cent of the university's total 1980-81 budget of $608.5 million. Much of the other income comes from tuition and fees, from the federal government and from university-generated sources.

National High School Activity Week Planned

Lincoln high school is joining schools across the country to celebrate national high school activities week, September 28 to October 4. Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith says the week will emphasize the value of athletic as well as nonathletic activities programs to both the student participants and the community as a whole.

"The total activities program of Lincoln high school involves approximately 75 per cent of the student body," reports Smith.

"We feel that our activities program provides our students with very important educational experiences, as school activities are really laboratory courses in physical and emotional development. We feel our school activities programs are helping to develop this community's future leaders."

Smith is urging community groups to support the week by any means they have. This might include raising funds for school activities, planning programs which highlight school activities and promoting attendance at school events. Groups interested in learning how they might assist the school in promoting activities week of the activities program in general should contact Smith at 681-2700, extension 222.

Pilot Program Of Workfare Is Extended

Department of agriculture is seeking communities interested in joining a pilot program requiring food stamp clients to work off the value of their food stamps.

Currently, workfare pilot programs are operating in seven locations throughout the country. Legislation passed this May provided money to expand this number of sites to 14 and also authorized the project to run for another year beyond its originally scheduled expiration next month.

Sites that are selected to operate workfare pilot projects will receive federal reimbursement for 50 per cent of their administrative costs under today's new rules.

In signing the emergency final regulations, assistant secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said that cities, counties or other political subdivisions that already sponsor public service employment programs or that have demonstrated an ability to operate such a program are eligible to conduct the projects.

Legislation passed in 1977 specified that the workfare projects be carried out in one urban and one rural area in each of the seven administrative regions of USDA's food and nutrition service. At the national level, the demonstration is administered jointly by the departments of agriculture and labor (DOL). Legislation passed in May provides for extension of the projects through September of 1981, and for the addition of federal funding for administrative expenses.

Potential sponsors must submit an application within the next 30 days if they want to operate a workfare pilot project, Foreman said. She added that the department is actively seeking cities, counties and other political subdivisions that might participate. It is up to the sponsor to determine what type of jobs food stamp recipients will do.

Workfare projects are currently operating in Sussex county, New Jersey; Rusk county, Wisconsin; Muskingum county, Ohio; Berkeley county, South Caroline; the city of Morristown, Tennessee; Clay county, South Dakota; and two welfare districts in the county of San Diego, California.

Political subdivisions wishing additional information and application kits should call: Claire Lipsman, director, Program Development Division, Family Nutrition Programs, Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, (202) 447-8325.

Final regulations appreared in the August 15 Federal Register.

Thompsons To Give Concert In City Sunday

Dave and Liz Thompson from the Grand Forks area will present a concert of contemporary and traditional gospel music at the Thief River Falls Assemblies of God Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

Dave Thompson is related to Bill and Gerald Sanders of rural Thief River Falls and is a freshman in pre-law at the University of North Dakota. Liz is a sophmore at UND, majoring in social science.

The public is cordially invited to this sacred gospel concert, according to Rev. J.L. Hagemeister, host pastor. Free-will offering will be received for the musical guests.

THIS TESTING KITCHEN used in testing final products, is also the site of many baking demonstrations and tours given by Helen Juhl (pictured) of Middle River. The kitchen is located in the flour milling plant on the Ray Juhl farm, which, after seven years, has come to be known as Natural Way Mills, Inc. The loaves of bread on the table are only five of the 80 loaves baked by Helen a couple of days before this Times photo was taken.

FREQUENTLY VISITED section of the flour milling plant on the Ray Juhl farm near Middle River is the bagging room, where all the flour is put into bags to be transported to market. The Juhls began their milling industry seven years ago as a hobby and have now created Natural Way Mills, Inc. — a business which has grown into a "full-time job," they said.

10-Ton Route Is Approved In St. Hilaire

Emergency routes have been designated on Minnesota's statewide system of roads and streets authorized to carry 10-ton single-axle loadings and 80,000 pounds total gross weight in St. Hilaire and in Winona, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced.

Commissioner Richard P. Braun said the weight limits on the routes were authorized to carry 10-ton loads because they connect with or feed designated 10-ton routes.

Added to the 10-ton system are highway 32 between Second street and Pennington county road 3 in St. Hilaire and several city streets in Winona. Authorization for 10-ton loads on the St. Hilaire route became effective August 29; the routes in Winona became effective September 5.

Course In Theological Ethics Offered

A course entitled, "Ethics: Lutheran, Reformed, and Roman Catholic" will be offered in Thief River Falls, beginning September 25, for parish clergy, members of religious orders and others.

The course is intended to foster an understanding of three major Christian options in theological ethics by moving from the historical progenitors, or major figures, in those traditions to their contemporary spokesmen.

First course meeting will be at 9:45 a.m. at St. Bernard's church in Thief River Falls. It involves 20 class hours and is offered through the graduate theological education program of CHARIS, an ecumenical center for church and community with offices at Concordia college in Moorhead. Participants may take it as a two-credit course or may audit. Accreditation is arranged through cooperating seminaries in Minnesota and Iowa. Cost of the course is $40.

Drs. Patricia and Shannon Jung will teach the course. Both are in the department of religion at Concordia and both have doctoral degrees from Vanderbilt university.

A planning committee consisting of the Rev. James Bernauer of St. Bernard's, Rev. Richard Larson of Zion Lutheran church (both of Thief River Falls) and Rev. Robert Amundson of United Lutheran church at Gatzke has planned the course in conjunction with Dr. James B. Hofrenning, CHARIS director. Registration can be made through the CHARIS office at Concordia college or by contacting a committee member.

Ask Concert Ass'n. Members For Renewals

Members of the Thief River Falls Concert association last year have until this evening (Monday) to renew their membership before the annual membership for the 1980-81 season is opened for the general public, according to Mrs. Pat Martin, chairman of the annual membership drive.

Memberships will be $13 for adults, $8 for students and $37 for families and will include admission to five concerts during the coming season. They may be purchased at the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce office.

Concert schedule includes the following: Tuesday, Oct. 7, The Cheadles piano duo; Wed., Nov. 9, "Desert Song" musical; Sun., Jan. 11, Mercy River Boys gospel singing group; Fri., Feb. 13, "The Big Bands", featuring trumpeter Steve Wright and his 17-piece band; and Tues., March 24, Phoenix Boys choir.

All of the concerts will be held at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium and admission to all will be by season membership only. There will be no individual admissions sold.

"The concert association is not an exclusive group," Mrs. Martin said. "Directors of the association encourage everyone interested in good quality entertainment to become members and support the series. Opportunity for present members to renew is offered as a courtesy in return for previous support, and similar renewal opportunity will be offered next year to those who become members for 1980-81."

"We feel we have scheduled another entertaining series for the coming year," added co-chairman Gerry Stocks, "and we have considered the preference indicated by concert association members in organizing the program. Membership in the association continues to be one of the community's best entertainment bargains."

Norman Wendt of Allied Concert services, through which the series is arranged, will be in Thief River Falls September 16 for a concert association dinner to be held at 6:30 p.m. at St. Bernard's Catholic church basement. Gordon Peterson is chairman of the concert association this year.

IMPORTANT SAFETY WARNING
to owners of older John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractors

Maintaining the safety equipment on your older John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor can be especially important. The original boot (or cover) for the battery's positive post on Model 60, 70, 100, 110, 112, 120 or 140 Tractors manufactured from 1963 through 1974 may have suffered from age or may have been lost or damaged. And if that positive battery post is not properly covered, there is danger of a spark causing a fire and bodily injury if you accidentally touch a metal gas can to the positive battery post when refueling the tractor. A more serious fire can result if you are not using a safety-approved gas can.

If you own one of the above models, John Deere wants to make absolutely certain that your tractor has the battery's positive post properly isolated. To make it easy—and safer—for you, we will send you a new cover, free. Just fill out the coupon provided below and mail it to the address shown. It comes complete with installation instructions and is not difficult to install. But if you prefer, after you have received your kit, make a date with your John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor dealer and he'll install it for a small service charge.

Remember, safety and maintenance go hand in hand. The operator's manual can help you. Read it again. Keep your tractor as safe as it was when it was delivered.

It could be the most important thing you do today.

Election Toss-Up

Tuesday's primary election race between Jim Kremer and LeRoy Stumpf for state representative candidacy on the DFL ticket shapes up as being a very close contest. With virtually nothing else of interest in the primary in Pennington county, it is easy to focus attention on the legislative race.

Of particular interest will be the question of whether party endorsement still means as much as it once meant. Stumpf was the selection by DFL party officials even before the endorsing convention held in Greenbush. It is no secret that a goodly number of established party people were upset by the Kremer challenge and the resultant split in candidate support. Strength is in unity, in politics as in anything else where numbers of people are involved.

At the precinct caucuses the Kremer effort for delegate support was evident and the reaction was predictable. At the endorsing convention a number of ballots had to be taken to determine who would be endorsed, although Stumpf reportedly had a majority of the votes each time but lacked the percentage necessary to win.

Because primary voters must select only one party for which to vote, one would expect Stumpf would have a decided edge as the endorsed candidate. Party people may be expected to vote the party candidate.

But a couple of factors come into play this year that bear consideration. One is Kremer's incessant campaigning throughout the district, likely the most time spent by a candidate on a primary election campaign in many years here. The other is the potential for Independent-Republican cross-over voting, since there are no contests on the I-R ballot. There are always those in any party who would like to see the other party embarrassed by having the endorsed candidate defeated.

A third factor will undoubtedly be Kremer's anti-abortion alignment through Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life. He has not used that stance extensively in his campaign, but one may be assured that the word has been spread among people of like persuasion.

Stumpf has not been sitting still and waiting for the voters to come to him. Backed by the DFL party and with access to the professionals in DFL employ, as well as some party finances, he has also been active on the campaign trail. If identity is a problem for the voters in the primary, it is through no fault of either candidate.

From where we sit, we view the election a toss-up. But for the sake of making conversation we'll pick Stumpf to win by a couple of hundred votes. The party endorsement should be worth that much of a margin.

But whoever wins may be in the position of winning the battle and losing the war. We expect I-R candidate Clyde Christensen to win the District 1B House of Representatives seat in November.

The American Way?

Following comments appeared recently in the Building Supply News:

I have a cousin who worked on the assembly line for one of the Big Three, and he always loved to lay it on. With the union looking out for him, his income, for many years, "overshadowed" mine. He has no college training and no vocational training. He does have a five-bedroom home, an 18-foot speedboat, a camper and a new car every other year (which he got at discount). He's always lived a very lush life by almost everyone's standards, and especially by mine.

I remember one "intolerable encounter" when he and I got into a heated discussion. It was triggered by his comment, made during a strike period, that they would hold out for shorter work weeks, more paid holidays, and increased company-paid medical benefits.

"What are you offering management in return?" I asked.

"What do you mean, 'in return'?"

"There's no such thing as a free lunch," I sermonized. "You want something, you pay for it. Or you offer something in return. Like guaranteed increased productivity. Better quality control on the line. Things like that. The company must get some measurable return on investment; that's how the free enterprise system functions."

As things got progressively worse, it became painfully obvious that I wasn't going to make any touchdowns for management. Not when the labor team's quarterback, the UAW, was gaining all the yardage.

Suddenly things have changed. The plant is shutting down and moving operations to Mexico. My cousin's house isn't for sale, but his boat is. So is his camper. Meanwhile, everyone's writing sympathetic articles about people like him, and how tough they're having it.

Cousin and friends spend a lot of time commiserating at their usual watering hole. Drinks are compliments of you . . . and me . . . and every other individual and company which pays those hefty taxes which feed those unemployment benefits. And after all, those unemployment checks are only a little shy of their usual take-home pay.

Is this the American way? To have our labor force programmed to self-destruct through lack of motivation toward increased productivity? My cousin always had that union of his looking out for him. He really never had to worry about producing; the union's clout made it too much of a hassle for management to demand productivity.

Now, because of the stupid setup we have for unemployment compensation, it makes more sense for him to sit home on his butt, at least for a few months, while we keep hearing how negative productivity ratios are fueling inflation.

If this is the American way, isn't it time for us to finally do something about changing our ways? The concept of free enterprise is at stake.

A Lousy Policy?

Following letter was written by Richard Woodin of Newport Beach, Calif., to the editor of his local paper. We feel it bears additional circulation.

This is a copy of a letter I plan to send to the administrators of an insurance policy I now hold, discussing the reasons why I no longer want the policy:

(1) The policy was originally purchased by my parents who, when they discovered the fraudulent nature of it, were too embarrassed to do anything.

(2) When it came time for me to assume the payments, I was tricked into believing there were no similar policies available.

(3) Now, after my parents have paid on the policy for 18 years, and I have paid on it for another 12 years — a grand total of 30 years — I find that the policy has no cash value.

(4) From time to time, I am required to increase my payments for supposed increase in benefits, whether I desire the improvements or not.

(5) My parents both died and never received any payment. If I were to expire now, because I have no family the company would not have to make any payment, even though I would like to name others as beneficiaries.

(6) The company will not allow me to change the policy within the company, nor in fact will it allow me to drop the policy and use the equivalent amount to purchase a similar policy from another company.

(7) The company holding my policy has not shown a profit since its inception, is not required to pay taxes, has more employees than other companies and at this time is nearly bankrupt.

(8) In order to get a copy of the contract, I must pay $2.50. The contract is four volumes and contains over 800 pages.

(9) The company is again in the process of changing my policy. In an effort to understand the changes better, I am in the process of reading the four volumes made up of some 2,000 pages, which discuss the changes.

(10) One of the changes recommended is that the company will be in the position of deciding whether or not I need the money it is supposed to pay, upon completion of my portion of the agreement.

The policy is called the Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance system, commonly referred to as Social Security.

Personnel Problems Facing U.S. Armed Forces

Since the end of the Vietnam war and the era of the draft, U.S. Armed Forces have had a difficult time meeting personnel requirements, primarily due to the lack of new recruits and the inability to maintain highly qualified individuals. In my opinion, the main problem, which has been demonstrated by the failure of the All-Volunteer Force, is that no one has any incentive to join and, unfortunately, once they do, many have no incentive to remain.

In an effort to help solve this growing problem and return our military to proper personnel levels, I have cosponsored two bills to encourage enlistment and increase the retention rate of highly trained members of the military ranks.

Recent surveys of military personnel show a steady decline in the quality of volunteers being attracted, with the exception of the Air Force and the Marine Corps. Half of the recent Army volunteers have reading skills equal to or below the eighth grade level and the quality of Navy volunteers is only marginally better. This serious drop in educational ability takes place at a time when military operations and complex equipment demand greater skills and judgment on behalf of service personnel.

It is due to this data and the fact that the All-Volunteer Force has not met expectations that I believe something must be done to boost manpower capabilities. Hopefully, by creating incentives for military service, people will be encouraged to participate and fewer people will leave the service for civilian jobs.

The first bill I have cosponsored is the Veterans Educational Incentive Act (H.R. 7795). Under this bill, military personnel would have the opportunity to choose from four programs providing up to $1,500 per nine-month period for tuition and fees and a living allowance based on individual need.

The second bill, the GI Educational-Extension-Act (H.R. 7839), would extend the time available for educational assistance to a veteran beyond December 31, 1989, to a date five years after the veteran's last discharge or release from active duty. As it is now, many military personnel elect to leave the service early in order to assure that they have the current GI Bill benefits available to them. This premature loss of personnel is extremely costly when the loss of knowledgeable and technically competent people is considered in conjunction with the cost of training a new enlistee to function in the same capacity. We cannot afford to lose good people in which this nation has invested thousands of dollars to train.

If this nation is to make a strong commitment to maintaining a strong and capable defense, we must also make the same type of commitment to the men and women who choose the military as their career. In today's job market, we cannot expect to attract quality people without providing respectable incentives.

These bills are certainly not the answer to our military manpower problems, but they are a beginning and they must be encouraged. By supporting legislation to improve benefits for military personnel, I am hopeful we may be one step closer to assuring everyone that a draft will never be imposed.

Automotive First Given By Auto Council

Automobile industry has a well-documented and important history, but many of the facts on the logs are useful mainly for a trivia quiz. The Automotive Information council (AIC) has compiled a list of automotive firsts to surprise and amuse. For example:

The first known purchaser of an American gasoline-engine car was George H. Merrill Jr. of Norwood, Mass. In 1896 he bought one of the first 13 Duryea motor wagons with the condition that he would agree to permit his new car to be entered in the first track race for motor carriages at Naragansett Park, R.I., in September of the same year.

U.S. Senator

Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

How Things Don't Get Done in the United States Senate

Rules have a very necessary and positive function in the Senate. Without them there would be no orderly method in which to conduct business. They exist for a purpose and they serve that purpose well.

However, it is no secret that any member who knows the rules well can almost work his own will on the Senate floor. Maneuvered properly, the rules will allow a Senator to delay action on a bill for days and weeks and on occasion result in a bill simply not being voted on.

Unfortunately, at times the use of the rules can result in many meaningless votes — demanding the presence of the senators, but accomplishing nothing. And, when this goes on for a long period of time, the Senate wastes valuable time that could be spent debating and voting on issues of importance or doing committee work.

As an example, I would like to relate a recent incident which resulted in the Senate spending one whole day debating rules and voting on procedure.

A bill had come to the floor with a limit on the amount of time which could be spent on debate. This time limit had been agreed to months before by all senators and was adopted so the Senate could vote on the measure after a reasonable debate without delaying action for weeks.

However, one Senator who did not want the bill passed opened the arguments by requesting a ruling from the President of the Senate on how much time he would have to present his arguments.

The request on the face of it seemed simple enough. But it was really a move to get a ruling from the parlimentarian which the Senator could appeal. In the Senate, if a member is not satisfied with a rule, he can ask for a vote to override the judgement of the President of the Senate. In other words, if you disagree with the ruling, you can change it by getting a majority of the senators to agree with your position.

That appeal or request for a vote began an exercise in delay which lasted the whole day and ended only with adjournment and postponement of debate on the bill.

After the Senator made his appeal, a motion was made to lay the appeal on the table — that is to kill the appeal and not consider it. The motion to lay on the table passed unanimously. That should have ended the matter or so one would think. But no.

Each senator also has the right to ask for a reconsideration of a previous vote no matter how large the margin of passage. This Senator did and a reconsideration would demand another roll call vote. But, a motion was made to lay the reconsideration on the table or to kill it. That passed unanimously and the Senator again asked for a reconsideration. I guess you can see where we are going now.

The reconsideration is really designed to give senators time to reconsider their votes on a close measure, but it can be used as it was here as a delaying tactic.

Let me just say that the last vote of the day was a vote to lay on the table a motion to reconsider a motion to lay on the table a motion to reconsider a motion to lay on the table and so on. In other words we still hadn't settled the matter of the appeal to the President of the Senate.

So we spent the entire day tied up in rules, voting on motions that passed but did not end the matter and we never did debate the bill on the floor.

That is how things don't get done in the Senate.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I would like to take issue with a Mr. Jonathon Law who wrote in Monday's issue of the TRF Times Letter to the Editor.

First, I would like to inform Mr. Law that it was a "Hog Wrestling Contest" not a "Pig Wrestling Contest". You see, if he knew what he was talking about, he would know there is a whale of a difference. He also received poor information from his so-called friend who implied that "four 250-pound men wrestled down, beat on, and pushed into a barrel, a pig." I would say that the majority of the 1,500 people who were at the contest and I don't know how many more saw it on TV, would agree that the hog was not wrestled, he was picked up; he was not beat on, he was carried; he was not pushed into a barrel, he was gently deposited butt first into a barrel and then immediately released.

I am sure three members of that team would take great offense at Mr. Law's friend for implying that we all weighed 250 lbs. Of course, I and the hog were closer to the mark — well, maybe I am a teeny bit over 250 lbs!

Another interesting part of Mr. Law's letter is where he thinks pigs and all animals should have the right or freedom to choose. If that is then the case, let's see what would happen if "Bleeding Heart" Mr. Law gets his way — I'm sure dogs would choose to live in a large home that is comfortable, not in a cold dog house. I also think they would choose to run free of leashes, eating garbage, spreading refuse all over Mr. Law's yard!

What about those poor pigs? I'm sure they would prefer freedom to confinement! Or horses may like running up and down the street. . . . Ah, freedom! My goodness, what about the rights and freedom of all those wild animals in the zoo? Mr. Law thinks there should be laws to protect them because we are forcing them to stay behind bars. Let them loose, Mr. Law, let them kill and maim! As you say, they should have a choice of freedom!

How about the meat on your table? Did that animal have the right or freedom of choice to say "I don't want to be slaughtered"?

Your statements are nonsense, Mr. Law! This law we were cited for was not written because that hog was, as you put it, forced into a situation it would not choose for itself. It was written to protect a pig from being mistreated or inhumanely treated.

It may interest you to know that I wholeheartedly agree with that statute the way it is written. It's a good law. I also believe it should not be removed from the books. You see, Mr. Law, before you opened your mouth and put your foot into it, you should have done a little bit more research.

If you were there, Mr. Law, I'm sure you would have seen that four large pork producers did not in any way inhumanely mistreat the hogs. Hogs are our bread and butter. We all like the business we are in! All four of us are leaders in our industry to ban inhumane instruments such as electric prodders and other instruments that would hurt or maim our stock. Our association, the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers Association, which is over 100 members strong, is also a strong supporter of laws that protect animals from inhumane treatment.

Where were you, Mr. Law, when two years ago deer were dying by the hundreds of starvation? A lot of our members gave free hay to DNR. Where is the so-called local Humane Society when people call about puppies and kittens unwanted, left on doorsteps, so to speak? Our local Humane Society says "Shoot them; we can't take them". Where are you Mr. Law and the Humane Society when the rodeos are in full swing and those poor calves are almost strangled with a rope? Where were you Mr. Law and the Humane Society when 16 illegal greased pig contests were held in this state? One was held 30 miles from Thief River Falls the day of our hog wrestling contest. Now, a greased pig contest is illegal!!

We will appear in court soon. The reason is not that we inhumanely mistreated any pig. Our interpretation of that statute is different from the Attorney General's interpretation. We will go to court and they will decide which interpretation is the correct one. You see, Mr. Law, that is our right and one of our freedoms!

As for the police, our association and the four of us who were cited commend both County Sheriff Richards and Chief Froschheiser and their men. They did their duty and they treated us with courtesy and respect. I'll say here and now that the citizens of Thief River Falls and the citizens of Pennington county should have no gripe when it comes to paying taxes for their respective law enforcement agency because, in my book, these rank at the top in the state of Minnesota!

Now, to your suggestion. It is a very good suggestion except, I would like to invite you and the local Humane Society to be participants since you are both so upset about the use of the hog. We will not have any objections to using you all as hogs and stuffing you in a barrel!!!

Sincerely,
-s-Robert L. Fincher
President
Northern Minnesota Pork
Producers Assn.

Spotlight On Girls Tuesday

Thief River Falls athletic attention will be given to the girls Tuesday when the Lincoln high school tennis, swimming and volleyball teams all open their 1980 home schedules that day.

Coach Whitey Olson's tennis team began the year by winning three of four dual meets on the road. The Prowlers host Crookston tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. in both varsity and junior varsity matches on the Northland community college and Lincoln courts.

It'll be the season and home opener for coach John Hustad's Lincoln swimming team Tuesday when the Prowlers face Detroit Lakes at 5 p.m. in the Franklin middle school pool.

After opening the year with two losses in three starts on the road, coach Sharon Stauss' volleyball team will entertain Fisher Tuesday in the Lincoln gym. It'll be parents night for the 5:30 p.m. C squad match, 6:30 junior varsity competition and 7:30 varsity feature.

Ranum Helps Macalester End Streak

Joe Ranum, a Lincoln high school graduate who played football the last two years at Northland community college, is a member of the Macalester football team that snapped its national-record 50-game losing streak Saturday with a 17-14 win over Mt. Senario in St. Paul.

The Scots, who had received national publicity during their nearly six-year winless streak, trailed 14-0 until Ranum, a junior linebacker, recovered a fumbled Mt. Senario punt at the visitor's 27-yard line that set up Macalester's first touchdown late in the third quarter.

Bemidji Controversy Is Aired

Bemidji Pioneer reported that over 150 persons attended a special school board meeting Thursday to hear school administrators respond to allegations made against Bemidji high school hockey coach Bryan Grand at an August 19 board meeting when John Buckanaga protested his son Tom's cut from the 1979-80 Bemidji hockey team and presented to the board a list of allegations against Grand.

Among the allegations by Buckanaga was that Grand practiced favoritism; had a double standard in varsity squad selection; lacked leadership; had a serious and difficult communication problem both as a teacher and as a coach; had an inability to administer discipline; had allowed drugs and alcohol to be used in the dressing rooms and on bus trips; and had violated rules of the Minnesota State High School League by using ineligible players.

The Bemidji school board heard both sides in the controversy Thursday but took no further action.

Athletic director Jack Luoma told the board that Tom Buckanaga was cut from the hockey squad because he was not one of the top 20 players in terms of ability. Parents were told that in the spring of 1980, but Buckanaga "does not accept that as fact," Luoma added.

The other issue raised by Buckanaga, Luoma said, is that Grand should be removed as head hockey coach because of discimination and incompetence.

Luoma had dissected and grouped the accusations, he said, and would comment on as many as he could in light of the fact that Buckanaga had not responded to any questions about the accusations between the two meetings.

According to Luoma, Buckanaga's accusation about varsity squad selection was "sour grapes" rationalization, reported Mike Olson of the Pioneer. Coaches in all sports are accused of practicing favoritism and employing a double standard, Luoma added.

In response to the allegations about discipline and communication problems, Luoma quoted Grand's immediate supervisor, junior high school principal Jerry Knapp, as having said that Grand has always demonstrated excellent control of his classroom. Grand takes care of the few discipline problems that occur, Luoma quoted Knapp, and has maintained a good working relationship with students.

Three Bemidji hockey players were discovered with marijuana, tobacco and smoking paraphanalia in their possession at an away game last winter, Luoma, said, but they were not allowed to play after the discovery. Two were later suspended from hockey for nine weeks while the player with the smoking paraphanalia was found not to be in violation of any rules.

When Buckanaga would not name the ineligible player who alledgedly was allowed to participate in hockey, Luoma assumed it was a player whose father discovered he had been in possession of alcohol on October 6, 1979. The player was suspended from athletic contests for nine weeks, Luoma said, but was able to practice as rules allow.

The conclusion of the athletic department, Luoma said, is that Grand knows he has the ultimate responsibility for negative behavior, even in certain instances where he is not responsible, and will try to eliminate that.

"Grand has shown me that progress is being made," Luoma added.

Bemidji school superintendent Clinton Barter said there have been problems which were addressed before Buckanaga's complaint, but nothing for which the board should seek Grand's dismissal.

When people start looking for reasons to dismiss someone, Barter added, they start nitpicking and make a molehill look like a big mountain. That's what was done in this case, in his estimation.

According to school board chairman Frank Goodell, Thursday's meeting was not to be construed as a hearing or investigation, but as a response to Buckanaga from the administration at an open meeting.

But Buckanaga told the board at the conclusion of the meeting that the answers were unacceptable.

It's unfortunate that John Buckanaga won't take no for an answer. It's apparent that Bryan Grand, who has always come across to the media as a class person, has done no wrong. The overzealous critics should back off and let him run his hockey team.

TRF Offense Shines In 32-21 Victory Over Detroit Lakes

Both coaches obviously knew what they were talking about heading into Friday's Thief River Falls vs. Detroit Lakes high school football game. The Prowlers' John Schmitz voiced concern about his team's ability to defend against Detroit Lakes' passing attack, while the Lakers' Dick Riedeberger was worried about trying to stop Thief River Falls' running game.

Neither side accomplished their defensive goals, but while giving up yardage in the air, Thief River Falls' first-team defense limited Detroit Lakes to just a single touchdown while the Prowlers struck for scoring plays on their first four possessions of the second half to build a 32-7 cushion en route to a 32-21 nonconference victory over the host Lakers.

"We must stop the wishbone or we'll be in trouble," said Riedberger even before the Prowlers arrived. The Lakers didn't do the job defensively, as Thief River Falls racked up 332 net yards on the ground, averaging 7.1 yards on 47 carries.

"We sputtered for the first half," acknowledged Schmitz. "We moved the ball but we stopped ourselves with mistakes. We played with much more enthusiasm in the third quarter. We were starting to look like a pretty good football team in the third quarter."

Trailing 7-6 at halftime, Thief River Falls took just three plays to take over the lead in the third quarter. Starting at their own 20-yard line after a Detroit Lakes punt into the end zone, the Prowlers struck quickly when quarterback Scott Wiebolt ran the wishbone option around the right side. He cut inside the end and broke into the clear on a 69-yard touchdown sprint with 8:17 remaining. The Prowlers' first — and only — successful conversion of the season featured a Wiebolt pass over the middle to receiver Dave Upham for a 14-7 edge.

Four plays later the Prowlers received a punt at the Detroit Lakes 47 and scored in six plays. An apparent 50-yard Wiebolt touchdown run was wiped out on a penalty, but it was just a temporary setback as halfback Dan Odegaard took a pitch around the left side on a 39-yard touchdown run for a 20-7 spread with 4:15 on the clock.

A 31-yard punt return by Odegaard to near midfield set up the Prowlers' third touchdown of the quarter, a perfectly-thrown 38-yard touchdown pass from Wiebolt to wide receiver Kent Kainz with just 13 seconds to go. Kainz was wide open deep in the Detroit Lakes secondary on the play.

An interception by linebacker Mark Harder at the Detroit Lakes 39 set up Thief River Falls' fourth straight touchdown as halfback Tom Ose sprinted through a hole off left tackle on the second snap and went 40 yards for a one-sided 32-7 difference with just 1:18 gone in the final period.

Thief River Falls reserves gave up a 21-yard Dan Douglas touchdown pass to Todd Jorgenson with 6:50 left and the Lakers' Greg Johnson went in from the one-yard line with only 40 seconds on the clock.

Wiebolt, in addition to leading the balanced Thief River Falls ground game with 95 yards on just eight carries, not to mention his touchdown run and his touchdown pass, also came up with two interceptions from his safety position.

Wiebolt's first interception near midfield and his return to the Detroit Lakes 25 set up the game's initial score — a two-yard dive over left tackle by Odegaard with 1:08 remaining in the first quarter.

But while the Prowlers did pick off three passes, Douglas still enjoyed a banner night that saw the junior quarterback complete 14 of 28 passes for 167 yards. Jorgenson, a tall wide receiver who is also a junior, caught eitht passes for 109 yards.

Earlier in the week Schmitz had warned, "They (Lakers) throw the ball a lot and that's going to present some problems for us until our young defensive backs get used to seeing the ball coming at them."

Well, they never did get used to it, but they did limit the Lakers to 125 net yards on the ground. The one-man Detroit Lakes running game featured Johnson, a 158-pound senior, who carried 20 times for 127 yards.

Detroit Lakes' halftime lead came on the heels of a 36-yard play — a 15-yard facemask penalty that was tacked on to a 19-yard tackle-breaking run by Johnson. That carried the ball to the Thief River Falls 31. Johnson then broke loose on a 28-yard run to the one-yard line and Ron Crawford went in from there with 7:26 showing. Brian Jacobson followed with the first of his three successful conversion kicks.

Thief River Falls, now 2-0, will tackle Grand Rapids Friday on the road. Detroit Lakes, beaten 14-0 by Fergus Falls in the season opener, faces its third straight Northwest Athletic Conference foe Friday when the Lakers host Bemidji. The following week the Lakers make it four straight season-opening games against NWAC opposition by facing East Grand Forks.

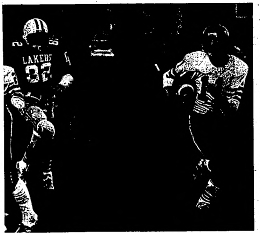
Boosters Club Meets Tonight

Football coaches John Schmitz of Lincoln high school and John Helley of Northland community college will be the guest speakers tonight (Monday) at a 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters club in the Lincoln cafeteria.

The meeting is open to the public.



SCOTT WIEBOLT looked downfield as the Thief River Falls quarterback carried the option around the left end during Friday's high school football game at Detroit Lakes. The Lakers' Mike Hutchinson was chasing Wiebolt on the play. The Prowlers, with Wiebolt scoring on a 69-yard run and throwing a 38-yard touchdown pass to Kent Kainz, defeated the Lakers 32-21 to improve their 1980 season record to 2-0.

Lincoln Swimmers Open Season Against Lakers

Detroit Lakes will be the opposition Tuesday when the Lincoln high school girls swimming team opens its 1980 season with a 5 p.m. dual against the Lakers in the Franklin middle school pool here.

Thief River Falls coach John Hustad is looking forward to the fall season. "I think there are some real powerful teams in the region this year — Moorhead, Brainerd and Bemidji will all be real strong — and I'd say right now in all honesty that for us to do something, we'll have to improve. But I think we will."

The Prowlers will be led this year by senior tri-captains Joan Glauque, Betsy Hallstrom and Franki Kuyath. But the most recognizable name on the roster is senior Brenda Lund, one of the top divers in the state. She placed fourth in the 1979 state meet and spent most of the summer diving in an AAU program in Bloomington that featured an appearance in a national Junior Olympic-qualifying meet in Houston.

While Lund excels on the board, senior Kathy Dillon may rank as the team's top swimmer. She swam the 100 and 200-yard freestyle events in the past, but may see more time in the shorter races this fall.

Others who have been impressive in early practice include sophomores Sarah Green and Shari McGann, along with eighth graders Connie Geatz and Shelley McGann.

"All the girls have been working hard," noted Hustad. "We've made some changes in our work-outs this year; we've got to be swimming more instead of spending time on weight training. We've already seen lots of improvements in our practice times. I'm looking for some really good improvements this year."

Rest of the varsity squad members include seniors Andria Lia and Shelly Sabo; juniors Lori Swanson, Lisa Desrocher and Robyn Dallmann; sophomores Karen Dillon, Mary Geatz, Mary Ness, and Becca Pluth; and freshmen Karla Lokken.

Working with the junior varsity have been sophomores LuDeen Flom and Angie Ziska; freshmen Cheryl Amundson, Denice Anderson, Colleen Cullen, Collette Desrocher, Jenny Pinkerton and Katy Reuter; eighth graders Lisa Grisanti and Georgia Howard and seventh grader Tammy Gunderson.

Dan Vrudny is serving as Hustad's assistant coach.

JOHN SCHMITZ, who is off to a 2-0 start in his first year as Thief River Falls head football coach, talked strategy with quarterback Scott Wiebolt during a time-out in Friday's nonconference game at Detroit Lakes. The Prowlers exploded offensively against the Lakers, running up a 32-7 score early in the fourth quarter before settling for a 32-21 victory. Thief River Falls visits Grand Rapids Friday.

Tom Zieman Wins Sno-Ball Golf Title

Ninety-degree weather made the title inappropriate, but Tom Zieman was the winner Sunday in the annual Thief River Country Club Sno-Ball golf tournament.

Zieman, whose golf career once included a spot on the Lincoln high school squad, is an International Falls high school graduate who is now golfing at Bemidji State University.

Zieman topped the championship flight field that included second place finisher Jeff Skinner, No. 3 Bob Fitzgerald, No. 4 Bill Skrei, No. 5 Jerry Johnson and No. 6 Mike Geatz.

Flight winners included John Moum, Ron Geatz, Elton Cummings, Bill Corliss, Wes Johnson and Ken Wiseth.

Volleyball Team To Host Fisher Tuesday

Parent's night will be observed Tuesday when the Lincoln high school volleyball team opend its 1980 home schedule with a 7:30 p.m. match against Fisher in the Lincoln gym.

Competition actually gets underway with a C team match at 5:30 followed by the junior varsity at 6:30 and then the varsity.

Thief River Falls' record slipped to 1-2 Thursday when the Prowlers dropped a 2-1 decision at Alvarado. The Indians lost the opener 18-7 but regrouped against a revamped Thief River Falls second game line-up for an 18-4 victory, then overcame a 17-12 third game deficit to win in overtime, 19-17.

"It was a real loose contest by the officials," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Sharon Stauss. "I thought we played all right. I was real pleased with the offensive job in the first and third games; we had 10 ace spikes — I've never had that many before."

Thief River Falls pushed its junior varsity record to 3-0 with an 18-11, 18-13 win over the Indians, but the winless Lincoln C squad lost 18-10, 18-16.

"We're going to be ready for Fisher," promised Stauss. "It's going to be our home opener; it's going to be parent's night; and we're going to be fired up."

Thief River Falls returns to road action Thursday at Fosston.

Sophomores Shut Out By Red River 18-0

Grand Forks. Red River defeated Thief River Falls 18-0 in a sophomore high school football game Thursday played on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

It was the season opener for the hosts, who trailed 12-0 at halftime.

Next action for the Thief River Falls sophomores will be Monday, Sept. 15, when East Grand Forks will be here for a 7 p.m. game.

THIEF RIVER FALLS halfback Dan Odegaard planted his foot as he tried to cut behind a block on Detroit Lakes' Jim Matter (20) during Friday's high school football game played at Detroit Lakes. Mark Arndt (60), Brian Jacobson (78) and Mike Hutchinson (82) of the Lakers trailed the play. Odegaard rushed for 81 yards on just nine carries and scored twice to help lead the Prowlers to a 32-21 victory over the Lakers. Thief River Falls, now 2-0, will be at Grand Rapids Friday.

Nordics Shut Out Tigers 28-0 To Start Conference Schedule

Shut out by Hallock 14-0 in the 1980 season opener a week earlier, Marshall County Central turned things around Friday to blank Greenbush 28-0 in the Nordics' Top of State nine-man high school football conference debut.

"We're always pleased with a win, and we're especially pleased since it was our first conference game," pointed out Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart. "The offense started to shape up. We got a few blocks and the backs hit the holes better."

Four different players crossed the goal line for the Nordics. Allen Lindemoen's two-yard run put Marshall County Central on the scoreboard in the first quarter. Jeff Dahl hauled in a 12-yard pass from Rick Van Camp and Gordy Collin scored on a 10-yard run as the visitors built a 22-0 halftime lead. Dahl hit Jamie Sagsteun with an 18-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter to complete the scoring.

The Nordics, who netted just 30 yards on offense in the nonconference loss to Hallock, racked up 286 yards Friday night against the Tigers. Collin gained 75 yards on just eight carries to lead the Nordics' 215-yard ground game, while Van Camp and Dahl combined for 71 yards worth of passing.

Steve Boe led the Nordics' shutout effort with 12 tackles. Troy Broderson and Dahl also received praise for their defensive work.

Marshall County Central will host Stephen Friday in its home opener.

Oklee . . . . 24 Clearbrook 6

Oklee spotted a strong-starting Clearbrook squad a 6-0 first quarter lead before coming up with a 24-6 North Tri County Conference victory in the Bobcats' 1980 home opener.

"We looked good. I'm happy," reported Oklee coach Dale Svaren who wasn't pleased with the way his team played in a 24-14 season-opening win over Grygla.

Two second quarter touchdowns gave the win to the Bobcats. A little razzle-dazzle started it as John Lindquist pulled in a 32-yard touchdown pass from John Cyr, who had caught a pass behind the line of scrimmage from quarterback Richard Bronken at the onset of the play. Bronken passed to Brad Gunderson on the conversion try for an 8-6 Oklee lead.

Brad Gunderson came up with a safety for a 10-6 edge before Bronken went over from the one-yard line for a 16-6 cushion.

Dyr added a one-yard run in the fourth quarter, then hit Matt Radnicki with the conversion pass to complete the scoring.

Bronken finished 9-for-19 passing for 95 yards. Paul Gunderson carried 15 times for 34 yards to lead the Bobcats' ground game that netted 89 yards. Brad Gunderson caught three passes for 42 yards.

Joel Stolaas topped the Bobcats' defensive point charts with 20, followed by Lindquist with 19, Randy Chaput 18 and Brad Gunderson 16.

"We did the job inside," mentioned Svaren. "We played well."

Mentor . . . . 38 Plummer 12

Plummer, after enjoying a 12-8 lead early in the second quarter, surrendered four unanswered touchdowns and was a 38-12 loser to Mentor in the Cardinals' 1980 home opener Friday.

Ron Fladhammer passed for two touchdowns and ran for another score to lead the visitors' attack.

"They picked us apart," acknowledged Plummer coach Gary Brantl who has eight new starters on defense this year.

An 11-yard run by Karl Sorenson put Plummer on top at the start. After a 45-yard Fladhammer touchdown pass to Gary Kolb and a conversion run by Dennis McGlynn put Mentor ahead 8-6, Plummer regained the lead on a 25-yard scoring pass from Ken Fisher to Kyle Gustafson.

But short touchdown runs by Fladhammer and Kolb from one and three yards out, respectively, sent the Trojans into halftime with a 24-12 lead.

Plummer produced 131 yards on the ground and 59 more in the air. Brad Rosten carried the ball 17 times for 57 yards. Gustafson caught three passes for 44 yards.

Dean Sletten came up with 10 unassisted tackles from his linebacker spot for the 0-2 Cardinals who must face McIntosh-Winger on the road Friday.

Middle River . . . . . 18 Gonvick 0

Middle River came up an 18-0 winner in a key North Tri County Conference match-up against Gonvick Friday afternoon.

The two teams, both tabbed among the conference favorites at the start of the year, were coming off season-opening losses and needed a win to get back into the pennant picture.

The host Skippers got the victory by scoring single touchdowns in the first three quarters. Two of the scores were long pass plays as Scott McKeever hauled in a 40-yarder from Mike Peterson in the first quarter and Peterson turned receiver to catch a 37-yarder from Delray Ness in the second quarter for a 12-0 halftime edge.

Middle River will host Goodridge Friday.

Steve Rude, Eric Balstad and Mark Thompson all scored two touchdowns Friday to lead McIntosh-Winger to a 49-0 North Tri County Conference win over visiting Goodridge.

It was the season-opener for the Huskies who trailed 16-0 at the end of the first quarter and went into halftime facing a 36-0 deficit.

Goodridge coach Rick Nelson was impressed by the Scots' play. "I don't see how they're going to be beat," he said after watching his team manage but three first downs.

Moorhead Tips Lincoln JV 12-6

Moorhead edged Thief River Falls 12-6 in overtime Saturday morning in a junior varsity high school football game played on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Trailing 6-0 at halftime, Thief River Falls tied it in the third quarter to force overtime when both teams were given the ball at the opposition's 10-yard line with four downs in which to score a touchdown or kick a field goal.

The visitors were the first to go on offense and they scored on a third down plunge from inside the one-yard line.

Thief River Falls came ever-so-close to scoring in overtime, but failed to punch the ball over the goal line on three attempts from inside the Moorhead one-yard line.

It was the season-opener for the Lincoln high school junior varsity team, now idle until Saturday, Sept. 20, when Thief River Falls will host Grand Forks Central in a 10 a.m. game.

Prowlers Enjoy Strong Cross Country Opener

An impressive 1980 season opener for Thief River Falls cross country teams Thursday at Roseau saw the Prowlers winning the boys varsity, junior varsity and junior high school portions of the meet.

"We really ran well," reported first-year Thief River Falls cross country coach Lynn Dyer. "They really got some of the area coaches talking. I was really happy with our performances. I think we surprised some of the area schools."

Thief River Falls won the varsity race with 27 points, followed by East Grand Forks 60, Crookston 97 and Roseau 98. Grafton had an incomplete team.

Bruce Johnson of the Prowlers won the 3.2-mile race in 17:21. Teammate Steve Kruta was third in 17:44, with Lon Aune running fifth in 17:45; Tim Bergland, sixth in 18:14; and Chuck Lowell, 12th in 18:26.

Junior varsity title went to Thief River Falls with 140 points, followed by Crookston 196 and East Grand Forks 209. Roseau and Grafton had incomplete teams.

Matt Grabanski had a 19:12 to pace the Thief River Falls junior varsity squad that also featured point-counting times by Todd Bergland 19:12, Tom Kenville 19:48, Terry Johnson 20:11 and Rob Blankenfeld 20:51.

Jim Geatz and Kevin Kezar placed 1-2 in the junior high race to lead Thief River Falls to a first place finished with 23 points and a 33-point victory margin over Grafton. Roseau, Crookston and East Grand Forks all had incomplete teams.

Geatz covered the two-mile course in 11:44, with Kezar running an 11:48, Jeff Matson, fourth in 12:13; Doug Suronen, seventh in 13:01 and Bob Breiland, ninth in 13:41.

East Grand Forks beat Thief River Falls 18-40 in the girls varsity race.

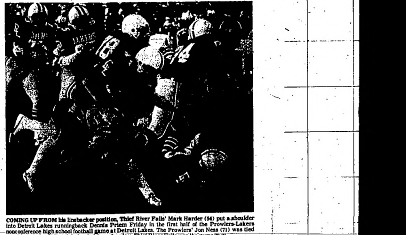
Susie Hanna led the Thief River Falls girls with a third place 13:59 over two miles, followed by Sherry Sabo, seventh in 14:50; Trisha Armstrong, ninth in 15:14; Jackie Thune, tenth in 15:20; and Margaret White, 11th in 15:25.

"East Grand Forks has an older and more experienced team than we have," noted Dyer when talking about the girls competition. "Our girls varsity has three juniors, one freshman, two eighth graders and one seventh grader."

The Prowlers will run at Crookston Thursday at 4 p.m.

"It was a nice way to open the season," said Dyer about the opener, "but we have to make sure we don't get overconfident because we'll be seeing a lot tougher competition in the next couple of weeks."

In the United States, snowmobilers use just one-sixth of one per cent of all gasoline consumed in the U.S. —about 26 drops out of every gallon of gasoline.



COMING UP FROM his linebacker position, Thief River Falls' Mark Harder (54) put a shoulder into Detroit Lakes runningback Dennis Priem Friday in the first half of the Prowlers-Lakers nonconference high school football game at Detroit Lakes. The Prowlers' Jon Ness (71) was tied up with the Lakers' Butch Inderrieden on the play. Thief River Falls won the game 32-21.

Volleyball Is Big News In Gaylord

One year ago when the volleyball players from Gaylord were on their way to leading their school to back-to-back state girls volleyball tournament championships, few were surprised.

Noted a newspaper reporter at the time: "There were seven teams competing in the sixth annual Class A girls state volleyball tournament. And then there was Gaylord."

In winning title honors last year, Gaylord became the first school to repeat as state champion in the six-year history of the Minnesota State High School League-sponsored sport. In doing so, the Spartans have fashioned a consecutive winning streak that reached 45 last Tuesday night.

The school has not lost an interscholastic varsity volleyball match since 1977. In 1978 coach Sally Yeagar's team finished with a 22-0 record and last year the squad duplicated that feat.

This season the team opened with a 2-0 verdict over Arlington-Green Isle, winning by 18-11 and 18-10 margins. Gaylord could make it 50 straight at Franklin on September 16, should they survive tests against Niccollet, Glencoe, Gibbon and Sleepy Eye between time.

"The school and community is really excited once again about this year's team", said Gaylord's principal Bruce Pederson. "We had a full house for our opener the other night."

Yeagar, who has been head coach since the program's inception at Gaylord, returns three starters from last year's team. The Spartans lost six players through graduation.

Speaking of starters, defending Class AA state champion St. Paul Johnson returns four of its first six regulars from the 1979 championship team.

Whether Johnson or Gaylord can earn a repeat trip to the state tournament at the Met Center in Bloomington on November 14-15 will be the subject of debate during the next two months.

This season 504 high schools from throughout Minnesota are sponsoring interscholastic varsity girls volleyball teams. The program involves nearly 15,000 participants.

Otters Are Featured As Zoo Attraction

If there is a clown in nature, its got to be the otter. Its body sledding, rolls, wrestling and general cavorting have always delighted the rare viewer in the wild. Of the 12 species, the North American river otter inhabits all of Minnesota with the main concentration in the northern rivers and lakes.

These delightful, streamlined creatures are the most adept in water of all land mammals. The dark brown coat has two layers and is well suited for all weather in and out of water. Webbing between the toes and an up and down body "flex" allows the otter to dive deep and swim rhythmically through the water at seven miles an hour. On land in the winter, the otter can attain speeds of 15 miles an hour by running three or four steps, launching itself on the snow, and then sliding on its belly.

The otter home is a den that is well hidden, often in the bank of a lake or stream with an underwater entrance. Like its closest mustelid relatives, weasels, minks, badgers, wolverines, and sea otters, the North American river otter has a keen sense of smell and marks its territory with secretions from its odor producing musk glands.

Otters used to live throughout the U.S., but by the 1900's trapping and habitat destruction exterminated most of this species. In Minnesota, the otter is protected and limited hunting is regulated by law. Still, their few numbers normally keep them out of sight, but their dives, slides, spiraling swimming, and playful behavior are always in view at the Minnesota Zoo. Four young pair of otters live at the zoo, with each couple taking their turn in the exhibit that has underwater and on-land viewing. Their home is uniquely landscaped so that minnows are regularly released into the water to simulate their natural diet of fish, crayfish, frogs, insects, and small mammals. Mating and rearing of young is rare in zoos, but the Minnesota zoo hopes one of the pairs will mate this winter or early spring and have one to five pups the following year.

Don't wait for a camping trip to see these amazing animals. The Minnesota Zoo is open year around with weather protected walkways for visitors and natural outdoor settings for the animals.

Minnesota Zoo is located south of the Twin Cities in Apple Valley. Admission prices are: adults 17 and over, $3; ages 12-16, $1.50; ages 6-11, $1; seniors 62 and over, $1.50. Children under five are admitted free. For further information call 432-9010.

Arabian Horse Ass'n. Plans Endurance Ride

Dr. E.T. Curren, president of the Northern Minnesota Arabian horse association, reminds all interested parties that the association will once again sponsor the Pillager Cup endurance and competitive ride to be held on September 20 and 21 on the trails at the Pillager state forest north of Pillager.

The endurance ride, which will be 50 miles in length, will be held on Saturday, September 20. All horses entered in the endurance ride must be five years of age, a requirement of the conference rules. The horse and rider successfully completing the 50 miles in the shortest length of time will be declared the winner of that event.

On the following day, September 21, there will be two competitive trail rides. One ride will be 25 miles in length, and the second ride for novices will be 17 miles in length. The winner will be the rider who completes the ride within the allotted time and has the horse in the best condition at the end of the ride. Therefore, the first rider to cross the finish line is not necessarily the winner.

All rides, including the endurance and both competitive rides, are under direct veterinarian supervision. Several local veterinarians will be in attendance to supervise the activities.

For additional information please contact Marilyn Miller, Route 2, Box 187, Brainerd, Minnesota 56401.

Dr. Curren also advised that on the weekend prior to the Endurance Ride, September 13 and 14, the Northern Minnesota Arabian Horse Association will sponsor a trail ride at the same site. This ride will be a pleasure ride, however, participants in this ride will be marking the trails to be used in the endurance ride the following weekend.

All members and anyone else interested in participating in this overnight ride through the fall-colored forest should contact Jenny Johnson, Route 2, Brainerd, Minnesota 56401, Telephone 218-764-2903.

EGF Freshmen Beat TRF 6-2 On Thursday

A third quarter touchdown gave East Grand Forks a 6-2 victory over Thief River Falls Thursday afternoon in season-opening freshman high school football action on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Thief River Falls lost a chance for at least a tie when the hosts lost a first down fumble at the East Grand Forks three-yard line with about three minutes remaining in the game. Four plays later a high snap on a punt attempt gave Thief River Falls a two-point safety.

Crookston will be here Thursday for a 4 p.m. freshman game.

Bronko Will Be Featured In St. Paul Play

Bronko Nagurski could outrun most wide receivers, overrun most defenders and hit like a piano dropped from a cliff. Back when the forward pass was a radical concept, when stars were paid $5,000 a season and nobody wore a facemask, Nagurski was as good as the game. He was voted All-American in two positions at the University of Minnesota, and once played five positions in a single game. He dispensed professional abuse as a Chicago Bear, and later, as a three-time world heavyweight wrestling champion.

"Bronko," the fall production of the COMPAS — St. Paul History Theatre, opens Friday, Sept. 26, at the Weyerhauser Auditorium of the Landmark Center in St. Paul. Playwright Lance Belville contrasts Nagurski's game with modern football; the violence, the status; the money. Audio expert Russell Borud of Minneapolis has designed a three-dimensional sound environment for the production. Smacking shoulder pads and the galloping feet of defensive backs will pervade the new Weyerhauser Auditorium, moving 360 degrees around the audience. Lance Belville — a 1980 NEA Fellowship recipient — addresses football from the perspective of a man who played it for love. In this age of endorsements and unions, Bronko's humility is his only pension.

"Bronko" runs weekends from September 26 through October 19. Thursday and Friday performances are at 8 p.m.; Saturday shows are at 5:15 and 9 p.m.; and there will be a 2 p.m. matinee on Sundays. The Thursday, Oct. 2, performance, will be signed for the deaf.

Tickets are $4.75 for adults and $3.75 for students and senior citizens. Reservations and information are available by calling COMPAS-St. Paul History Theatre at (612) 292-3250 during office hours.

"EVERYBODY'S MARKET" attracted a variety of shoppers to downtown Thief River Falls Saturday. Items displayed throughout the downtown area included fresh garden produce, crafts, bakery goods, antiques and various other items.

FIRST DOLLAR OF clear profit was presented recently to Bill Dee (left), new owner of Florence's cafe in Thief River Falls. Presenging the plaque bo'Dee is Bob Poissant, Chamber Ambassador.

Stumpf Wins In Primary; Republican Vote Is Low

Endorsed candidate LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer withstood the challenge of Jim Kremer of Thief River Falls to win a spot on the DFL general election ballot at the primary election held Tuesday. With all precincts reporting, Stumpf received 1,712 votes to 1,482 for Kremer in the race for state representative from District 1B, a margin of 230 votes.

Clyde Christensen of Thief River Falls, unopposed on the Independent Republican ballot for the same office, received only 769 votes as Republicans either stayed away from the polls or involved themselves in the DFL race.

Stumpf gathered his winning margin in Pennington county where he out-polled Kremer 975 to 720. He also carried Red Lake county 364 to 346 but lost to Kremer in Marshall county 338 to 364 and in Polk county 35 to 52.

The Independent Republican indifference to the primary where there were no contests in this area could have cost Christensen an automatic spot on the general election ballot. A little-known law, adopted in 1959 and amended in 1975, provides that primary election candidates must poll 10 per cent of the total average vote cast for state officers of that party at the last general election to be placed on the general election ballot.

Under that law, Christensen needed 508 primary election votes to qualify. His 769 votes actually received were more than ample, but the law was not called to public attention by the state attorney general's office until this morning — the day following the election. Had Christensen or other candidates not received the required number of votes, they would have to be placed on the general election ballot by petition.

In another area election where interest ran high, incumbent Percy Stokke and Marcella Gonsorowski won positions on the November ballot for county commissioner in Marshall county's fourth district. Stokke with 290 votes and Mrs. Gonsorowski with 229 easily out-paced Lowell Lindemoen with 122 and Marlowe Myer with 47.

Other than the District 1B legislative race on the DFL ticket and the Marshall county fourth district commissioner contest, the primary Tuesday was a hum-drum affair.

Gene Wenstrom, endorsed by the DFL for U.S. Representative in Congress, had taken opposition from Russell R. Ellis but swamped Ellis 1,298 to 219 in Pennington county — indicative of the district-wide trend.

Sen. Marv Hanson of Hallock, unopposed on the DFL ballot for state senator, received 1,455 votes in the primary in Pennington county.

On the Independent-Republican side of the ticket, in addition to Christensen's 288 votes, Seventh District Congressman Arlan Stangeland received 289 votes and state senate candidate Mark Skogerboe received 257 votes.

School Bond Issue Costs Impossible To Determine

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Citizens committee members trying to determine how to simply and accurately inform the public of tax impact from the proposed $15 million school building and remodeling project seem faced with trying to answer the unanswerable question, "How high is up?"

Board of education of School District 564 is proposing the $15 million bond issue to construct a new high school beginning in 1981 and to remodel existing elementary schools to bring them into conformance with state standards for energy conservation and access by handicapped.

The board proposes to build a closed campus school (all students stay the entire school day unless excused by parents) on district-owned property northeast of the city, on the same general site but completely separate from the area vocational-technical institute. It would be designed to house 1,200 students in grades nine through 12 and include auditorium and center school components.

"So what's it gonna to do to my taxes?" is the first question which comes to mind whenever the proposal is presented. The simple answer is that total taxes in the district will have to increase substantially because the construction is a total local responsibility. To retire $15 million in bonds plus interest over a 24-year period will require an estimated $1,405,261 in additional tax monies per year — all of it coming from taxpayers in school District 564.

That is where the simple answers end.

An attempt to determine how the additional obligation will be spread among the taxpayers in the district leads the inquirer into an almost unbelievable maze of formulas, credits, percentages, changing valuations, levies, allowances, assessments and yet-to-be-determined factors.

From information available to C.W. Rodekuhr, Pennington county auditor, the individual homeowner with less than the maximum homestead credit will apparently fare the best if the bond issue is passed. This is true to a large extent because individual home valuations have more accurately kept pace with rising prices than agricultural property. As such, they will not be subject to a large increases in valuation for taxation purposes.

At a meeting Monday evening with citizens committee members, news media and school officials, the auditor admitted that it is impossible at this time for him to compute that 1981 taxes would be for any property owner, whether the bond issue passes or not. He does not yet have available the city, county and school district budgets or the township levy requests, all of which affect the tax levy. Nor does he have necessary information from the state tax department to allow computations to be made.

But he did venture an educated guess that the statistics prepared by Springsted Incorporated for the school district would likely be "pretty close" on a general basis.

The Springsted computations are reproduced in part in chart form on the front page of this issue of the Times. They are abbreviated to show as clearly as possible the relationship between 1979-80 taxes as they exist and 1980-81 taxes as they would be if the bond issue passes. They are shown only for residential homestead property in the city of Thief River Falls — perhaps the simplest of the complicated tax categories.

It should be pointed out that the first part of the table shows "Limited Market Value" while the second part shows "Estimated Market Value". Legislation enacted in 1979 eliminated the Limited Market Value concept on taxes levied for 1980 for collection in 1981. The effect of this will be to increase the market value for taxation on most properties in the coming year.

As a result, comparing a $30,000 home in the first part of the table to a $30,000 home in the second part would likely not be accurate. A more reasonable comparison would be a $30,000 home in the first table and a $40,000 home in the second table. This would compare a current tax bill of $390 to a 1981 tax bill of $468 if the bond issue passes.

Citizens committee and school officials emphasize that the calculations are intended to show a general anticipated trend only, and that they should not be considered applicable to all properties.

Use of specific examples — applying the available information and assuming unavailable or unknown factors — is being contemplated by the committee to further illustrate tax costs and thereby inform the concerned taxpayer.

Anyone who has an idea on how to better present tax information to the public is encouraged to bring it to the attention of John Seaverson, committee chairman.

Three New Trustees On Hospital Board

Three new trustees were elected to the board of Northwestern Hospital association in Thief River Falls Monday evening when 165 members attended the annual meeting held at Lon's restaurant.

Elected were Roger Reuter, president of First Northwestern state bank; Chris Twomey, director of the occupational development center; and Darrell Bakke, insurance agent. The three had been nominated by petition to be placed on the ballot at the annual meeting.

Nominated by the nominating committee to succeed themselves for three-year terms had been board chairman Robert Bredeson, secretary Harley (Bud) Kelly and Harry Oen. Each had served two three-year terms on the board and was eligible for one additional term under by-laws of the association. The newly-elected trustees will take office at a reorganizational meeting of the board.

Other members of the board include Terry Courneya, vice president; Evadell Tangquist, treasurer; Norman P. Peterson, executive vice president; Curtis Charlson, Roy Lee, Marvin Lundin, Dr. William Ramsay, Andrew Skaar and Duane Walton.

Annual reports of the association for 1979-80 were distributed to the membership and included reports from the administration, hospital auxiliary and medical staff.

HOSPITAL STAFF SPEAKERS who participated in the annual meeting program Monday evening at Lon's restaurant in Thief River Falls were Dr. Steve Levinson, clinical director of the day-night unit, and Judy Janneck, director of patient education and community services. All but four of the 169 people in attendance were members of Northwestern Hospital association. Dr. Levinson reviewed the history of the day-night unit and its present role in community mental health. Mrs. Janneck outlined the hospital's commitment to a healthy community and illustrated how most people can keep their own health care costs down by taking care of their personal health.

Majority Council Vote Resolves Rezoning Issue

Matter of rezoning 3.56 acres of land near Greenwood street and Allwood Acres addition was resolved last evening during the regular Thief River Falls city council meeting.

The issue, tabled from several council meetings, came to a close when a majority roll call vote accepted the planning commission's recommendation to deny the rezoning (from agricultural to R-2 with a special use permit to allow townhouses; based on the incompletion of Greenwood street (one of three reasons offered by the planning commission as to why the rezoning should be denied).

Alderman Milan Borsheim introduced the resolution which was followed by a second from alderman Clayton Restad. Four "Yes" votes to deny the rezoning followed alderman Borsheim's resolution with aldermen Borsheim, Ambrose Wysoski, Restad and Mayor Bob Carlson voting in favor of the resolution. Aldermen J.J. Womack, Ole Engelstad and Bill Penning were opposed to the resolution, and alderman Dr. Don Goodrich abstained.

Reasons for Goodrich's abstention on the issue were reflected by his feelings expressed later when he said he felt he could not vote yes on the denial of the rezoning because of the possibility of getting a less than suitable project, nor could he vote no, he said, because of neighborhood feelings in that area toward the project.

Alderman Wysoski voiced his concern over the Greenwood street objection by stating that, "more units in the area would mean more traffic."

A large group of people had gathered to hear the council's final decision just as they had done at past meetings concerning this issue. And, again, statements were presented by various concerned citizens, as well as from city council members and the developer of the project, Seth W. Twichell, of Seth Twichell and Associates of Fargo.

Mayor Carlson reported to those present what had been discussed with the Minnesota Housing and Finance Agency (MHFA) staff in Minneapolis when Jack Quinlivan, city planner, the mayor, alderman Goodrich, Ed Turenne — a property owner immediately north of the proposed project; and Jim Olson, spokesman for the property owners in the proposed area of the project, met to discuss alternatives for the project and to question why the particular site selected for the project was so important.

The housing agency said they would put aside the date set for a report by Twichell of council's decision if council voted down the special use request, to allow time for the duplex project, Mayor Carlson stated.

This question had been a major one throughout all meetings on this issue and was directed by Mayor Carlson at an August 19 meeting.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Cheryl Wassink And Robert Steffen Wed

Miss Cheryl Wassink, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wassink of Thief River Falls, and Robert Steffen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Steffen of Crookston, were married recently in a 7:00 p.m., ceremony at St. John Lutheran church in this city.

Rev. Barrie Henke officiated at the double ring ceremony. The organist was Marcia Knutilla. Jan Hildebrandt, a friend of the couple, and Jeff Liden were the vocalists and joined in singing, "The Wedding Son," "I Pledge My Love," and "Morning Has Broken."

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father and mother, was attired in a gown of white organza and Chantilly lace, styled with appliqued bishop sleeves, a Queen Anne neckline and empire waistline. The fitted bodice was enhanced by lace appliques and seed pearls. Matching lace edged the skirt with chapel-length train, complemented by vertical bands of lace. A lace headpiece, trimmed with pearls and iridescents, held her bridal illusion veil, edged with the same lace that trimmed her gown. She carried a bouquet of dusty-rose tipped roses interspersed with stephanotis and babies' breath.

The maid of honor was Debora Wassink, Thief River Falls, a sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Denise Widstrom, Moorhead, friend of the couple; Pam Wassink, Thief River Falls, sister of the bride; and Marge Steffen, Crookston, a sister of the groom. Their identical gowns of Daphne rose were fashioned with blouson bodices and tulip petal, street-length skirts worn over removable, floor-length skirts. All the attendants carried bouquets of dusty-rose tipped roses and babies' breath. With the exception of the flowers on the altar, all the flowers were of silk, with the majority of the roses tipped in dusty-rose.

Melinda Haun, Moorhead, was the bride's personal attendant.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Tom Steffen, Burnsville. Groomsmen were friends of the groom: Lyle Tiegs, Moorhead, and Tom Skjei, and Greg Lerum, of Crookston. Ushering the guests were Kenneth Klever, cousin of the bride, and Steve Boyd, friend of the couple. Both are Moorhead residents. The groom wore a white tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt and dusty-rose tipped rose boutonniere complemented by stephanotis and babies' breath. A similar rose boutonniere with babies' breath accented the lapels of the silver grey tuxedos worn by the other men of the wedding party.

The mothers of the couple wore dresses of a floral print which complemented the gowns worn by the bridesmiads. Mrs. Wassink's corsage was of roses tipped in dusty-rose, and Mrs. Steffen's featured all white roses.

Honor guests at the wedding were Mrs. Goldie Wassink, Wadena, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Klever, Sr., Henning, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester (Charlie) Hohl, Crookston, grandparents of the groom.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon (Bud) Wassink, South St. Paul, uncle and aunt of the bride, as host and hostess. Renee Bedard, Thief River Falls, a friend of the bride, registered the guests. At the punch table were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bennett, Frazee, uncle and aunt of the bride.

The three-tiered wedding cake, baked by Mrs. Lowell Knutson, was served by Mrs. Valerie Klever, Henning, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Bernice Ranz, Crookston, aunt of the groom. Mrs. Margaret Kover, Wadena, and Mrs. Darlene Volker, Fisher, aunts of the bride and groom, respectively, presided at the coffee service.

During the reception, the bride's sorority sisters from Moorhead State university serenaded the couple.

Following a wedding trip to Winnipeg, the couple is now at home in Moorhead. The bride is a 1976 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1980 graduate of Moorhead State university. The groom is a 1975 graduate of Crookston Central high school and is employed at Plunketts Furniture in Moorhead. Photo, R.L. Nieland Studio, Thief River Falls

Hickerson And Pream Marriage Vows Spoken

Miss Robyn Faye Hickerson and Jon Scott Pream, both of Thief River Falls, exchanged marriage vows recently at a two o'clock wedding at Redeemer Lutheran church in this city.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hickerson and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pream, all of this city.

Rev. Keith Prekker officiated at the double ring ceremony. Preceding the processional, and as the candles were lit, Elaine Idso sang "Candle On the Water." She also sang "The Lord's Prayer," as the couple knelt at the altar. Kevin Kompelien sang "The Wedding Song," before the vows, and "God, Woman, and A Man," after the vows were spoken.

Two baskets of yellow daisies, peach carnations and white gladioli graced the altar. Peach ribbons marked the aisle pews.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. For her attire, she chose to wear her mother's wedding gown of Chantilly lace and nylon tulle. It was fashioned with a long sleeved, fitted lace bodice with a bouffant chapel-length skirt featuring tiers of matching lace. Her fingertip veil of nylon tulle edged with matching lace, was held in place by a lace headpiece embroidered with seed pearls. The bride's jewelry was a string of pearls, her gift from the groom. She carried a silk bouquet of peach, yellow and white carnations on a lace background. Babies' breath and peach ribbon which fell into love knots accented the bouquet.

Sandy Hoff, a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Patty Mork and Jennifer Hedlund, also friends of the bride. Their gowns of a peach muted floral design were styled with drawstring shoulders, blouson bodices and floor-length pleated skirts. Their gold necklaces were gifts from the bride. They carried silk bouquets of yellow and peach daisies, and peach carnations, backed by lace with white satin accents.

Attired in a floor-length sundress of a white dotted Swiss was the flower girl, Rachael Pream, a niece of the groom. She carried a wicker basket of silk peach, yellow and white carnations, peach daisies and babies' breath with peach ribbon. Her gold locket was a gift from the bride.

The bride's personal attendant was Melodee Ruprecht.

Lyndon Pream, a brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Scott Hickerson, brother of the bride, and Marc Pream, brother of the groom. Timmy Johnson, a cousin of the bride, was ring bearer. Ushers were Dan Jorgenson and Steve Breiland, friends of the couple. All the men of the wedding party, together with the ring bearer and the fathers of the couple, wore dark brown tuxedos with dark brown velvet vests and trim, white ruffled shirts with peach accents, and peach carnation boutonnieres. Babies' breath accented the groom's boutonnieres and a yellow sweetheart rose emphasized the center of the boutonnieres worn by the fathers.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Hickerson selected a mint green floor-length gown, styled similar to the bridesmaids. A similar gown in medium blue was worn by the groom's mother. Identical corsages of five yellow sweetheart roses, babies' breath and pastel colored ribbon, complemented their gowns.

Honored guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Albertson, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hickerson, Grandparents of the bride; Herbert Brutlag and Mrs. Ruth Misegades, godparents of the groom, and Mae Breiland, a special friend of the bride. Their corsages and boutonnieres matched those worn by the couple's mothers and fathers.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall. Hosts and hostesses were Dayle and Meryl Johnson, uncle and aunt, of the bride. Sharon and Susanne Hickerson, cousins of the bride, and Stephanie Pream, niece of the groom, served as candlelighters and gift bearers. They were attired in floor-length sundresses of a peach dotted Swiss, accented with yellow daisy wrist corsages. Bud and Gloria Woodard, friends of the bride, ladled the punch, and Dan Busch, a cousin of the bride, distributed the rice.

The four-tiered wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with peach roses and sweet peas, was topped by a bride and groom ornament featuring an Italian filigree archway trimmed with sprays of peach flowers. The cake was cut and served by Ginny Pream, sister-in-law of the groom, and Mary Hickerson, aunt of the bride. Pouring coffee were JoAnn Pream, sister-in-law of the groom, and Vonette Busch, aunt of the bride. Waitresses were Mary Amundson, Peggy Skjerven, Jackie Ulrich and Sherrie Armstrong, friends of the couple.

Following the reception, the couple opened their gifts in the church fireside room.

The couple is making their home on route 3, Thief River Falls. The bride is a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school and is in her second year at Northland Community college. The groom, a graduate of Lincoln high school, class of 1969, and Northland Community college, is employed by L.B. Hartz Wholesale. Both are employed at Galaxy Twin Theater. Photo, R.L. Junior Volunteer Program Arises At NW Hospital

Revitalization of the junior volunteer program at Northwestern Hospital services in Thief River Falls is being initiated under the direction of Deloris Larson, junior volunteer coordinator, who has recently been added to the hospital supervisory staff.

Mrs. Larson, a graduate of the licensed practical nurse program at the Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute, is a native of Michigan, N.D. She has been an LPN at the hospital for about two years.

While the hospital presently has 17 volunteers working in the Candystriper program, the facility has been without a full-time coordinator in the volunteer area for a number of years. Mrs. Larson is planning a week of formal orientation for both new and present junior volunteers and is accepting applications for new participants until September 19.

Both boys and girls in the 14 through 18 age category will be welcomed into the program is they agree to provide a minimum of two hours of volunteer service a week, Mrs. Larson said. They will work in the first floor medical, second floor medical-surgical, pediatrics and obstetrics areas.

Duties will include primarily patient services such as providing fresh water to patients, serving food trays, answering patient lights signalling for assistance, visiting with patients and some service in the coffee shop and gift shop. "We will even teach them how to make beds," Mrs. Larson added.

"We plan to take applications for volunteer service every three months. Deadline for the first application period is September 19. Volunteer service can not only provide young people with a feeling of personal worth and self-satisfaction, it can introduce them to fields of interest which they may wish to pursue as rewarding careers later in their lives," the new coordinator said.

Interested young people may discuss the program with Mrs. Larson by stopping at the volunteer coordinator's office in the north lobby of the hospital or call 681-2904 evenings.

Trade Mission Studies State Wheat Market

A foreign wheat trade mission composed of wheat buyers for Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg is completing its tour of Minnesota wheat production, processing and export facilities in the state today. The "Benelux" team is sponsored by the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council and U.S. Wheat associates.

According to wheat council chairman Elner Satter of Norcross, the team included representatives from two of the largest flour milling firms in the Netherlands. Together they mill approximately 70 per cent of the flour used in the Netherlands, and they also mill wheat for export to other European nations and to third country markets.

On the trading side, the Benelux team also included representatives of the major wheat importing firms that import wheat for use in the Netherlands and to a large extent, Belgium. "For all practical purposes," Satter stated, "these team members represent almost the total domestic wheat industry in the three countries."

Satter said the team members were given a complete tour of the wheat industry in Minnesota, beginning with a visit to the Minnesota state grain inspection service at the Minneapolis grain exchange. They also visited with officials and traders at the Minneapolis grain exchange trading floor, as well as officials at the Grain Terminal association and Cargill, Inc.

The team also visited Duluth, where they met with the federal grain inspection service to discuss grain inspection and grading, as well as visit with officials of the port authority and Continental grain company.

The team will conclude its visit to Minnesota by meeting with farmers in the East Grand Forks area today. Following the tour of Minnesota, the wheat team will continue the tour with stops at Grand Forks, Fargo, Denver, Wichita and Manhatten, Kansas, before arriving in Washington, D.C., on September 20.

According to Satter, the Benelux countries have a combined population of 25 million people, and they produce approximately 60 million bushels of wheat annually. From this domestic production, about 40 million bushels go into the feed processing industry, depending on the pricing relationships with feed grain.

Satter also pointed out that the countries are a quality market for 20-27 million bushels of U.S. wheat annually. The Benelux traditionally buys U.S. hard red spring wheat, hard red winter wheat, hard amber durum and soft red winter wheat.

Council Votes On Rezoning Issue Monday

"In the event that council votes down the request for the rezoning, what stand would the Minnesota Housing and Finance Agency take?" he had asked, before explaining the answer he had received through a telephone conversation with representatives of the agency who stated they would permit the developer to come back to them (agency) for a renewal of the project which would permit them to erect duplexes in the proposed area instead of townhouses.

Kurt Marben, attorney, speaking in behalf of the neighborhood, explained that the area considered for rezoning is surrounded by R-2 and R-1 areas, and developments at the proposed site would change the surroundings and the traffic patterns in the area.

"But the neighborhood is not against the project," he reminded those present.

Speaking in favor the townhouse project was Twichell who stated, "I'd like to see the townhouse cluster in the area. I don't feel good about doing duplexes. But it's too late to turn back now."

During an August 5 meeting, Twichell had stated that, by building duplexes, with R-2 (medium residential zoning) the quality of the units would be cut by $2,000 to $3,000.

Robert Wurst, city attorney, had reminded council members before their final decision had been made that any resolution made would have to be preceded by findings such as those stated by the planning commission as to why the rezoning should be denied. Those findings included: (1) The incompletion of Greenwood street; (2) neighborhood opposition to the project; and (3) because of the manner in which the state had approached the development of the project.

Alderman Penning stressed his feelings in favor of the project before the final decision had been made by stating, "we haven't had a good alternative housing plan in low income areas in the past. I will personally vote in favor of the project because I think it would be a good thing to give alternative housing to the low income."

With the rezoning decision reached, Mayor Carlson and J.J. Womack were dismissed from the meeting to attend the annual meeting of Northwestern Hospital services, and alderman Wysoski served as acting mayor for the remainder of the meeting.

Property matters appeared to be major issues of last evening's meeting as another issue, carried over from previous meetings was brought up concerning property owned by Jerry Wetch at 503 south Riverside in Thief River Falls.

A delegation of property owners in the area of the property appeared at the meeting to discuss the issue. It had been decided at a June 17 hearing that the matter would be reconsidered September 9 (September 8 due to the primary election) while council granted continued use of the gas station property presently used an an automobile repair shop owned by Wetch.

A major point of discussion during the hearing involved the question of eliminating the business or the objections (excessive noise, junk in the area, driving hazards caused by cars parked in the driveway) to the business. Two petitions had been present at the hearing — one from residents within 300 feet of the property, objecting to the property, and one from Wetch including the names of those in favor of his business at its present location.

Jack Quinlivan, city planner, spoke to those present last evening on the status of the property since the last meeting.

"We ordered the PRO sign down and the sign face came down but the pedestal remains," he said. (Following a 15-day notice given).

"The gas tanks at the station have been removed and the painting job completed," he added.

The pedestal for the sign at the garage site is nonconforming to the area (zoned R-2, residential) and is in violation of the sign ordinance, according to Quinlivan.

Following further discussion, it was resolved that the business would continue with the same housekeeping methods as those occurring during the time period since the hearing, and Quinlivan and Wetch would work together on the sign matter to devise a sign suitable for that location, if possible.

No opposition to that area had occurred from property owners in the area at this meeting, as it was mentioned that the main points earlier objected to had been corrected — including excessive cars in the area, cleanliness, and the noise level which had decreased.

In other council action, it was resolved that the city engineer would take proper measuring procedures in an effort to clear street obstructions (trees, shrubs, fences, etc). There presently is a state law regarding this matter, according to Wurst but it does not apply within the city unless the city passes an ordinance for it.

In the matter concerning "No Parking" signs to be placed behind the medical office building and east of Riverside Terrace, as recommended by Ken Froschheiser, chief of police, it was resolved that Froschheiser would discuss the matter with the hospital, to determine what portion of that area is hospital property. It could then be determined where the sign could be placed.

In airport proceedings, it was resolved that the airport development aid project grant offer ($150,440) for the airport terminal building be accepted. The resolution, introduced by alderman Penning, also included accepting the time table discussed by Jim J. Walker, of Bemidji, for final plans and specifications for the project to be submitted to the Federal Aviation administration by September 22, and the dates set for the advertising and opening of bids for the project. The offer would permit an addition to the crash fire rescue building at the airport to meet handicapped requirements, he said.

Various time conflicts resulted in changing upcoming meeting dates. Next regular city council meeting was tentatively set for September 22 at 7:30 p.m. with a hearing set that same evening at 7 p.m. for the purpose of discussing the parking assessment district project.

Last evenings' meeting was adjourned to September 16 at which time there will be a hearing, beginning at 7:30 p.m. on the 1980 street improvement project.

CITIZENS MERITORIOUS AWARD was presented to Teresa Hanson of Thief River Falls for her assistance with the Thief River Falls police department June 21. On that date, Hanson alerted the department that she had seen what she believed to be the theft of a tool box. The suspect hid the tool box, valued between $300 and $400 and left the area. Officers staked out the area and when the suspect returned to the area in his car, Hanson again alerted the police department, not knowing that there was an officer on the stakeout. As a result of Hanson's quick action and cooperation, the suspect was taken into custody and has been charged with burglary. The award, the first to be presented to a citizen in Thief River Falls, was presented by Mr. L. "Max" Graham, director of the Minnesota Police and Peace Officers Association (second from right), Ken Froschheiser, Thief River Falls police chief (far right) and Mayor Bob Carlson (left). "Citizen cooperation and assistance is becoming less common as the public becomes more reluctant 'to get involved'," Froschheiser said. "It is rewarding to find a citizen that is willing to do so."

"KINDRED '80," an international team formed and sponsored by Lutheran Youth Encounter, will present a family program at Zion Lutheran church, 505 Main Ave. North this Sunday at the 8:30 and 10:30 services. They will share their mission message through the use of word, music, puppet cameos and drama sketches. Members of the team are Dawn Riske, Athens, Wisconsin; Freda Myhrwold, Blair, Wisconsin; Brice Erickson, White Bear Lake, Minnesota; Michael Ostermann, Buffalo Center, Iowa; Steven Christianson, Bloomer, Wisconsin.

New Trustees Elected To Hospital Board

The administrative report called attention to the board's hiring of Chi Systems, Inc., a management consulting firm of Ann Arbor, Mich., to evaluate the hospital's organization structure, management effectiveness and intra-organizational relations of the board, medical staff and hospital departments. It also noted that the position of associate administrator has been created by the board and interviews conducted for that position with selection expected to be announced soon.

Communications between the board and medical staff had been increased during the year, it was noted, and emphasis will be placed on new standards of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals which pertain to quality assurance.

Also mentioned in the report was the clearing of the former Holiday stationstore site and its use for off-street parking of approximately 100 cars. Board decision to make 7,000 square feet of hospital property north of First street available to the downtown parking assessment district and to accept an assessment of approximately $47,000 for the parking district was also included.

Medical staff report by chief of staff Leo Herber, M.D., reported that Dr. Dave Humphrey, orthopedist, had relocated in Fargo, N.D.; radiologist Phil Murray had left to further his academic career at Harvard university; and that Dr. H. P. Wendt had retired from medical practice after many years of service to the community.

Dr. Herber introduced Dr. Don Paden, psychiatrist, who has recently located in Thief River Falls, and noted in his report that Fox Hill Associates is actively recruiting other physicians "to round out our medical capabilities."

Kaye Marvin, president of the hospital auxiliary, pointed out that the auxiliary pledged to purchase a cardiac monitoring system for the intensive care unit through an agreement with the hospital and is planning several projects to meet the financial commitment.

Speakers at the meeting were Judy Janneck, director of patient education and community services, and Dr. Steve Levinson, clinical director of the day-night unit.

Mrs. Janneck commented on Northwestern hospital's commitment to be a health center, not merely an after-the-fact curer of illnesses and disabilities. She divided the continuum of health into five categories: (1) Abuse and premature death; (2) do nothing; feel nothing; (3) prevention of illness; (4) good health promotion; and (5) high level wellness.

Citing per capita consumption of cigarettes (4,270 annually in 1974 and probably more today), alcohol consumption (nearly half of the U.S. population drinks and nine million are alcohol abusers), drug abuse, stress and suicide, she indicated that people can often exert control of their own health to a much greater degree.

"The victims of self-abusive habits are certainly profitable to the illness care industry," she said. "There simply is no greater reservoir of health and medical know-how in this community or region than Northwestern hospital. We have the capacity to educate, motivate or at least inform people about positive health practices.

"I have become convinced that the single greatest reason for inefficiencies in our health care system is the apathy of the individual to take care of himself — and the affinity most of us have to let someone else make the decisions about making us well, rather than keeping well in the first place," she said.

Dr. Levinson reviewed the day-night unit of the hospital from its construction and program involvement with federal "assistance" to presently a viable, self-supporting mental health program.

"The intent and game plan of the federal award program was clear," he said. "It was to help establish mental health programs, support them for several years, during which they would presumably become capable of surviving independently; and then Uncle Sam would cut off their allowance and the program would either fly or die of natural causes."

Following through with the problems encountered by the unit in trying to meet its objectives at the same time it was satisfying state and federal government agencies, Dr. Levinson stated: "What we resented was that we could do a fine job of scratching the itch of people we were supposed to serve, and still be in the dog house as far as the feds were concerned. But what irked us most was the very realization that it would have been possible to please the national institute for mental health without pleasing the community.

"What I mean," he said, "is that we could have gotten the federal seal of approval on an unnecessarily expensive, fat and unspiced, uninspiring program that was essentially insensitive and unresponsive to the needs of area residents."

He said that the unit later separated from federal heavy handedness and adopted its own code. Its components were that frugality would be next to Godliness; the unit would stay tuned to the community; staff would place an extremely high premium on teamwork to enhance efficiency and stretch contributions of individual staff members; that the rural location would never be allowed to become an excuse for mediocrity; that emphasis would be on stability, tempered with enough flexibility to accommodate changing service demands and opportunities; and that local funding would be secured for services provided.

"All this corner-cutting, soul-searching and running ourselves ragged seems, quite literally, to have paid off," Dr. Levinson noted. "In fiscal 1975, with our $130,000 grant from the feds as income, the day-night unit showed a net loss of $125,000. For fiscal 1980, with no federal grant, no allowance, we show a slight excess of income over expenses. We are standing on our own awfully tired but very happy feet.

"What's ironic is that, largely as a result of our agonizing difficulties with the feds, we have essentially become one of their more impressive success stores. As a viable, self-supporting mental health program, the day-night unit has developed way ahead of its hundreds of similarly federally-seeded siblings who are still being kept alive by heroic means such as conversion grants, distress grants, extensions and what have you."

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

During the night of Wednesday, September 3rd, one of our Swedish Ivy flower plants was stolen off the tree near the patio in our back yard. We had nursed it all spring and summer until it cascaded down about three feet and we had planned to hang it in the house this fall. It was in a white pot with a green yarn hanger and the theft has been reported to the police. We hope whoever has it will take good care of it, as it is a beautiful plant. However, if it was stolen to be destroyed, we would appreciate it being returned, with no questions asked.

Crookston To Host Mental Health Meet

A public information seminar on personal experiences with receiving mental health services will be given by Project Overcome staff September 18.

Afternoon presentation is directed primarily to service providers and the general public. A minimal charge of $2 will help defer mailing costs, coffee, and cookies. A second late afternoon presentation is directed to consumers of mental health services.

First session, from 1 to 3 p.m., will be conducted at the regional corrections center in Crookston. For information call 281-3940.

Second session, from 4 to 6 p.m., will be conducted at the Northwestern apartments: Eickhof Boulevard and Gretchen Lane, off Barrett street in the northeast section of Crookston). Entrance is free of charge and contributions are welcome. For more information on this session, call 281-3940 or 281-5256 or advance reservations.

Project Overcome is sponsored by the Mental Health Advocates Coalition of Minnesota and funded under a grand from the Minnesota Department of Public Welfare. The staff consists of several young men and women who have been mentally ill, have received treatment and have recovered and who now are sharing their experiences and perceptions with the community. Many were told they would "not be able to live outside an institution" yet are now confident in their recovery and able to define rehabilitation needs from their own experiences. Unlike the TV stereotypes of "psychotic ex-mental patients" they are open, honest and refreshingly articulate.

Primary purpose of the Project Overcome staff is to dispel the myths that surround mental illness and its treatment and to open the community's view of mental illness. In addition, their message provides hope to those who are still struggling with mental illness and as assurance that they to can recover. They communicate valuable information to mental health professsionals regarding the clients prospective and inform clients, families and friends how to use the present mental health system for their benefit.

For further information contact the Northwestern Mental Health Center in Crookston, 281-3940.

A FAMILIAR SIGHT in downtown Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon during "Everybody's Market" was one such as this as area shoppers gathered to browse or purchase items on display throughout the downtown area.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Leonard Reed, a former federal employee, recently wrote an article on federal pay which appeared in The Washington Monthly, and considering his background, his conclusion was not just surprising, but downright shocking. He said: "By any fair comparison, the bulk of civil servants are far better compensated than the general public for whom they work. If comparability is to be achieved, it will require not an upward but a downward revision of government compensation. That's not likely to happen as long as the federal pay machine is designed and operated by the payees."

Cutting bureaucrats' salaries is an untouchable subject in Washington. In fact, federal employees' representatives most often complain that government salaries have not been kept comparable to those in private industry. For example, when President Carter proposed to limit the federal pay raise in 1979, the president of one federal union said: "This must stop before abject poverty becomes the mark of the average employee." The President's proposed 9.1 per cent increase for next year has been similarly denounced.

Reed dismisses these complaints out of hand, noting that the method presently used to determine comparability does not take into account some very significant factors: The in-grade increases that most federal workers receive, the bonuses that executives will get, and some whopping built-in benefits, such as greater job security than in the private sector and a much more generous pension system. And, he presents as further evidence the July, 1979 "Survey of Current Business," which shows that in 1978, federal employees earned an average of $16,968 compared with an all-industry composite average of $13,275.

Federal officials counter that this survey does not reflect an accurate comparison. Indeed, they contend a straight, unadjusted comparison is impossible because the federal workforce has a much higher component of professional and administrative personnel than its private counterpart.

But Reed rebuts this argument as well, remarking: ". . . for those who were not born earlier than yesterday, the federal officials' explanation is a cop-out. Since 1962, the great increase in federal programming has not been in research and development, where professionals dominate, but in routine payment social programs which require hives of clerical worker bees. Yet, during that same period, the superiority of federal pay average over the all-industry average steadily increased from 27 per cent in 1962 to 44 per cent in 1978."

The federal government, of course, has developed its own survey to determine comparability, and through this mechanism it invariably finds its own workers are underpaid. But Reed reminds the reader that the General Accounting Office, the official congressional oversight agency, has already investigated this survey and given it negative marks. The GAO concluded that the jobs federal officials selected "contained disproportionate numbers which were highly paid in the private sector, which resulted in an upward bias of the average work rates."

Finally, Reed observes that the notion that government pay is low and needs to be boosted if we are to attract high quality people is periodically given new support by presidential pay commissions. But he warns: "Typically, these commissions consist of prominent citizens (Nelson Rockefeller headed the last one) who appear to the public to be neutral and authoritative figures. They are, in fact, busy people, dependent on the career civil servants who do the commissions' real work and greatly influence the conclusions. Inevitably, the commissions recommend sharply increased pay, particularly for the elite class of civil servants who help shape the recommendations."

Every once in a while you meet an individual in Washington who has the integrity and courage to do the right thing regardless of personal interests. Leonard Reed is just such a person. I wanted you to know about him, and what he said, because most people in this town will pretend he doesn't even exist.

I would like to thank Al's Repair, Inc. for the (Wooden Indian) wood carving I won at their recent open house.

Views On® Dental Health

By Donald R. Goodrich, D.D.S.

FLUORIDE TOOTHPASTE

If you watch television, you're probably seen the commercials selling fluoride toothpaste ("Mommy, Mommy, my group had fewer cavities!"). The best part about these commercials is that, hopefully, they may induce children to brush their teeth. It's the brushing, flossing and rinsing after eating that is the most effective preventer of tooth decay and gum disease. Toothpaste can help, but it's only a part of effective oral hygiene.

The mere presence of fluoride in a toothpaste does not give it therapeutic qualities. There are, however, several brands of toothpaste on the market which contain fluoride in an effective combination with other ingredients. They definitely possess therapeutic value, and have been recommended by the American Dental Association's Council on Dental Therapeutics.

It should be emphasized, so there is no misunderstanding, that fluoride toothpastes are not a substitute for the combination of fluoridation of community drinking water and professional fluoride treatment, which have been shown to reduce dental decay by as much as 65 per cent.

Both instructors are assistant professors of religion at Concordia college. Dr. Shannon Jung is a Presbyterian minister and Dr. Patricia Jung is a Roman Catholic layperson. They both received their PhD degrees from Vanderbilt university, Nashville, Tenn.

A lay academy for adults entitled "Christian Ethics In Today's World" is being scheduled for September 25, October 9, 23 and 30.

This course will begin with the question of how to use the Bible and apply its teachings to everyday life. Specific situations and problems will then be discussed and examined in light of this approach. Participants will help determine what particular situations will be discussed.

Classes will begin with potluck supper from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m. and instruction will follow from 6:15 to 7:45 p.m. The first two sessions will be held at Redeemer Lutheran church, 1300 E. Nora street, and the second two sessions will be at Zion Lutheran, 50 Main av. N. Babysitting will be provided. Cost for participants will be $5 for all sessions.

Funding for this event has been made available from the division of college and university services of the American Lutheran church and from Lutheran Brotherhood insurance.

Members of all denominations are welcomed and encouraged to attend.

Course on "Ethics: Lutheran, Reformed and Roman Catholic" will begin at St. Bernard's church at 9:45 a.m. on Sept. 25, for parish clergy, members of religious orders and others. This course intends to foster an understanding of three major Christian options in theological ethics by moving from the major figures in those traditions to contemporary spokesmen of those traditions.

It involves 20 class hours and is offered through the graduate theological education program of CHARIS, an ecumenical center for church and community with offices at Concordia college, Moorhead. Participants may take it as a two-credit course or may audit. Accreditation is arranged through cooperating seminaries in Minnesota and Iowa. Cost of the course is $40.

A planning committee consisting of Rev. James Bernauer of St. Bernard's church and Rev. Richard Larson of Zion Lutheran church, both of Thief River Falls, and Rev. Robert Amundson of United Lutheran church at Gatzke, have planned both courses in conjunction with Dr. James B. Hofrenning, CHARIS director. Hearing Aids May Not Need Silver Cells

If you wear a hearing aid, chances are you don't need to power it with expensive silver cell batteries, according to Kris Sanda, director of the Minnesota office of consumer services (OCS).

Sanda said a recent OCS survey of 14 battery manufacturers, prompted by numerous complaints about the high price of silver cell batteries, resulted in the conclusion that 95 to 99 per cent of persons using hearing aids probably don't need silver cell batteries.

Results of the hearing aid battery survey showed that most battery manufacturers estimate that only about one per cent of all hearing aids require silver cell batteries.

"We found that because the price of silver dramatically shot up a while back, the price of silver batteries did too," Sanda said.

"But we also found that the industry was quick to respond with the substitutes for silver such as mercury and zinc-air system, reportedly with no loss in quality and at greatly reduced prices," Sanda added.

Sanda said mercury and zinc-air batteries are available in great quantities, but that many hearing impaired persons may think their hearing aids require silver cell batteries.

Based on the survey results, Sanda said she would encourage hearing aid users to switch from silver cell batteries to a mercury or zinc-air system where possible. She also encouraged dealers to convert as many customers as possible from silver to mercury of zinc-air batteries.

Sanda said battery manufacturers have indicated that mercury batteries cost about $5 a six-pack, zinc-air batteries $3.30 to $5 for a package of three and silver cell cell batteries $17 per six pack. Zinc-air battery manufacturers claim their batteries will last twice as long as comparable silver or mercury batteries.

If you have a question about your hearing aid, or any other consumer oriented problems, you may discuss it with a Circuit rider from OCS in Thief River Falls on September 18. Zora Radosevich will be at the Vocational Rehabilitation center, Labree Ave. S. & Zeh St., from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. that day and she'll be glad to hear questions, complaints or problems. She can be reached at 681-7598.

Ask Proposals For HUD Block Grant Funding

Local area people who have suggestions for needed projects benefitting the low and moderate income population are invited to participate in a meeting scheduled for tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

The city of Thief River Falls is expecting to prepare a preapplication for funds from the federal department of housing and urban development. The funding would be provided through the small cities community development block grant program, and selection of local projects and activities will be made through public meetings.

Other meetings are expected to be held prior to November 15, at which time the preapplication will be submitted to the federal agency.

Eligible for consideration would be proposals involving housing, economic development, correction of deficiencies in public facilities which would improve health and safety, and similar proposals.

In previous years the local agency has been involved in acquisition of the site for Riverview Terrace apartments (senior citizen highrise), acquisition and clearing of about 10 building sites which have been sold for building lots to people eligible for FmHA loans, and sewer and water projects.

People with questions about the program may contact the city planning office in the city auditorium at 681-6780.

Cerebral Palsy Group Expands Its Program

United Cerebral Palsy of Minnesota has expanded its information, referral and follow-along program in Minnesota. The IRF program informs people about the condition called cerebral palsy and what programs and services are available to serve individuals with CP.

Through the IRF program, UCP will become more aware of the gaps in service and the unmet needs in various communities, as well as identifying people with cerebral palsy in relation to their geographic area, age and sex.

UCP is a voluntary health agency with regional offices in Duluth, St. Cloud, Austin, Minneapolis and St. Paul. In addition to the information, referral and follow-along program, UCP of Minnesota does extensive work in public information and public education and contributes to the support of state legislative activities and national research projects.

Common Sense Tips

DRYERS

Automatic clothes dryers make any rainy or snowy day a good laundry day. Along with convenience, the homemaker can also gain maximum energy efficiency from her dryer by following a few simple procedures. Here are some suggestions from Whirlpool home economists to help you trim your dryer's energy use.

- • Dry full loads—but do not overload your dryer. Clothes that can tumble freely will dry faster and be more wrinkle-free.
- • Dry consecutive loads. This cuts down on the energy consumption required to heat up the dryer.
- • Avoid overdrying—remove clothes as soon as the dryer turns off. Make use of your automatic drying cycle—it helps avoid overdrying and helps save energy.
- • Keep the lint screen clean. Build-up of lint lengthens drying time and uses more energy. The lint screen should be cleaned after each load. Be sure to replace the lint screen after each cleaning.

Grand Rapids Is Next For Prowlers

Thief River Falls will be facing probably its most formidable task of the 1980 high school football season Friday when the Prowlers travel to Grand Rapids for a 7:30 p.m. game against the highly-regarded Indians.

Grand Rapids received instant state-wide recognition when the Indians shut out Duluth Denfeld 21-0 in the 1980 season opener that matched preseason co-favorites in the tough Class AA Northern Lakes Conference. A season-opening defeat at the hands of Denfeld was the only blemish on Grand Rapids' 1979 season record.

The Indians followed their victory over Denfeld with a 26-8 triumph over Duluth East last Friday.

Jim Malwitz, who may be one of the state's top hockey players this winter, proved he's no slouch on the football field, either, when he rushed for 265 yards in the opener on 21 carries. He added 118 yards on 14 tries against East, including a 62-yard touchdown run two plays into the second half that pushed the Indians' lead to 26-0. Only East score came on a fumble return for a touchdown late in the game.

The Grand Rapids defense, which allowed East just 69 yards rushing and only 32 more in the air, features Malwitz, quarterback Tony Kellin and Bruce LaRouque in the defensive backfield. LaRouque came up with three interceptions and narrowly missed a fourth against Denfeld, while Kellin picked off two passes by East. Malwitz is the monsterback.

They have a good, solid football team," warned Thief River Falls coach John Schmitz, "but the big thing we'll have to do is stop Malwitz. "He's a good one."

Schmitz was asked where does Malwitz pick up his yardage, inside or outside? "Anywhere he wants," was the answer.

Grand Rapids will be heavily favored Friday, but perhaps the Prowlers can sneak up on the Indians, who are already playing up a September 26 battle with Hibbing that many feel will decide the 1980 Northern Lakes Conference title. Thief River Falls, as a Class A nonconference opponent, might have a chance to catch the Indians looking ahead.

Grand Rapids was rated No. 6 in the first Class AA Associated Press power poll of the season last week, trailing only No. 1 Richfield; No. 2 Columbia Heights; No. 3 St. Thomas Academy; No. 4 Stillwater; and No. 5 Hill-Murray.

Thief River Falls has never met Grand Rapids on the gridiron. The Indians appear on the 1980 Thief River Falls schedule in place of Crosby-Ironton after the Rangers decided not to renew a two-year home-and-home contract with the Prowlers.

Bemidji and Crookston of the Northwest Athletic Conference were ranked No. 8 and No. 9, respectively, in the AP Class A poll last week. Brooklyn Center was the No. 1 ranked Class A football team in the state after the first week of games.

UND Hockey Opener Nears

Thief River Falls hockey fans are already eyeing the University of North Dakota 1980-81 WCHA schedule to see when the Sioux will be hosting the University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin.

The Gophers, featuring Neal and Aaron Broten, Butsy Erickson and Mark Huglen of Roseau, will be in Grand Forks Friday and Saturday, Oct. 24-25, for season-opening 7:30 p.m. WCHA games. North Dakota kicks off its nonconference schedule a week earlier by hosting Northern Michigan Oct. 17-18 in a rematch of last year's NCAA finals.

Wisconsin, with Thief River Falls' Scott Sabo trying to land a spot in the Badgers' line-up as a freshman, will wait until Friday and Saturday, Feb. 6-7, to visit Grand Forks. Those two games will have 8:30 p.m. starting times.

The 1981 NCAA finals will be played March 26-28 at Duluth.

Jets Offer Hockey Package

Winnipeg Jets public relations department is offering a weekend National Hockey League package for Thief River Falls area hockey fans who would like to see former Warroad high school and U.S. Olympic hockey star David Christian in action with the Jets.

For $63 in Canadian currency (approximately $55 in American money) per person, a fan will receive tickets to watch the Jets play Edmonton Friday, Nov. 7, and Toronto Sunday, Nov. 9; round-trip transportation by Grey Goose Bus Lines from Thief River Falls to Winnipeg; and two nights at the Viscount Gort Motor Hotel in Winnipeg. The bus will leave Thief River Falls at 3 p.m. for Friday's 8 o'clock game and return after Sunday's 7:30 p.m. contest.

There is an October 3 reservation deadline for the trip, which will accommodate 47 people. For reservations or additional information contact T. G. Sporting Goods, telephone 682-5421.

Miscellaneous

+ Rube Bjorkman, the former Roseau high school star and hockey coach at the University of North Dakota from 1968-69 through the 1977-78 season, has been named head hockey coach at Warroad high school, it was reported in today's Warroad Pioneer. Bjorkman succeeds Jerry Pelky as the Warriors' coach. Blane Comstock will return as an assistant coach under Bjorkman.

+ Lincoln high school and Bemidji State University graduate Mark Storhaug is the new head coach of the Bemidji high school girls swimming team. A standout swimmer for the Prowlers and Beavers, Storhaug will have his Lumberjills swimming against the Prowlers Tuesday, Sept. 16, in Bemidji.

+ Staples, routed 37-0 by Thief River Falls last fall, defeated Pelican Rapids 26-6 to open its 1980 football season. "Staples is big and a much-improved ball team over last year," reported Pelican Rapids coach Al Siegle. The Cardinals will be in Thief River Falls Friday, Sept. 19.

NWAC, Mid-State Favorites Play Friday At Park Rapids

Another week of nonconference high school football assignments await the five members of the Northwest Athletic Conference Friday night and four of them will be on the road as Thief River Falls tackles Grand Rapids, Bemidji visits Detroit Lakes, East Grand Forks travels to Staples and Crookston goes to Park Rapids. Fergus Falls, meanwhile, will be at home against Litchfield.

After a perfect 5-0 week to start the 1980 season, NWAC teams went 3-2 last Friday at Thief River Falls out-scored Detroit Lakes 32-21, East Grand Forks whipped Grand Forks Red River 27-6 and Crookston shut out Grand Forks Central 14-0. Bemidji was a 14-0 loser to Little Falls and Fergus Falls fell to Alexandria 10-0.

Schedule
Fri., Sept. 12 — Thief River Falls at Grand Rapids; Bemidji at Detroit Lakes; East Grand Forks at Staples; Crookston at Park Rapids; Litchfield at Fergus Falls.

The Crookston-Park Rapids match-up Friday will be featuring the preseason favorites in the Northwest and Mid-State Conferences. The Pirates beat the Panthers 24-12 in Class A stae playoff competition last November.

The East Grand Forks vs. Staples and Bemidji vs. Detroit Lakes games also feature the Northwest vs. Mid-State match-ups.

East Grand Forks built a 27-0 lead and surrendered only a final minute touchdown in beating Grand Forks Red River 27-6. Jeff Strandell threw touchdown passes of 23 and 43 yards to Paul Bothun and Robbie Schneider in the Green Wave's second win of the season. Red River dropped to 0-2.

Bemidji mustered just 88 yards rushing and fell to Little Falls 14-0 for a 1-1 season record for both teams. Joel Kuelbeck, a 180-pound transfer student from Wisconsin scored both Little Falls touchdowns and soccer-style kicker Joe DaMiano, a transfer student from Maryland, kicked both conversion points.

Quarterback Scott Wiebolt scored one touchdown, passed for another, rushed for a team-leading 95 yards and intercepted two passes while playing safety as Thief River Falls built a 32-7 lead en route to its 32-21 triumph over winless Detroit Lakes.

Steve Johnson rushed for 141 yards and scored two touchdowns, including a 43-yard scoring strike on the second play of the game, to lead Crookston past Grand Forks Central 14-0 in a Saturday night affair. The Pirates held a 300-105 advantage in the rushing department.

Fergus Falls was unable to move the ball against a strong Alexandria defense in losing 10-0. The Otters got just 137 yards worth of offense for the night.

+ Two weeks into the 1980 season Steve Johnson of Crookston leads the NWAC nonconference statistics with 32 points and 333 yards rushing — averaging 10.1 yards every time he carries the ball. Scott Wiebolt of Thief River Falls ranks second in the rushing department with an even 200 yards and an 11.8-yard average.

+ Dan Snustad of Fergus Falls is 11-for-24 for a league-leading 166 yards passing. Jeff Strandell of East Grand Forks is 6-for-17 for 152 yards.

+ Brian Balken of Fergus Falls has caught five passes for 99 yards, with Troy Hendricks of Bemidji catching five for 44 yards.

+ Dean Dokkin of Thief River Falls has a league-leading 36.3-yard punting average.

+ In the return department, Mike Williams of East Grand Forks is averaging an NWAC-high 21.8 yards on four punt returns and Brent Weiss of Crookston is averaging 27.0 yards on two kickoff returns.

Oklee Plays Gonvick Friday

Oklee is 2-0 and Gonvick is 0-2 and they're at the opposite ends of the North Tri County Conference football standings. But the Bobcats-Bulldogs match-up will still highlight Friday's area nine-man high school football schedule.

A 24-6 victory over Clearbrook last week enabled Oklee to keep pace with McIntosh-Winger and Erskine atop the North Tri County Conference standings. Meanwhile, Gonvick, expected to be in the thick of the pennant race, is struggling through a rugged early season schedule that saw the Bulldogs lose to Middle River 18-0 Friday, a week after they opened with a 26-6 loss to McIntosh-Winger.

Elsewhere Friday, Goodridge visits Middle River, Grygla will be at Clearbrook, Plummer drives to McIntosh-Winger and Erskine goes to Mentor.

Rest of last week's scores found Erskine beating Grygla 22-14, McIntosh-Winger blanked Goodridge 49-0 and Mentor handled Plummer 38-12.

Marshall County Central, after opening its Top of State Conference schedule with a 28-0 victory over Greenbush, will entertain Stephen Friday in its 1980 home opener. The Nordics are 1-1 overall.

Greenbush will be at Argyle and Hallock visits Karlstad in other Top of State nine-man games Friday. In addition to the Nordics' victory at Greenbush last week, Hallock knocked off Stephen 33-6 and Argyle drilled Tri County high school of Karlstad 48-0.

TRF Golfers Are Listed On 1980 BSU Team

Wade Hoppe and Bob Fitzgerald, a pair of 1980 Lincoln high school graduates, are listed among the top freshmen on the Bemidji State University fall golf team roster, according to Al Nohner, BSU sports information director.

Bemidji State coach Dave Lehmann has a mixed roster to consider when selecting his varsity unit. Five veterans are listed among the 24 hopefuls still competing for starting berths.

"There are a lot of new faces on the course this fall," Lehmann mentioned. "We probably won't settle on our starting group for some time. Right now there is a lot more intra-squad competition, which hopefully means we'll have more depth this fall."

Returning veterans hoping to make the team are one-time Thief River Falls golfer Tom Zieman, International Falls; Eric Niskanen, Bemidji; Mike Larson, Hoyt Lakes; Mark Metanich, Staples; and Jeff Solstein, Fosston.

Top newcomers include Hoppe and Fitzgerald; Brian Olson, Bemidji; Marty Berens, Shakopee; Steve Hanson, Cambridge; Mike King, St. Paul; and Dan Mozzetti, Silver Bay.

TRF Faces Grand Rapids Challenge Friday Night

John Schmitz is hoping history repeats itself. His Lincoln high school football team, off to its best start since 1972, faces its toughest assignment of the 1980 season Friday when the Prowlers travel to Grand Rapids for a 7:30 p.m. game against the Indians, the No. 6 rated Class AA football team in Minnesota.

"Last time we had a challenge like this, St. Cloud Apollo was No. 1 in the state," noted Schmitz, remembering a 1972 confrontation here that saw the Prowlers out-duel the Eagles 12-6 in what many rank as one of the finest high school football games ever played in Thief River Falls. Schmitz was serving as an assistant coach then, but ironically recalls, "I never saw the game; I was scouting."

It so happens that the last time Thief River Falls began a football season with back-to-back wins was that 1972 campaign when the Prowlers shut out Grand Forks Red River 19-0 and blanked Detroit Lakes 18-0 before knocking off Apollo. The Prowlers finished 8-1 that year, losing the season finale at Crookston 36-20 to snap a 19-game winning streak that covered portions of three seasons.

The comparisons are neat, but even the most devout Thief River Falls fans must acknowledge the fact that the Prowlers will be the underdog Friday against a Grand Rapids team that has crushed Northern Lakes Conference opponents Duluth Denfeld 21-0 and Duluth East 26-8.

'They've been very impressive said Schmitz of Grand Rapids. "Let's face it, they are the favorite. But we feel that anytime we go into a ball game the opportunity is there for us to win. We'll obviously have to play a good ball game to beat them, but we honestly believe we have some good football ability."

In beating Grand Forks Red River 12-7 and Detroit Lakes 32-21, Thief River Falls has shown its option offense as its best weapon. The Prowlers ran it to perfection in the third quarter last week at Detroit Lakes when they turned a 7-6 halftime deficit into a 32-7 bulge by scoring on four straight offensive possessions.

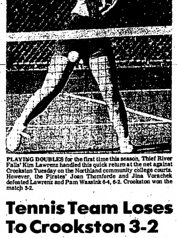
"We definitely hope to get our option working Friday night," explained Schmitz. "It worked real well at Detroit Lakes. I don't know if we could have run it any better."

Quarterback Scott Wiebolt has been drawing rave reviews in operating the option offense, with halfbacks Tom Ose and Dan Odegaard showing flashes of great play, too. But the key to the thing, said Schmitz, is at fullback where starter Scott Kezar and his back-up, Jim Dillon, combined for 113 yards against the Lakers.

"We have to establish an inside game so they can't string out our option," pointed out Schmitz. "As long as we can run inside they have to give us room outside. And if we can get just a little daylight inside, we have a couple of fullbacks who can squirt through for some yardage."

Defensively the Prowlers will have to contend with the likes of halfback Jim Malwitz, fullback Greg Chandler and quarterback Tony Kellin. Malwitz has rushed for 383 yards in two games. Kellin is a good passer who likes to throw to Ron Renner, who will represent the third big wide receiver the Prowlers will have to defend against in three weeks. In the opener, Red River's Tim Gabrielson caught three passes for 44 yards in a rain-drenched field here. Last week Detroit Lakes' Todd Jorgenson caught eight passes for 109 yards. The Prowlers have given up 232 yards passing in two games.

It'll be a challenge Friday, but Schmitz is looking forward to it. And besides, he missed the last one.



PLAYING DOUBLES for the first time this season, Thief River Falls' Kim Lawrenz handled this quick return at the net against Crookston Tuesday on the Northland community college courts. However, the Pirates' Joan Thomforde and Jina Vorachek defeated Lawrenz and Pam Wassink 6-4, 6-2. Crookston won the match 3-2.

Tennis Team Loses To Crookston 3-2

A sweep in doubles enabled Crookston to defeat Thief River Falls 3-2 Tuesday in a girls high school tennis match played on the Thief River Falls courts. It was the Prowlers' home opener after five straight road trips.

Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson elected to do some line-up switching to give the Prowlers a different look at the game. The Prowlers' only winners yesterday were Nancy Swanson and Michelle Olson at No. 2 and No. 3 singles. They are normally Thief River Falls' top doubles team. Swanson defeated Sue Knudsvig 7-5, 6-4 and Olson handled Kari Huseby 6-4, 6-1.

The loss dropped Thief River Falls' dual meet season record to 3-2. The Prowlers will be at Bemidji Thursday for a 3:30 p.m. match.

LHS Volleyball Team Handles Fisher By 2-0

An 18-6, 18-10 victory over Fisher Tuesday afternoon lifted the Lincoln high school volleyball record to 2-2 for the year, but coach Sharon Stauss was far from satisfied with the Prowlers' performance.

"I wasn't pleased offensively," mentioned Stauss. "We had some nice hits, but we didn't set up very many nice plays."

It was the 1980 home opener for the Prowlers. "I don't know what's wrong with our team, but at home we seem to play boring games," sighed Stauss.

Thief River Falls will be on the road Thursday when the Prowlers travel to Fosston for a 7:30 p.m. match.

Fisher snapped the Lincoln junior varsity unbeaten status at three matches Tuesday by beating the hosts 18-13, 18-12.

Youth Firearms Safety Course Starts Monday

Youth firearms safety class will begin Monday at 7 p.m. in the Franklin middle school cafeteria. The program, directed by Irving Swanson, will feature five two-hour sessions, followed by a field trip to the Pennington County Sportsmen's Club Saturday, Sept. 10.

Any youth who will be 12-years-old before January 1, 1981 is eligible to take part in the program. All youths between the ages of 12-15 must have a Minnesota firearms safety certificate in their possession when hunting or before purchasing a big game license.

Students can register for the program Monday night when they'll be given a slide presentation on game laws by an area conservation officer.

Other sessions are planned Tuesday, Sept. 16, when Howard Hagen and James Thune will discuss black powder hunting, Dana Klos will talk about bow hunting and Hardy Hodge will give a test preview; Thursday, Sept. 18, when Swanson and Harvey Tauer will present different types of firearms, shooting positions and carries, and Duane Holland will describe outdoor survival and first aid; Tuesday, Sept. 23, when Hodge will talk about hunter responsibility and ethics and Holland will discuss field care of game; and Thursday, Sept. 25, when the safety certificate test will be given.

In addition to the guest speakers, each session will include a training film and another film dealing with firearms, hunting, etc.

For additional information contact Swanson by calling 681-1295 or 681-6161.

Northland Tackles Crookston In Football Opener Saturday

Things start right where they left off last year for the Northland community college and University of Minnesota-Crookston football teams Saturday when the two area rivals meet in a 1:30 p.m. Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division game on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

The 1980 season opener for both teams will be a rematch of last year's 1979 finale when the Northmen surprised the Trojans 27-7. That was Northland's first-ever football victory over Crookston, snapping a three-year losing streak in which the Trojans out-scored the Northmen 98-0.

"We're not talking revenge," reported Crookston coach Jim Sims, the former Lincoln high school coach. "Last year we were beaten by a better football team at that stage of the season. But this is a new year. We're just going to forget about last year and concentrate on this year."

While Sims begins his fifth year as Crookston coach, John Helley will be making his Northland debut. He succeeded Irv Smith, who left at the end of the 1979 season in which the Northmen finished 3-6 — their best record ever after going 2-6 in 1979, 0-8 in 1977 and 2-6 again in 1978.

Neither coach is really sure what he's got yet. Helley is a little short on numbers and his Northmen lack experience on offense. Sims is optimistic, but still has reservations after watching his injury-riddled 1979 ball club finish 5-4.

"Injuries really hurt us last year," explained Sims. "But because of those injuries, we've got a number of people back this year that we feel will give us the strength to push for the title."

Inexperience is not a problem on Crookston's offense where quarterback Dewey King (Moorhead) and runningbacks Dave Parks (Hoffman) and Mike Sandt (Lake Crystal) were all starters at one time or another last fall. Sandt, a 5-10, 175-pounder, was the Trojans' MVP in 1979 when he earned all-conference honors by rushing for 825 yards and scoring 10 touchdowns.

King, who shared the quarterback duties with now-departed Frank Dostal, was 16-for-61 for 282 yards in 1979. Parks started the first three games a year ago before suffering a broken collarbone.

"We're not going to fool anybody; we're coming with the wishbone," acknowledged Sims, who installed the still-used option attack during his 10 years with the Prowlers.

Headlining the Trojans' defense will be nose guard Bill Molitor, a 5-8, 200-pounder from Cold Spring who earned all-conference and all-region 13 honors as a freshman.

Defense appears to be Northland's strong suit. They have nine sophomores listed as probable starters on defense, including ends Duane Kjono (Mahnomen) and Scott Chapman (Baudette), tackle Kelly Turgeon (Warren), nose guard Bob Benson (Twin Valley), linebacker Todd Tangen (Fosston) and defensive backs Jim McCue (Deer Park, N.Y.), Paul Wilcox (Miami, Fla.) and Blair Spikes (Inkster, Mich.).

Others who could be in the defensive line-up include tackle Mike Busse (Mahnomen), linebackers Paul Klecker (McIntosh) and Russell Boyer (Badger) and defensive back Randy Harrison (Rosemount).

The offense is all new. Across the front line probable starters will be tight end Dave Gorski (Lancaster), tackles Dan Cullen (Thief River Falls) and Brian Hourigan (Rutherford, N.J.), guards Jeff Canivez (Baudette) and Dave Krajsa (Mahnomen), center Jeff Schmitz (Thief River Falls) and wide receiver Ken Crouch (Inkster).

There's a possibility, said Helley, that Northland will use a two-platoon offensive backfield, "depending on how things are going."

In the slot-I, Jeff Steuck, a Fargo Oak Grove product who transferred from Moorhead State, will quarterback the Northmen. Lyndell Knight (Inkster) would then be the slotback, Mark Stock (Mahnomen) would be the fullback and Coby Bursile (McIntosh), an all-state nine-man selection in high school, would be the tailback. In the wishbone, Jeff Westberg (Warren) will be the likely quarterback, with Rick Olson, an Air Force veteran from Karlstad lining up at fullback, Mike Punton (Baudette) at halfback and Mark Erby (New York, N.Y.) at tailback.

Northland also has an offensive threat in sophomore Jeff Gobell of Thief River Falls, a consistently strong field goal kicker from 30-yards and in.

"We're doing a lot of evaluating," pointed out Helley who was hesitant about naming a starting line-up. "But I think we'll be ready. With a smaller squad it's much more manageable. Things have been going much smoother than last year."

New Shotgun Product Ruled Illegal By FWS

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service warned hunters that in its opinion new products that allow hunters to adjust the shell capacity of tube-fed shotguns in the field are illegal for use in taking migratory game birds.

Clark R. Bavin, chief of the service's division of law enforcement, announced that migratory bird hunters found using adjustable plugs for tube-fed shotguns may be subject to prosecution. In the opinion of the service, use of the plugs is a violation of 50 CFR 20.21 (b), which makes it illegal to hunt migratory birds "with a shotgun of any description capable of holding more than three shells, unless it is plugged with a one-piece filler, incapable of removal without disassembling the gun, so its total capacity does not exceed three shells."

Federal regulations allow only shotguns with a capacity of three or fewer shells to be used in hunting migratory birds. The purpose of this regulation is to reduce potential overbagging and crippling losses.

"The regulation ensures that it is difficult and time consuming in the field to covert a shotgun from more than a three-shell capacity to a three-shell capacity and vice versa," Bavin said. "In the opinion of the service, the new products violate both the terms and the purpose of this regulation in that they are two-piece devices and allow instantaneous conversion from five to three shells without disassembling the gun." Notice of the service's opinion on these devices has been sent to state wildlife law enforcement authorities.

Survival Tips Are Offered For Hikers

Leaving civilization to venture into the wilderness can be easy for outdoor enthusiasts, but rejoining it can prove more difficult. The Minnesota safety council offers some survival techniques.

The best way to combat pitfalls when hiking in the wilderness is to be well prepared in advance. Research the area you plan to visit — know about poisonous plants, snakes, wild animals, weather and natural hazards along the way. Obtain maps so you can plot a course before you set out, and register your hiking plans with appropriate authorities. Notify family and friends of where you are going, where you can be contacted and when you expect to return.

Condition is part of preparation. If you hike in high altitudes, spend at least a day acclimating yourself to the oxygen-thin air. Remember that a steady, even pace is less tiring and that occasional rest periods are wise.

Equip yourself for the type and length of trip you've planned. Footwear is the most important piece of equipment. Hiking boots are best, the kind that are ankle-high, water reppent, well-cushioned and have soles that offer traction. For a one-day hike, good shoes, a rain jacket, gloves and a lunch are essential. No matter how long you hike, pack only essential items.

Hypothermia can be avoided by keeping dry, staying out of the wind and wearing layers of lightweight clothing for insulation. Get plenty of rest and eat high-energy foods to fight fatigue.

If lost, don't panic. Stay where you are and improvise a shelter. Conserve your energy and wait for a search party. Try to devise a distress signal, remembering that visibility is the key to searchers finding you. Also remember that the international distress signal for help is three of anything — three fires, three shots from a firearm, three blasts from a whistle.

If you have to "walk out", be physically and mentally prepared by marking your trail and letting someone in your group know where you plan to go.

Trails developed with snowmobile funds also directly benefit other outdoor recreationists, including hikers, horseback riding, bicycling and other trail-based activities.

In addition to their individual wins, Hallstrom and McGann were both members of the Prowlers' 400-yard freestyle relay team, along with Kathy Dillon and Sarah Green, that swam a 4:13.23 to close out the meet that was moved up from 4 to 5 p.m. because of the primary election.

A CLOSE RACE developed in the 200-yard individual medley during Tuesday's Thief River Falls vs. Detroit Lakes high school swimming meet as the Prowlers' Joan Glauque (top), the Lakers' Carrie Howe (bottom) and the Prowlers' Andria Lia (not pictured) neared the finish of the event that calls for swimmers to use the backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and freestyle. Howe was clocked in 2:47.18, Glauque 2:47.23 and Lia 2:48.18, although Glauque was later disqualified. The Prowlers opened their 1980 season with a 124-47 victory over the Lakers.

N.D. Garrison Diversion Will Affect Fish, Wildlife Numbers

A joint study group to develop approaches for resolving fish and wildlife mitigation problems associated with the Garrison Diversion Project is being established by the state of North Dakota and the Department of the Interior. The group will also review the long-range issue of wildlife habitat protection.

Formation of the joint study, group was announced following consultations between North Dakota governor Arthur A. Link; assistant Secretary of the Interior for Fish and Wildlife and Parks Robert L. Herbst, and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service director Lynn A. Greenwalt.

Garrison Project, a major water diversion development, would provide water for irrigation, municipalities and industry, as well as recreation and flood control, and would cause losses in fish and wildlife habitat. Disagreements between the state and the Interior Department have for several years stymied the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's North Dakota acquisition program, aimed at preserving "pothole" wetlands so as to maintain wild waterfowl habitat. The state has blocked the program, contending any federal acquisitions must be credited to the Garrison mitigation program; Interior has insisted the acquisition of land for mitigation and the service's long-standing habitat preservation programs are separate and distinct.

First task for the study group is to explore the possibilities and means of resolving continuing problems of compensating for fish and wildlife habitat losses attributable to the project. A report on this issue is to be submitted October 1 to Link and Herbst.

The group's second task is to develop a general plan for habitat preservation, based on an integrated effort by federal and state agencies. The overall objective is to maintain and enhance wildlife productivity to the greatest degree possible, using the purchase of fee and easement interests in lands as one of the tools to that end. A progress report is due October 31, with the final report and recommendations due December 31.

Study group will be co-led by a representative of the Secretary of the Interior and the national resources coordinator of the North Dakota governor's office. Staff will be provided jointly by the Fish and Wildlife Service and the state.

First so-called "practical" snowmobile machines appeared in the 1920's. But some were little more than Model T. Fords with metal tracks surrounding the rear wheels and big skis replacing the front wheels. The awkward, heavy machines were prone to overheating.

Mille Lacs Has Large Number Of Walleyes

An eight-year study by the Department of Natural Resources of the status of Mille Lacs lake's walleye population shows that there is an abundance of catchable size fish for anglers in spite of slow fishing last winter and early this season.

There was a good hatch of walleyes in the lake in 1976, 1977 and 1979, according to Dick Hassinger, regional fisheries supervisor, and it appears that 1980 is also a good year. The 1976 match should enter the fishery this year.

Each year, fisheries crews from the department's Aitkin headquarters have searched the shoreline for eggs and newly hatched fish, pulled trawls through the lake in search for juvenile walleyes, and set gill nets for adult fish.

Studies also show that northern pike are present in good numbers and that perch, a favorite forage fish for walleyes, have been very abundant the past few years.

Fisheries specialists say large hatches of forage fish can depress fishing success in any given year, even though adult walleyes are present, since the fish being sought by anglers are well fed and frequently refuse to bite.

Although heavy fishing pressure can reduce the average size of walleyes caught, such pressure does not remove so many adult fish that reproduction is affected.

In addition, if there are fewer very large fish in the lake, the lake will support a greater population of smaller fish.

DNR fisheries managers have often found that when there is a large hatch of fish in a given year, anglers will catch them in great numbers when the fish reach the minimum size to be caught — giving the false impression that there are no longer a great number of very large fish left in the lake.

Department creel checks by fisheries research crews show that during an average year on Mille Lacs, nearly 400,000 anglers spend more than three million man-hours on the lake and catch nearly one-half million pounds of walleyes.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Johnnie Ruud who passed away Sept. 11, 1972:

The golden gates stood opened wide on that unhappy day
With farewell goodbyes left unspoken
You suddenly slipped away.
Though absent, you are always near.
Still loved, still missed, still very dear.
A little prayer keeps us in touch
With the husband, father and grandfather we miss so much.

Sadly missed by wife Vivian, children Jean, Darlene and Russ and their families. 1t71p

Card of Thanks

I want to thank Dr. Padilla, Dr. Martin and the nurses at Northwestern hospital for the wonderful care I had while there.

Also, thank you to Pastors Richard Larson, Jim Mattson and Gene Broughton for their visits and prayers. Thank you to all friends and relatives for their visits, cards, flowers and gifts. May God richly bless you all.

Joyce Sand 1t71p

Think Safety...
...Think Christianity

We can't miss them — these signs along the intersections of our streets. They protect our school children from physical harm. We see the sign . . . and slow down.

Most of us are deeply concerned about the safety of our youngsters . . . and these signs can be a reminder of a further obligation our society has to its youth. There are dangers in life for which only religious training and faith can prepare us.

Boys and girls approaching maturity deserve the spiritual protection which Christian education provides.

Whenever you approach a school crossing, slow down! But, just don't think safety — think CHRISTIANITY.

Job Placement Of BSU Graduates High

At Bemidji State University, an institution once known strictly as a teachers' college, successful placement of nearly all teaching graduates is still a reality. In fact the placement success for teaching candidates has remained slightly higher than the average for non-teaching graduates the past five years.

Last year 92.5 per cent of BSU's teaching graduates (those completing academic work in 1978-79), either accepted teaching positions, chose to pursue graduate school or an alternative career, or otherwise inactivated their placement file for personal reasons. In 1977-78, the successful placement percentage at Bemidji State was 90.5, with the three years previous falling in the 86 percentile.

"We are currently in the process of locating our most recent graduates, but expect our success ratio to be close to last year," explained Dr. Richard Haugo, director of the placement services office on campus.

"The 1978-79 figures reflect the highest satisfactory placement of teachers we've seen for many years. And in spite of a decline in public school enrollment, we anticipate placement of teachers to continue to be high for a number of years. Providing adequate information to the incoming student, advising prospective teachers during their university career, and maintaining up-to-date vacancy listings, are a few of the steps we are taking to insure this future."

Supply and demand trends have fluctuated over the past 10 years, however, according to Haugo's statistics. Minnesota public schools listed 2,952 vacancies with BSU's placement office in 1972-73, while the number of newly certified teachers on campus was 610. In 1978-79, 5,417 vacancy notices were received and 293 education students received their degrees. The 57 per cent decline in the production of new teachers between 1972-78 at Bemidji state is parallel to the statewide decline of the same percentage, according to Minnesota institutional teacher placement association reports.

Part of the success behind Bemidji state's stable placement rate, BSU professional education department chairman James Tillman, believes, is due to the type of student graduating in recent years.

"We can say our placement is continually good for a number of reasons, but a lot of it is the high caliber of students we attract in the first place. They want to work, they are dedicated to their job, and they are willing to take jobs in small towns — something that can be a determining factor in itself. I feel we are graduating the type of person who fits well into the climate of teaching in today's classroom. When I am asked if this is still a viable profession to consider by prospective students and their parents, I simply tell them that if they really want to teach, there will be a place for them."

But not all students who complete their teaching certification are prepared to open their files to all available vacancies, a situation that partially accounts for the 7.5 per cent who were not placed in teaching positions last year.

"It is significant when considering the supply of candidates to weigh certain personally limiting factors," Haugo said. "First of all, not all people who are prepared to teach choose to teach. Perhaps there are family considerations, but whatever the reason, they cannot be considered as available.

"Secondly, the most serious self-imposed limitation for years has been geographical immobility. In some cases a person wishes only to apply for positions in a certain community or region. If there are no vacancies, naturally he or she will not be hired.

'A third major form of decisive criteria is salary. In those fields where there is the greatest teacher shortage — for example industrial arts or science — a graduate often has greater financial opportunity with business and industry than in education. The average BSU technology graduate, for instance, was met last year with an average starting salary of $17,880 in the private sector, as compared to an average starting teacher salary of $10,500," Haugo added.

A student's choice of teaching emphasis areas also is a factor in his or her employability. Mathematics, science, industrial arts and English are a few of the subjects currently sharing teacher shortages state-wide. "In addition, there is a serious shortage of teachers who are prepared in more than one subject, so as to accommodate the needs of smaller schools in Minnesota," Haugo commented.

Advising students of these trends and opportunities is a part of the placement office and education department's job on campus — one the faculty and staff say they take seriously. "I am personally concerned that students who look forward to a teaching career do not become discouraged by misinformation. Based on our experience thus far, I would not discourage students from pursuing such a profession, but I would strongly recommend they plan programs early in their college career that will eventually open the greatest number of doors."

QUICK BEAUTY TIPS
from the Revlon Beauty School

How To Win, Hands Down!

Women with beautiful hands tend to display them with eye-catching jewelry and graceful gestures. Years ago hands were an indication of status: women proudly flaunted the soft, smooth hands that bespoke a life of leisure. Today, though idleness is no longer admired, beautiful hands still are.

You've got to hand it to women with beautiful hands!

When you immerse your hands in water or handle abrasives or detergents, always wear rubber gloves.

Cultivate strong, healthy nails (it's not as hard as you may think) with Revlon's extra strong base coat. Then flourish them with rich-colored nail enamels like "RED, YOUR WAY" from the Polished Amber group of dazzling red shades for black and dark-skinned women.

Smooth on hand lotion in the morning and at night, after every bath or swim. Keep your hand lotion handy — in the kitchen, bathroom and in your desk.

To Use Sulphur As Extender On Road Contract

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) will be testing sulfur-extended asphalt as a means of reducing costs and extending the supply of asphalt, Mn-DOT Commissioner Richard P. Braun said.

Liquid sulfur mixed with asphalt will be used in resurfacing 8.6 miles of southbound 169 between Princeton and Milaca. The 8.6 mile project is expected to begin September 8, 1980.

Three different test sections are included in the project area: one mile with 40 per cent sulfur and 60 per cent asphalt to bind the bituminous mixture, another mile with a 30 to 70 ratio and 6.6 miles with a 20 to 80 ratio. Remaining mile, containing only asphalt in the bituminous mixture, will serve as a control section.

When the price of sulfur is less than one-half the cost of asphalt cement, it becomes economical to use sulfur as an extender. This is because twice as much sulfur is needed to make up the same volume because it is twice as heavy, Braun said. Using sulfur-extended asphalt could possibly prove to be cost effective as early as the next construction season.

Federal highway administration is providing $10,000 toward construction costs and about $9,000 for project evaluation. NDH, Inc., Anoka, was awarded the project contract at a cost of $494,216.

31% Pay Hike Requested For 'U' M Faculty

University of Minnesota president C. Peter Magrath has asked the board of regents to include a 31 per cent faculty salary increase in its budget request to the legislature for 1981-83.

The request, if approved, would mean a 17 per cent faculty salary increase in the first year of the biennium and a 14 per cent increase in the second. The proposed salary hike would add $72 million to the university's total request for operating money.

"In no way would this request recoup the losses in purchasing power the faculty has suffered over the past several years," Magrath told the board. "It may sound like a lot. It's not a lot in terms of the faculty's needs."

The faculty governance group had called for a 49 per cent pay increase over the next two years, which would have increased the total request by $105 million.

Magrath said that despite the general negative impact of inflation on salaries in all occupations, both national and state figures show that "faculty members at colleges and universities have been hurt the most."

In Minnesota, Magrath said, the impact of inflation on faculty salaries "is in most cases worse than on other occupational groups."

Magrath gave the warning he has made repeatedly in the past few months that the faculty salary problem could have devastating effects on quality of education in the future.

Promising faculty members are being lured away to other more lucrative occupations and fewer students are training for faculty positions because of little promise of economic well-being, he said.

University officials met with legislators last month to describe the faculty salary problem, but no amounts were recommended at that time. After making his recommendations today, Magrath was asked if he thought the proposed figures would "shock" legislators.

"In view of the shocking impact of inflation, together with the data we have presented them, I don't think they'll be shocked by this request," he said.

Regents will vote on the salary request at their September meeting, when they will also vote on a proposed $100.8 million capital request. The capital request consists mostly of items that were presented to the legislature last time around but were not dealt with.

The dollar amounts on items not acted on during the last session will be increased about 12 per cent because of inflation, Magrath said.

Regents also voted to ratify the first five years of a new state-negotiated 10-year reciprocity pact with Wisconsin. Among other things, the reciprocity agreement allows students from Wisconsin to attend schools in Minnesota without paying nonresident tuition and vice versa.

Under the old agreement, however, Minnesota had to pay Wisconsin the difference between resident and nonresident rates since Wisconsin's rate was much higher. Under the new agreement, reimbursement will be made according to the relative cost of educating a student. It is expected that the new agreement will save Minnesota $5.1 million a year.

During the meeting, the regents spoke to members of the concert band delegation in Hong Kong through an amplified telephone hook-up. The 53-member band has been in China since June 25.

Band director Frank Bencriscutto told the regents that their Chinese hosts are anxious to arrange musical exchanges with the university's school of music.

The university band is the first foreign concert band to visit China, and the Chinese ministry of culture is calling the band the best received group in the ministry's history, Bencriscutto said.

The band spent 14 days in China, giving eight concerts in five cities, and received standing ovations from enthusiastic Chinese audiences, according to Russ Tall, director of university relations.

The U.S. produced 17.1 million tons of red meat in 1979. That was 22 per cent of world output and 50 per cent above that of the USSR.

Friendships Can Curb Drug Abuse

by Alice Tibbetts
"U" M News Service

Children between the ages of 12 and 17 are abusing drugs in greater numbers than ever before. According to a recent survey by the U.S. department of health and human services, experiementation with marijuana and cocaine by this age group has doubled in the last 10 years.

Until recently, prevention programs treated drug abuse as psychological pathology or as a problem that could be controlled by fear of the effects of the drug or by punishment, says David W. Johnson, a professor of psychological foundations of education at the University of Minnesota. Johnson's research, however, suggests that prevention of drug abuse may be achieved simply by allowing children to develop healthy, supportive friendships with their classmates.

"Children who abuse drugs are likely to come from families where they experience a high amount of stress, abuse and indifference," Johnson said. "These children are also likely to have a hard time making friends in school and tend to be withdrawn and lonely.

"When they do make friends, isolated children are strongly influenced by them in whether they will abuse drugs. Thus, allowing children to form healthy, constructive friendships is important," Johnson said.

Highest level of youthful drug abuse occurs in junior high school, Johnson said. "When kids first enter junior high, certain kids just don't make friends. Then at about the middle of eighth grade, they join other alienated kids and become a group of drug users."

The change in the type of schooling, the bigger school and the onset of adolescence cause stress that makes adjustment difficult for many kids, Johnson said. It is at this time that peer relationships become the most important, Johnson said. "Drug abuse could be prevented if the students have a way to enter peer friendships when they first get to junior high. With borderline kids, the group they end up in will determine whether they use drugs."

Johnson has worked with about 25 school districts throughout the country, including St. Paul and suburban schools, training teachers to develop cooperative learning programs.

"Today kids in school sit alone and don't interact," Johnson stated. "They listen only to the teacher. Consequently the isolated, lonely kids stay isolated." Johnson recommends that students be assigned in groups of four to solve problems in class. One high-risk student would work with three motivated students, for example.

"We are concerned with more than generating friendships," Johnson said. "Working alone does not promote personal responsibility. It prevents kids from developing the necessary relationships to work for themselves and for the benefit of the group." Working in cooperative groups also raises scholastic achievement, Johnson added.

Teaching children how to socialize through the schools is a much easier task than tackling the family's problems, Johnson commented. Family problems are much tougher to solve because the solution often lies in one-to-one counseling, which can be prohibitively expensive.

"Parents are also less cooperative with schools today than they were 20 years ago," Johnson said. "Parents seem to be too busy to deal with the problems and they often don't respect the school. By the time the kids get to be teenagers there are limits to what a parent can do anyway," Johnson added. Teachers, on the other hand, are very receptive because "they know, whether they like it or not, they have to deal with the kids."

"What happens in the classroom is very important in changing a potential drug abuser's behavior," Johnson said. "We have overemphasized the importance of adult-child relationships and underemphasized the importance of friendships. Everyone needs to know that others care and are committed to you. It doesn't have to be a parent or an adult. It can be a friend or a brother or sister. Good peer relationships can balance a bad family life."

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Behind practically every successful American business enterprise, it seems, is a tale of men that survive and succeed despite seemingly insurmountable odds. So it is with the story of "Mr. Coffee," the man responsible for its creation, and its overwhelming success as a new kind of home appliance.

Mr. Joe DiMaggio and Mr. Vincent Marotta, the men behind the success of the Mr. Coffee machine.

Vincent G. Marotta, of Cleveland, Ohio, manufacturer, businessman, and inventor of the "Mr. Coffee" machine teamed up seven years ago with the legendary "Joltin' Joe" DiMaggio, the man known to millions as one of the greatest baseball players of all time.

The "Mr. Coffee" machine, invented and perfected between 1969 and 1971, was first introduced at the Chicago Housewares Show. After dramatically successful test marketing in the Chicago area, Marotta was inundated by orders from major retail outlets all across the country. The test response clearly indicated that the product had the potential to be a tremendous success. But Marotta was cautioned by experts that competing in a market long dominated by giant home appliance manufacturers who would undoubtedly follow his lead with imitations would probably be an effort in futility.

He could have quit there, but Marotta had faith that his product, which he had patented, could be a success. What was needed was a way to convince the American consumer of the quality and integrity of the product.

Marotta determined that a readily identifiable celebrity, in the role of company spokesman, could achieve this goal. In his search for just the right man, Marotta looked to the world of sports and there he found Joe DiMaggio. A former professional baseball player himself, Marotta contacted DiMaggio personally and told him what he had in mind.

DiMaggio was interested in the product, as he had just won a "Mr. Coffee" machine in a golf tournament.

Today, Marotta's coffee maker is the dominant brand on the market, not only because of its quality and reliability, but also because it has the word of "Joltin' Joe" DiMaggio, an American hero, behind it.

This story appears to exemplify the unlimited potential of an idea in America. Somewhere, at this very moment, you can be sure that there is another success story in the making.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Engen visited Julia Rambeck at the Northwestern hospital on Thursday.

Mange Major Skin Problem For Some Pets

by Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.

Mange is a form of skin irritation caused by small eight-legged creatures called mites. The two common types of mange in cats and dogs are demodectic mange or "red mange" and sarcoptic mange or scabies.

Pets usually develop mite infestations when their resistance is low. Poor diet, intestinal worms, even stress caused by rapid growth in young animals, allow mange mites to establish a colony under the skin. A well-nourished pet, free from intestinal worms, can better resist attacks from mites and other external parasites.

Red mange is more difficult to treat because the mites live in the follicles — deep, narrow passages where individual hairs emerge from the skin. As the young mites develop, they absorb nutrient material from the blood and cause individual hairs to drop out. Infected cats and dogs typically show bald spots under the eyes, on the forehead and on the front legs. The skin reddens, and may thicken and wrinkle, thus the name "red mange".

At one time, red mange was almost impossible to control in puppies and kittens. Some infected animals were even destroyed to prevent the mange from spreading through kennels and catteries. Today, modern oil-based ointments are reasonably effective in penetrating the skin follicles and eliminating these mites.

Sarcoptic mange is identified by an itchy, scaly skin condition not seen in red mange. Short red raised lines indicate where the female mites have tunneled under the skin to lay their eggs. Scabs caused by the pet's scratching are also common, hence the term scabies.

Sarcoptic mange also causes hair loss in cats and dogs, sometimes almost to the point of baldness. It spreads more rapidly than demodectic mange, and imparts a characteristic musky odor to the pet's fur.

Treatment for scabies includes repeated applications of a sulphur-containing ointment or other insecticide. A veterinarian's assistance in selecting the proper insecticide is important. Some products are toxic for cats. Other preparations must be thoroughly rubbed into the skin to reach the parasites. It is recommended that a veterinarian be consulted.

Strict sanitary procedures are necessary when dealing with mange. Bedding used for a mange-infected animal must be changed regularly until the infection is completely gone. Pregnant females should be examined and treated for mites so the parasites will not be transferred to newborn offspring. Dog breeders should be certain that their adult dogs are free of infestation before mating is attempted.

Money Market Holdings Grow In Minnesota

Holdings in money market funds by Minnesota residents jumped 59 per cent in the first six months of this year, the Investment Company Institute reports. Minnesota shareholders now have well over a billion dollars invested in money market funds.

The institute, the national association of mutual funds, says Minnesota shareholdings in these funds totaled $1.3 billion at the beginning of July. On January 1, they were $820 million.

In these six months, the number of shareholders in Minnesota rose 54 per cent. Shareholder accounts totaled 67,000 at mid-year compared with 43,500 in January.

For the United States as a whole money market fund assets went up from $45.5 billion to $76.2 billion in the first six months of this year. The number of shareholder accounts rose to 3.8 million from 2.4 million.

"The extraordinary growth of money market funds has introduced an entirely new group of people to investing. These mutual funds have a special appeal to those who want extra income to help offset inflation but have only relatively small amounts to invest," states David Silver, president of the institute.

"The growth during the first half year was achieved despite reserve requirements placed on the funds by the federal reserve board from the middle of March which had the effect of reducing yields below what they would otherwise have been," Silver added.

"Those restrictions have now been removed so that people with moderate means can again get the highest rates of return available in the money market consistent with great safety."

Mn. Lung Ass'n. Compares Men, Women Smokers

More and more millions of women are pouring into the workforce. Whether or not they smoke at work varies according to their on-the-job responsibilities, says the Minnesota Lung association.

There's a slightly higher rate of smoking among women in so-called blue collar jobs (39 per cent) compared to women professionals, technicians, teachers, and other groups (34 per cent). For men, the difference between these two groups is much more dramatic. With men, more than 54 per cent of blue collar workers smoke, while only 38 per cent of white collar types are smokers.

Recent surveys show that as family income goes up, the rate of smoking among men declines. However, exactly the opposite is true for women. And women who work outside the home are more likely to smoke than housewives and women in households with low family income, according to the state lung association.

Only a small percentage of women, about 6 per cent, have advanced to managerial and administrative levels, while 14 per cent of men are in such positions. For both men and women managers, though, smoking rates are high, more than 40 per cent. These rates are higher than average rates for all men and women, says the lung association. At the opposite end of the scale, women and men called laborers have very high rates of smoking that are just about equal; both are more than 50 per cent.

Among health professionals, women physicians and psychologists smoke more heavily than their male counterparts. Nurses have a much higher rate of smoking than women of the same age in the general population.

More than one-third of all women workers are employed in clerical positions, while only 6 per cent of men are employed in these jobs. Smoking among women who are clerical workers is 34 per cent; smoking among male clericals is higher at 40 per cent.

Occupational exposure can have just as hazardous effects on women smokers as on men who smoke. In one study of women workers who were exposed to asbestos on the job, women who smoked and were heavily exposed had a risk of developing lung cancer over 30 times that of non-exposed nonsmoking women. Women smokers exposed to cotton dust in the workplace showed much higher risks of developing long-term lung disease than women nonsmokers on the job.

In all occupations, among women who smoke, the rate of job absenteeism is 45 per cent higher than for nonsmoking women workers.

Many women who want to work and also protect their own health are forced to inhale smoky air on the job. When workers are forced to breathe air permeated with smoke for years, an imbalance can develop in the small airways of their lungs, says the Minnesota Lung Association. Research has not yet proven just how serious this effect might be. But this symptom is often involved in the beginning of serious lung disease.

According to the lung association, women who work at companies where there are separate sections for nonsmokers and smokers — or better yet, where smoking is not permitted at all — have the best working environments, in terms of smoke-free air for their lungs. And a recent government survey showed that the overwhelming majority of Americans feel that companies have the right to prohibit smoking at work.

More American workers, women as well as men — at all occupational levels — want to work in smoke-free environments, says the lung association. Because it's a matter of life and breath.

Several Plants Cause Hikers Skin Problems

If you're planning a walk through the woods to enjoy the autumn foliage, here's a reminder from National Wildlife magazine that the familiar three-leafed poison ivy vine isn't the only irritating plant to avoid.

The National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication warns hikers to keep their eyes open for these other plants that cause rashes and skin irritations.

Poison Oak: Similar in appearance and effect to poison ivy, this erect shrub of dry, sandy coastal woods has three leaflets which are distinctively lobed.

Poison Sumac: Still another relative, this large shrub or small tree bears drooping clusters of small ivory-colored fruits and shouldn't be confused with harmless red-fruited sumacs. The poison variety prefers a swampy environment.

Celandine: This plant's deep yellow flowers invite picking, but the bright orange juice that drips from the broken stems can cause an irritating skin inflammation.

Lady-slipper: One of the nation's most handsome native orchids, the regal showy lady-slipper inhabits northern bogs. Handling the plant can result in an affliction resembling poison ivy rash. Unfortunately, this unpleasant property has not kept it from being picked to near extinction in some areas.

Nettle: This plant makes bare-legged hiking an ordeal, for its entire stem and leaves bristle with spiny-tipped hollow hairs which contain a variety of histamines and other proteins. Brushing against a nettle causes these hairs to penetrate the skin where they break off and release the fluid. Immediately, the affected area stings and itches fiercely. The sensation lasts only a few minutes, and an application of juice from the jewelweed usually relieves the itching.

Manchineel: One of the most notorious U.S. plants is this small tree of southern Florida and the Keys. Its sap causes severe blistering after contact and the crab-apple-like fruit is extremely poisonous when eaten.

"Symptoms of external poisoning vary with a person's sensitivity and with the species of plant," explains National Wildlife. But by recognizing potentially hazardous plants, hikers can avoid unpleasant encounters.

Sial 1980: World's Fair Of Food

SIAL '80, HOST TO FOOD WORLD ... A display of 30,000 products will attract almost 100,000 food professionals to Paris for the week of Nov. 17.

Mark your calendar to spend a week in Paris, Nov. 17 to 22. The ninth meeting of SIAL (Salon International de l'Alimentation) will be in session at the Porte de Versailles exhibition hall. Every two years, what is known as the crossroads of today's food world opens its doors to more than 100,000 visitors. International food professionals consider SIAL their No. 1 meeting place—to discover new products, new packaging, new techniques.

Every SIAL is bigger than the last. This year 42 countries (including the U.S.) will have their own pavilions—25 percent more representation than in 1978. In addition, of course, France's ultra-modern food industry will be on display—at 632 stands devoted to dairy products, biscuits, meats and poultry, fruits and vegetables, incomparable regional specialities, frozen foods, wines, beers and spirits, etc. It is estimated that a grand total of 30,000 products will be on view.

American food professionals—supermarket executives, distributors, retailers, restaurateurs—will find a wealth of new products and new ideas. And no language barrier to worry about ... SIAL maintains a large bi-lingual and tri-lingual staff hostesses to help you exchange ideas and make business contacts.

At a time when changes are rapidly taking place both in the food and economic situations, SIAL is undoubtedly a major event for a trade with a key role in the world economy.

The up-to-date food professional will find that attendance at SIAL will not only realize more profits but also afford a glimpse into the future of the world-wide food industry. To make sure you are in step with the food world of tomorrow, write for information about SIAL to Food and Wines from France, 1350 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Another Boondoggle

Publisher John Pfund of the Norman County Index at Ada points out a pertinent problem in a situation which recently occurred in California. This is what Pfund writes:

It's hard to believe to what extent some governmental units are willing to throw away taxpayers' money just because they don't know how to relate job descriptions and salaries to reality. A major reason, we believe, is because too many of the governmental supervisors have no experience in private business or in having to meet a payroll. Just recently, 2,000 people showed up for only 12 jobs as beginning car-washers in Santa Clara County, California, just a few miles south of San Francisco. The turnout gave county officials a big headache although the transit agency director found a simplistic solution: "We may have to hire more interviewers." Why the flood of applicants? In private firms throughout the area, experienced car-washers earn between $3.50 and $4.50 an hour. But the county was offering a starting wage of $8.41 an hour, with a raise to $9.56 in three years. It's no wonder the agency was almost mobbed. The job, officially known as "utility person", involves cleaning and sweeping out the county's fleet of 250 buses. The only requirements of the job were that a person be 18 years of age or over and possess a valid driver's license. Applicants didn't even have to know one end of the bus from another. When government sets such high wage scales, it puts the whole economy out of gear. If car-washers are paid in excess of $350 a week, what is the county going to pay a trained typist or bookkeeper? When pay levels for the entry level jobs get so high, then there is no way the county can pay a proportionately fair wage to its skilled employees.

The Onederful Werld Ov Wirds

The following poem by T. S. Watt appeared in the Manchester Guardian:

I take it you already know
Of TOUGH and BOUGH and COUGH, and DOUGH.
Others may stumble but not you,
On HICCOUGH, THOROUGH, LOUGH and THROUGH.

Well done! And now you wish, perhaps,
To learn of less familiar traps.

Beware of HEARD, a dreadful WORD,
That looks like BEARD and sounds like BIRD.
And DEAD—it's SAID like BED, not BEAD—
For goodness sake, don't call it DEED!

Watch out for MEAT and GREAT and THREAT;
They rhyme with Suite and STRAIGHT and DEBT.
A MOTH is not a MOTH in MOTHER
Nor BOTH in BOTHER, BROTH in BROTHER.

And HERE is not a match for THERE,
Nor DEAR and FEAR for PEAR and BEAR.

And then there's DOSE and ROSE and LOSE—
Just look them up — and GOOSE and CHOOSE,
And CORK and WORK and CARD and WARD,
And FONT and FRONT and WORD and SWORD,
And DO and GO, then THWART and CART. . .
Come, come, I've hardly made a start.

A dreadful language? Man alive!
I'd master it when I was five!

Endangered Species

Following was written by George Mair in the Los Angeles Times:

The dusky seaside sparrow, black-footed ferret, clay-loving phacelia and congressional courage all have one thing in common — they are endangered species.

A small group of irritated Americans in Washington has formed Americans Against Iran, and they intend to put on public demonstrations against both the Iranians and the namby-pamby way our government has dealt with the Iranians.

However, Mark James, head of the group, reports that the White House's legal counsel called him to say that the Carter people didn't want any anti-Iranian demonstrations in front of the White House.

The thing that puzzles Mark is why the anti-American Iranians are treated better than American citizens. The answer is that the law gives visitors to our shores the same rights as the rest of us.

Congress can change that if it wants to, but apparently it hasn't got the guts to do it. Congress is the most powerful branch of government and it was designed to be the most responsive to public opinion. Yet, it chooses to be the weakest of the three branches of government by passing the buck to either the executive branch or the courts.

The Constitution says, in most instances, Congress can decide what cases the Supreme Court may hear and, if course, the Congress hold the purse strings for all three branches.

Our diplomats in Iran have been hostage for over nine months. During that time, Congress could have stripped foreign visitors from any country holding Americans hostage of their special privileges.

It could have, but it hasn't because it hates to take a firm stand on anything as long as it can pass the buck to somebody else.

So, you may think the snail darter, the birdwing pearly mussle or the condor were rare creatures, but you ain't seen nothing until you start looking for the stiff-backboned decisive American congressman.

It's Probably Fattening!

Following is from the Iowa Farm Bureau publication:

The humorous card reads, "Everything I like is either illegal, immoral or fattening." It's also probably dangerous. It wasn't long ago doctors were reporting that charcoal-broiled meat might cause cancer. More recently the safety of hotdogs, bacon and bologna was questioned.

But if we can't eat, at least there are other enjoyments for a person to experience. Take piano playing . . . wait . . . better not. You could develop Carpel Tunnel Syndrome, which, according to Dr. Joel Rosen, is a soreness, tenderness, weakness and pain in the wrist and fingers caused by heavy piano practice.

Perhaps you should just listen to the music. But, that could be dangerous too. Loud sounds might make you dizzy, raise your blood pressure, damage your heart plus lots of other things, say scientists at the University of Illinois Chicago Circle Campus.

Maybe you enjoy a peaceful trip to the woods to spot various feathered friends. But, if you want to be safe, you can't do that either. Birdwatching has been classified as a "hazardous hobby" by the British medical magazine "The Practitioner." It reported a story about a birdwatcher who was so enthralled in his sport that he was eaten by a crocodile.

Bicycling isn't my favorite activity. And that's a good thing. A bike-riding Boston doctor cautions fellow peddlers that "cyclist's palsy," a hand disorder caused by too much pressure in the ulnar nerve of the palms, can be caused by hanging too tightly onto low-slung racing handlebars.

Maybe we ought to just sit down and enjoy reading a book or magazine. But there are even hazards there. Your eyes may start losing their focus and your hands and fingers may become fatigued, even cramped.

There is probably one way to enjoy yourself. Give up reading . . . at least reading about the dangers of everyday activities. Sometimes ignorance is bliss.

Interesting Opinions:

"The trouble is not in our institutions, imperfect as they doubtless are. The crying necessity for reform springs from the fact that while our institutions are representative theoretically, our public officials are not so, actually."
—Fulton McMahon

"A good teacher is someone who can understand those not very good at explaining and explain it to those not very good at understanding."
—W. H. Palmer

"People who want to understand democracy should spend less time in the library and more time on the buses and in the subway."
—Simeon Strunsky

"It is hard to believe that a man is telling the truth when you know that you would lie if you were in his place."
—H. L. Mencken

"It is rascally to steal a purse, daring to steal a million and a proof of greatness to steal a crown. The blame diminishes as the guilt increases."
—J. C. F. Schiller

Stamp out forest fires.

It doesn't take much to start a forest fire. A cigarette ember nestled in some leaves. A match that's not completely cooled. Or a campfire cinder that has made its way into the brush. That's all it takes to destroy millions of acres, and thousands of living creatures.

It doesn't take much to prevent forest fires either. Making sure your cigarette or match is absolutely lifeless, and that your campfire has been doused with water, and covered with soil.

Carelessness with fire affects all of us who love the forest. And we think it's about time we all put our foot down.

your prescription and you

By Sue Boe, Assistant Vice President, Consumer Affairs, Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association

Boe

Q. What questions should I ask my doctor about the medicine he prescribes for me?

A. When your doctor gives you a prescription, you'll probably be told some things without having to ask. But to be fully informed, you should know the answers to these questions:

- What IS the medicine (type and name)?
- What results are expected from it?
- How long should you wait before reporting if there are no changes in your symptoms?
- What side effects are expected — if any — and what ones should you report?
- Are there any cautions? Any foods or beverages (such as alcohol) you should avoid while taking the medicine? Other medicines you should not take? Will your ability to drive or operate machinery be affected?
- Exactly when and how should you take the medicine?
- How long should you continue to take it?
- Can the prescription be refilled? If it can, should you check with the doctor before having it refilled?
- Has a manufacturer been specified — one your doctor is confident produces a reliable quality product that may cost less?

Modern medicines can help keep you well or restore you to good health with more certainty, more safety, and more true savings than ever before—provided you know the facts about them and use them wisely.

THEN and NOW!

During our country's infancy, farming was the backbone of survival. Each family unit had to rely almost entirely on itself for food, clothing and shelter. As the Westward movement grew during the 1800's, towns and cities developed. The railroads expanded and made it easier to transport food. However, good choices were limited—the season was wrong, or food was perishable, or refrigerated storage was lacking. Thus, most people still relied on what they grew, or what was grown in their immediate area.

Today there is a supermarket in nearly every neighborhood. We no longer limit our diets to locally grown, seasonal foods. Our eating habits have changed. No longer do we exist solely on meat and potatoes. Health-conscious people look for foods with a balance of nutrients . . . low in fats and calories, but still appetizing. The key word is fresh—especially fresh fruits and fresh vegetables. Companies like Castle & Cooke, the country's leading fresh food supplier, make it possible year-round for consumers in most parts of the world to enjoy foods like Bud of California lettuce from the Southwest, Dole bananas from the tropics, Dole pineapple from the Hawaiian Islands, and Bumble Bee salmon from the frigid seas near Alaska.

Castle & Cooke is telling its stockholders to expect further changes in food trends—both at the farm and at the supermarket.

One of these consumer trends could be the ability to shop from the comfort of your home. Advanced technology would tie in the family's health and diet requirements with meal planning, and provide computer printed menus plus shopping lists displayed on your television set—all in a matter of seconds. According to researchers, shoppers would scan the supermarket selections and special offerings, then choose purchases using computer-based terminals hooked up to a two-way interactive television set. At the grocery store end, the order would then be automatically retrieved from the shelves, packed and ready for pick-up at sophisticated drive-in-markets.

The "HOW TO MULTIPLY YOUR BABY'S INTELLIGENCE" course will be offered by the Better Baby Institute of The Institutes For The Achievement Of Human Potential in Chestnut Hill, Pa. during the weeks of September 7-13 or November 9-15, 1980.

Glenn Doman, leading child braindevelopmentalist and author of many international best sellers on child growth and development, will head the seven day program of lectures and demonstrations.

The course, which has taught parents from around the world, will cover such topics as "How To Teach Your Baby Math And Reading," "How To Make Your Baby Physically Excellent," and "Providing Your Baby Good Nutrition." Parents who are using the Institute's program will demonstrate, with their children, the methods that have enabled their children to learn how to read, play the violin, perform gymnastics, and speak several languages at such an early age.

The Institute's program is backed by 40 years of worldwide experience in child development and has been used successfully by parents to achieve intellectual, social, and physical excellence in their children.
